A general meeting of the Subscribers was held in the Dispensary, on Thursday, 1st March, 1900.

In the absence of the President, Mr. Simpson, Hon. Treasurer, was voted into the chair.

The Notice summoning the Meeting having been read, the following resolutions were adopted:—

- II. The gentlemen whose names appear on the list attached hereto were appointed the Committee of Management for the current year.
- III. Mr. Walter W. Druce was re-appointed President for the current year.
- IV. Mr. David G. Simpson was re-appointed Honorary Treasurer for the current year.
- V. Messrs. Ebenezer Carr & Co., Accountants, were re-appointed Auditors for the current year.

Cordial Votes of Thanks were passed to the Medical Officers, and to Mr. Lewis, the Secretary, and other members of the Staff.

A Vote of Thanks to the Chairman having been given, the proceedings terminated.

THIRTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

THE Committee of the Camberwell Provident Dispensary in presenting their 37th Annual Report (1899), have pleasure in recording the continued prosperity of the Institution.

During the past year the duty of meeting the wants of those who are not able to avail themselves of ordinary professional attendance, and who come within the scope of the Dispensary, has been prominently brought before the inhabitants of Camberwell and its neighbourhood, and it is gratifying to be able to report an increasing interest in the work.

The number of cards of membership issued during the year was 4,445, representing 11,306 benefitted members registered in the books.

The returns furnished by the Medical Officers show during the year—

- 9,129 cases of illness were under treatment.
- 16,278 visits were made by them to patients at their own homes.
- 26,977 consultations were held by them at the Dispensary.
- 12,681 consultations at their Surgeries (for the convenience of those unable to attend at Dispensary hours).
- 235 married women were attended in their confinements, and
- 783 operations were performed by the Dentist.

The total number of attendances at the Dispensary for advice and medicine was 101,585.

The number of Honorary Subscribers and Donors during the year was 210, and the amount (£294 2s. 6d.) includes a Special Donation of Ten Guineas from Robert W. Edwards, Esq., and a Legacy of Five Pounds bequeathed by the late Miss Alice Benecke.

51 New Subscribers and Donors have been enrolled, while the names of 13 have lapsed through removals, deaths, or other causes.

The Committee again thank the Rev. S. F. Bridge for another moiety of collection at St. Paul's, Herne Hill, also the Council of the Hospital Sunday Fund for an increased grant.

The periodical contributions of the benefitted members amount to £1422 3s. 7½d., showing a slight apparent diminution as compared with the previous year. This is consequent upon the lists having been closed promptly at the end of the year, without extension of time. The contributions for the two weeks so excluded will appear in the accounts of the current year.

It will be noticed from a perusal of the Accounts, that £202 has been invested during the year. This investment was fortunately able to be made at a favourable time. The Committee would, however, wish to draw special attention to the absence of any abnormal amount of illness, and to the fact that at the beginning of the year, the Balance in the hands of the Treasurer was £192 13s. 2½d., while the amount carried forward to the current year only amounts to £74 19s. 4½d. It is hoped that considering the many contingencies to which this and other charitable Institutions are exposed, especially at the present time, that due efficiency in extending the benefits of the Dispensary may be encouraged by a still further increase in the number of contributors.

The Rev. H. S. Swithinbank and the Rev. A. Lucey, owing to their removal to other Parishes, and the Rev. A. Wysard, from the pressure of other engagements, have had to resign their positions as Vice-Presidents and members of the Committee. The Committee, in regretfully accepting those resignations, have appointed the Rev. J. H. Haslam, M.A., Vicar of St. Saviour's Church, Denmark Park, and the Rev. F. D. Vaughan, M.A., Vicar of Emmanuel Church, with W. Downs, Esq., of Springfield Lodge, Grove Hill Road, to fill the vacancies thus created.

In conclusion, the Committee desire to thank the Auditors, and the Medical and other Officers for the satisfactory performance of their respective duties.

altho' the members supply 3/4 of the income, they have no voice in the management, & not a single representation on the Committee. Another 1/4 a month from each member w^d make it entirely self-sufficient, & yet it has all the sadging air of a charitable institution!

(District 43) ^{Miscell}
H9 ①
Mr E. M. Falkner. 41 Hendryage Road
East Dulwich.

GWA. Dec. 12/1900

Mr Falkner is a stout cheery old man of 60 to 70. Plentiful grey hair and thick grey mustache. A painter by trade he is now in business as a jobbing builder and has a shop here used for the business. He suffers from bronchitis & probably the business is mainly in the hands of his son. He was born near the Elephant & Castle. Went to West Norwood then known as Lower Norwood in 1858, & came to Dulwich 30 years ago when the district was being opened up.

At that time a field path ran from the Plough, Lordship Lane to Beckham Rye, the footway on south side of Barry Road being the exact line. The Crystal Palace Rd was laid out ~~but~~ & had been for many years. It was called Harris's Road. Grass grew along it & it was only a foot path to Goose green. A few houses were built near the

The Goose Green end and with a few old houses² were the only building in East Dulwich.

The district east of Crystal Palace Road was known as the Friern Manor Farm. Bought by the British Land Company stipulations in the leases prevented the erection of public houses so that from Goose Green to nearly to Wood Vale there are no publichouses.

A similar policy was not observed west of C. P. R^d where development was taking place. Whilst he was at West Norwood the builders there talked of the 'gold mine' meaning East Dulwich. Several of them bought plots and all started by building a publichouse. Some of these have been diverted to other uses. The East Dulwich dispensary at the corner of Sylvester and Sandell's Road was formerly the 'Duke of Edinburgh'

Buildings went on rapidly but the place did not prove a gold mine. Tenants were difficult to obtain and about 1885-87 there were about 2000 houses, which would not let.

(3)

Rents were always low. When he came he had half a house in Crystal Palace Road for which he paid 4/- a week, the other half being let at the same rate. Iron values went down and house property was a drug in the market. Six cottages in Upland Road between Hindman Road & Barry Road came into the hands of a Woolwich Bldg Society. This Society offered them at £40 and at last was obliged to divide them up amongst their members. They have been turned into shops and are worth about £230 each today. The house next door to Mrs F in Hindman Road was offered for £145 but could not be sold. It is now worth £230.

Prices began to jump up about 5 years ago and rents have almost doubled in that time. Houses in Sandelto Road which let for 7/- a week now fetch 13/-.

The people are ^{mostly} all working class; many in the building trade. A few nice people, who have bought plots of ground and had a house built in the Barry Road etc. In the early days the place was like a country village. The people came came together more and knew each other. There was also an absence of publichouses and pawnshops. Now some of the people have gone up in the social scale - succeeded in business and stand aloof from those like Mr F. whom they do not think have done so well. "I never know they if they don't know me" he added.

People are not poorer now than they were. Poverty now is through drunken habits and improvidence. They are not prepared for a hard winter. A few weeks out of work would bring them round asking if there was anything to be given away. Has been no real poverty since the hard winter some years ago.

Mr F. contrasted the condition of the workmen now with that of 40 years ago seeing the result being very unfavourable to the present day worker. In his father's day wages were 24/- a week and 27/- in a 'good' shop. Days were much longer. His father had 27/- and subsequently 30/- as foreman. Workmen always saved something, lived on good plain food and generally had a good Sunday suit.

His father had a good black suit, which was carefully brushed & put away and lasted many years. "He never gave less than a guinea for his hat"

St John's Church, Goose Green was building ⁽⁵⁾ while he was at Norwood. He watched the spire rising. The Church then had a little place at the corner of Lordship Lane.

Barry Road Wesleyan was the first chapel to be built (about 22 years ago) There was however a small chapel in Lordship Lane not far from the spot now occupied by ~~the~~ the Baptist Chapel. In Barry Road people of all denominations flocked and the chapel seems to have reached the zenith under the ministry of Hugh Price Hughes. Becoming more fashionable its influence has waned since. Church of England is working but is hindered by "trying to do work on particular lines and ignoring everybody else". All the churches have lost ground during recent years.

Drink the curse of Dulwich. Not so many drunkards as there were. People drink at home and even the drunkards themselves don't think the people who drink at the publichouse are respectable members of society. The temperance movement is 'flat'.

East Dulwich is now settling down. They have got rid of the rough element. Darrell Road was very rough but is better now. St Austowe Road had a bad moral repute but has been cleared. Generally the district has improved although there have lost some of the richer people, who have ⁶ gone to Streatham &c.

Beckham Rye. has been greatly improved. Before the parish & subsequent the L.C.C. took it in hand the Rye was very rough. Heaps of rubbish shot there - no order and toward the latter time it was infested with bad characters. Now everything is well ordered. At show times it was awful. The stall holders, cocoa nut people used to pitch and take as much ground as they liked. You had to walk some distance round to cross the Rye. Now everything is well ordered.

People from Bermondsey and elsewhere come on Bank Holidays. At Easter the people go to the Rye. They have not saved enough for an excursion; at Whitsuntide they go to the seaside. Crowd is always greater at Easter than Whitsuntide.

Mr F. did not appear to know much about the local government & similar questions. Most of his spare time has been devoted to Mission work. Nearly all the men are in Friendly Societies - exception "the drunkards".

Supplementary Notes on Peckham Rye (E.A.) July 14. 17

With the double object of looking in at S. Antholin's and of correcting any false impression that might have resulted from leaving early on July 8, I went ~~ex~~ over again. This time, I arrived a little after eight and went straight to S. Antholins, the Vicar of which, Mr. Drew, had refused to give an interview. I was just in time for the end of the sermon and the collection. The preacher was ~~anxxxxxxx~~ man of 55 or so, so far as I could judge, and did not give the impression of being a strate. A sidesman afterwards told me that he was a Mr. Hyde (2), who comes on Sundays only, always takes one of the sermons, and holds a kind of preaching curacy. There is no one else on the clerical staff except the Vicar, "but then you see we have the Cheltenham Mission attached close by". Mr. Hyde (3) was adjudged a particularly fine preacher, but the closing sentences that I had heard had not given the impression either of originality or power. But at least the speaker had the saving graces of a quiet manner and a ~~xxxxxxxxxxxx~~ pleasant voice. "The eighty-seventh ~~xx~~ hymn" given out loudly and harshly by Mr. Drew grated horribly, and it was with exactly the same effect that he gave the final Benediction -- ~~in~~ hard, metallic tones mission church of a good type. The clergy were wearing cassocks, but there was nothing in the decorations of the altar to suggest extreme practices of any kind. As I left, I spoke to the Missioner, who proved to be the man that we had seen (⁹⁴⁴⁹ ~~Baxter?~~). The church holds 350, he said, but the congregation had, he said, not been up to average; "so many are drawn away by the band". The people were, he said, "practically all working class". I mentioned the number of young men, and this pleased him, and he agreed that there were an unusually large number. But he is far from satisfied, and we was quite unwilling to acquiesce in my surmise that the "Mission was going well". On the contrary, he thought that it and to a great extent the Church at large was "on the wrong lines"; "we don't really get hold of people". He asked me if I had seen a book called "~~At~~ The heart of the Empire", written mostly by Cambridge House men, (but no part by Baily himself). Masterman and Bray were the names of two contributors that he mentioned, and the work of the Church and the causes of the failure of the Church are discussed. "I am inclined to agree with the opinions they express", said the Missioner, and I think that the book ought to be looked at. The failing to attract the "really poor" is only one of the things that troubles him. He thinks that they are too churchy at the Cheltenham Mission, and mentioned with affection a little Mission-room that he used to have in Cheltenham to which the quite poor found their way. He is, ~~was~~ or has been, one of the masters at Cheltenham, and had much to do with establishing the London Mission. After four and a half years of it, he is on the point of going back to Cheltenham, and the next is his last Sunday. It is not improbable that the "don't forget to-morrow" of the curate refers to some farewell function, for I am sure that they would not let the man that I spoke to go without regret. What a ~~is~~ foil, harsh-voiced and hard-mannered Mr. Drew must make to him in the parish! I think that he is going back to Cheltenham, not exactly disheartened, but to some extent disillusioned. He is a man of fifty or so.

THE RYE:

On and about the Rye I counted some 7 or 8 meetings all, except two small ones near the band-stand, for Christian propaganda. The exceptions were discussing horse-racing and the South African War. One of the meetings was being held outside the Baptist Tabernacle, and this fact, combined with my other experiences this evening, make me think that the minister of this Chapel exaggerated when describing the difficulty of getting along when leaving his ~~xxxxx~~ building on account of the throngs the band collected. The only meeting that I watched at all was one held by the East Dulwich Wesleyan Band. They had a man with a cornet (who led proceedings) and a harmonium. There was a good choir, and, when I was there towards the close, a fair congregation of about ~~xxx~~ 150. They had come on at about 8.15, and left off at about 9.45, and gave the impression of being a successful mission band.

People were leaving the Rye in large numbers as I came to the Band-stand, and "God save the King" followed almost at once. I went straight to the enclosure and found a member of the Band Committee.

He told me that the chairs in the enclosure numbered 1500, and that on fine evenings they were generally all taken. Asked as to the size of the crowd taken as a whole he put it 20,000, but, on pressing the point, it did not appear that any careful estimate had ever been made. I told him that I had put it at 10,000 on the Sunday before, and he said that "for some reason" not so many as usual had been present. Not quite all the chairs had been filled, "but I think there were more than 10,000 people here". He turned for an opinion to a fellow-committee-man, but ~~xxxxxxx~~ it was clear that, ~~xxxx~~ ^{although} they both thought that as a general answer 20,000 was a justifiable figure to mention, nobody really knows what the size of the crowd is. One thing was interesting, namely their statement that the maximum is reached by about the third Sunday of the season. "We always notice it". "If I want to see a crowd" I was invited to go next Thursday, when they have a Children's Fete. ^(b-a) The enclosure is handed over to 1500 children, and the parents and others flock outside.

Last night for a quarter of an hour or so after the music stopped a certain amount of noisy play went on in the neighbourhood of the band-stand, the noise invariably coming from boys and girls, or young men and young women. Proceedings generally were very juvenile; there was a good deal of running and squealing; some embracing and kissing; not very much excitement, and so far as I could judge the girls who were run after came for the purpose. Some were absurdly young, both boys and girls, and ought not to have allowed to run loose in this way; others were "grown-up". One of the last, a girl of perhaps 20, with another companion and a couple of young fellows, was caught in the momentary whirl of a bit of the ~~xxxxx~~ crowd; seized by a man and roughly embraced and kissed. No sooner was she released than another fellow, apparently thinking that she was fair game, repeated the process, and then hot, flushed but hardly disconcerted, she rejoined her proper companions, with, apparently, some words of protest on her lips. "You shouldn't be so damned saucy" was the answer that I caught from her swain, and he seemed to have taken proceedings with a kind of grumpy calmness. But he had hit off the situation: Damned sauciness on the one side; responsive rudeness on the other.

The more serious question was what was the real character of the Rye in the growing darkness. People were dotted about everywhere, occasionally in ~~groups~~ little groups of friends of both sexes; sometimes two or three boys or young men together, but in the vast majority of cases, couples. In the ~~xxx~~ main I feel convinced that the Rye on a Sunday evening up till about 10,30 is just a big spooning ground, dangerous spooning often, I doubt not, but not a centre of vicious resort. For this there are, for one thing too many people moving about, often ^{rangish} boys, the débris of the band crowd, and the fact that the band has collected thousands, a considerable number of whom linger in the neighbourhood, in itself protects the place from becoming, at any rate on band nights and up to the time that I have mentioned, a place of evil resort. Another point, amounting to proof, is that I saw nowhere any sign of professionalism: there were no women walking about alone on the outskirts of the Rye, nor, so far as I could observe, on the adjacent roads. During the whole evening I was never accosted.

I have omitted to mention that the Band Committeeman told me that the point of view of the band itself is purely professional. He was unwilling to tell me what was paid, but clearly thought, although they pay a reduced fee ~~for~~ because the engagement is for a season, that they pay quite enough. He was ~~xxxx~~ quite emphatic in refusing to allow any share of the public spirit that the Committee shows to the ~~xxxxxxxxxxxx~~ tall-hatted performers. "They come for what they get; it is purely ~~yx~~ a business arrangement."

Towards 6.30 I took a tram to Goose Green to find out what changes had taken place at S. John the Evangelist, on the death of the late Vicar. His successor has been appointed, but it appears that although there will be some set-back there is to ^{be} no reversal to the Evangelical position of the past. Mr. Eglinton, the Vicar-designate, is now at his first curacy at Woolwich, with Canon Esecree. To me, the most surprising fact is that Mr. Joyce is going to stay on, in any case at first. Mr. Robertson is leaving, and there is to ^{be} only one curate. The young fellow who was my informant was on some duty in the porch and happened to have spent nearly all the preceding day with Mr. Eglinton, whose praises he sang very warmly and sincerely: "He was almost like a brother" and it is clear that a warm welcome is being prepared for the new man in some of the hearts of his future parishioners. Can he, I wonder, retain Mr. Joyce for any length of time,

Mr. Joyce with his profound beliefs in the pronouncements of Mother Church and his hopeless longing for another "real" Oecumenical Council, so that, perchance, they can have a somewhat more modern voice than that of the Council of Nicaea. And if Mr. Joyce should stay on, where, one wonders, is Canon Escreet leading his young men?

At the side of the porch there was a written notice headed "Confessions" stating the times when Mr. Robertson and Mr. Joyce would be in church for the purpose. The evening service was to begin at seven, and I was there at about 6.40; some 15 or 20 people had already come. I append Mr. Eglinton's first pastoral letter. It is quite colourless, and might have been written equally well by Webb-Peploe or Montague Villiers.

WOOLWICH.

June 21st, 1901.

DEAR PEOPLE,—

My first words to my future friends and parishioners must be one of deepest thankfulness to Mr. Robertson and Mr. Joyce, for their management of the Parish during the long time that your late Vicar was removed from you by illness, and during the time that has elapsed since his death last December.

May I ask for your prayers that I may be a faithful minister of the Message of Everlasting Salvation when I come and work among you? I believe most firmly that the Gospel of Christ is the grandest means of enlightening the conscience of mankind, and that it is the greatest sanctifying power in our every-day life. May God grant that I fail not in the charge He has put into my hands.

I hope to be instituted in July, and to begin work among you, after my induction, on the first Sunday in September. I will let you definitely know in the August Magazine.

Faithfully yours,

ARTHUR EGLINGTON.

On Goose Green, at the Lordship Lane end, the Salvation Army had taken up their positions, the band numerous; the uniforms the smartest that I have ever seen in any corps; but the audience practically nil. They marched off soon after I joined them, and, apart from their own people (there were a few Sisters and a few soldiers not members of the band) I don't think that a single person joined in. From there I walked back to the Rye, going first to the head of Nunhead Crescent where the Nunhead Christian Band were starting things. They had a banner, but no uniforms. The leader looked a little conceited, but was, I think, a good fellow. He was a man of perhaps 38. Some of the members had very good faces; others looked poor creatures. Most were young men. While I was there they began to ~~xxx~~ play and sing and I ~~let~~ ^{let} them doing so, with about 100 people standing by. They had, of course, a much better "pitch" than the S.A. but certainly gave the impression, although they made less show, of ~~xxxx~~ having more life, perhaps even more sincerity.

standing on a bench, he was pushed off, but pursued and caught, and pummelled the boy. But only for a moment, as a young man interfered. The pummelling stopped, but the young man himself got no support from the people round who had seen what was going on, and thought that a drubbing was deserved. Sharp words followed in condemnation and defence of Cokey, and before they were over, I could

I should put the numbers so seated at from 800 to 1000, but I did not try to calculate this figure at the time, nor did I ask the question, so I may be quite wrong: a circle of people may be peculiarly deceptive. Outside the enclosure was another asphalted space and, although picturesqueness is sacrificed, doubtless many colds are saved thereby on damp evenings. For the last few years the Committee has been affiliated with the Nat. Sunday League, but maintains its separate management, including its finances.

most of them, are I was told, professionals who play in theatre or music-hall orchestras during the week. The band is certainly a good one. I know nothing of its financial basis, but think that I am right in saying that, even if some fee be paid, it is not the fee that holds the members together.

The statement that the congregation leaving the Baptist~~x~~ Tabernacle, close by the end of Rye Lane, can only move with difficulty because of the Band crowd is only true in the sense that there may be many people in the roadway going to or coming from the band, which itself plays some two-thirds of a mile away. What most likely happens is that on certain evenings when, for instance, they have an after service and come out late, perhaps just after the band has left off playing, ~~that~~ the roadways may be then really "full" of people. But it will be people who have been to the band and are now making their way home. The map will show that when the band crowd scatters that proportion of whatever number of thousands may have been listening to the music which makes its way north will have got into the neck of the bottle when it reaches the Tabernacle, and I have no doubt that for a quarter of an hour or more on every fine

Sunday evening the roadway is really packed, making it difficult to get along, southwards. But it will be a moving mass of people, for the most part going home, not a stationary, listening crowd. To the latter, who told him plainly that he was doing harm to his own cause, I think he was rude. He certainly took no heed, and is, I think, for the moment a hopeless person to attempt to deal with reasonably ... except in coke.

Pro-Boer of the afternoon had taken up the position then occupied by the Secularist and was talking, not Pro-Boerism and not Secularism, but some kind of Politics. Nothing that he said whenever I came along gave me a clue to the drift of his remarks, and, although I asked one or two people, they could not tell me. Perhaps he hadn't any. I don't think he was a Socialist. He wanted the glorious day to come when we might have manhood suffrage, and all our laws, "all our good laws, that is" are, he said, in accordance with the teaching of the Bible. Blots of the Statute book are due to the meanness, the selfishness and the trickery of men. And so on, but I think that he was an honest fellow, trying to spread what he genuinely believed to be right views as to civic and national duty.

again with a refrain that ^{was} excellent for the purpose, the tall Irishman falling in with all Kingsbury's suggestions and Kingsbury himself simply beaming, and walking up and down, and giving the time often with ~~xx~~ clapping hands, in a state of quiet ecstasy. It was the first time that anything had really got hold of me on the Rye, except perhaps Humphreys for a minute or two in the afternoon, but here at last was a man not only perfectly sincere, but perfectly self-forgetful and, ~~perfectly~~ for the time at any rate, perfectly happy.

The Irishman followed with an address, so far as I heard it somewhat fierce in tone. He was called upon, it seemed quite unexpectedly, but in thirty seconds he was raging. Two things inspired him: the "deliberate lies" that were uttered at the Secularist platform, Sunday after Sunday ("lie number two" was the statement that according to the Baptists "no one could get to heaven unless he had been dipped in a horse trough") and, secondly, the apathy of the people. We are like the Athenians of old (who by the way are not described as being apathetic) and Sunday after Sunday were charged with coming and responding not at all. The fact is, and he brought it out with a great shout, and poor Kingsbury did not look quite happy at this moment, "You don't want Christ", and he repeated the terrible indictment "You don't want Christ".

"But", he added in a threatening undertone, "But you need Him; you need Him". The contrast to the pleasant tune that he had been singing a moment before; the furious energy, and the terrible voice that made my ears ache drove me away after a few minutes, but I came back more than once, always to find him there, six feet two of fierce Ulster Protestantism (I think he must have been Ulster) but a stand-by whenever they sang.
