Aug 20. 1919.

Dear Mrs. Turberville.

The death of the Bishop deprives our cause, and that of Humanity, of one of its bravest and ablest Champions. He was far bigger than his reputation: R. J. P.

The Terms of Petition and ^{Notice} ~~manifesto~~ are all that could be wished, but I think

I would delete the last sentence in

Notice, for although it is wholly true, it sounds more provocative than useful.

The Archdeacon described the Notice in the Westminster Gazette as turbulent boastful and "unchristian," and although I strongly rebuked his statement, it indicates the way we ought to go. These machineries always mark out for reformers "the steep and thorny path" they never head themselves, but we can afford to be gentle.

Sincerely yours,

S. Prudden
