

Keeping

our jobs

● The European Community, and countries in Europe linked with it, already buy half of all British exports.

● Trade barriers between us are coming down. True, this is a two-way traffic, but British exports, and jobs, have benefited.

● If Britain comes out of the Community, and the barriers go up again, we will have fewer jobs.

● What membership of the Community does is give Britain the same opportunity to prosper that the original members have enjoyed for years.

● Once the world's industry is sure we will stay in the Community, more new industries will be set up in Britain, or expanded, and more jobs will be created.

● The other Community countries want us to stay in because they know that together we all have a great future.

● Their trade unions want us in. So do their political parties – Labour, Conservative and Liberal. So –
