PARTY CONGRESS: By John Scurr LABOUR THE

From the standpoint of numbers the Sixteenth Annual Conference of the Labour Party was a great success, over seven hundred delegates being present, representing two million and a quarter people—I would have written persons were it not for the fact that some of the delegates represented women, and some were women, and some were women, and some were women, and some were women. for the fact that some of the delegates represented women, and some were women, and women are not persons, as we know. I was glad to notice that several women were sitting with the Textile Operatives group. I hope that this presages a keener interest on the part of the women, so well organised in this industry, in the affairs of Labour. It was also grarifying to hear the declaration of the National Union of Railwaymen to the effect that they had admitted women to the Society and were not going to allow them to be stranded after the war when the men come back and want their ar when the men come back and want their old jobs.

One comes away from a Congress of this description impressed with its wonderful humanity. As you look at the delegates seated on the floor, and when you mix with them and talk over the affairs of Labour, you discover that men and women of the movement are but men and women after all, animated by motives and passions, good and evil, pure and impure. Lofty idealism rubs shoulders with sordid self-interest. Intrigue vies with Innocence; Love with Hate.

When one realises this, the feeling of dis-away. Labour is so intensely human in congress because Labour itself is humanity.

There is an old proverb to the effect that the descent to Hell is easy, and i twas well illustrated on the first day, when the subject of the participation of Labour representatives in the present Government was discussed. The previous conference at Bristol had approved of Labour joining the old Coalition Government: this was a fatal precedent. After all, if once you accept the principle that Labour can, because of the critical state of affairs, join forces with Liberal and Tory, there is no reason in the world why it should not continue in office when the Liberal section, or most of it, withdraws. Philip Snowden delivered a powerful attack upon the principle, although it was felt generally that he imparted just a trifle too much bitterness into his remarks, and so left the way open for a personal attack from J. R. Clynes. Snowden's speech, however, was a great performance. When he rose he was greeted with a rousing storm of cheers, accompanied with an undercurrent of groans. Gradually, however, he dominated the hostile elements, and the Conference heard him through to the end.

The vote in favour of Labour being in the Cabinet was, of course, considerable, but it must not be supposed that it represented the exact division of opinion. Under the card vote system, with the idea of the block vote, prevailing minorities are "steam rollered," and the greater the society the greater the injustice to the minority.

Take the Miners' Federation as an example. This great body has 600 votes. The delegates are "steam rollered," and the greater the society the greater the injustice to the minority.

Take the Miners' Federation as an example. This great body has 600 votes. The delegates come from their various districts, some with and some without instructions. They all meet apart from the Conference and discuss the Agenda and vote upon the resolutions. Whatever may be their decision, no matter how small the majority, the whole 600 votes are cast for the majority decision. I believe that at least one-third of the miners' representatives was against Labour being in the Government, but if the 600 votes had been divided 200 would have been given for the minority, but by the block vote system the 200 was lumped with the 400 for the majority. Another large union cast all its votes for the majority after deciding to do so at a meeting of its delegates by a majority of one. Similar close divisions took place among the representatives of other unions. It may be argued that the minority vote also includes numbers who are really on the side of the majority. This is true, and there would be little objection to the system if the Conference were composed of roughly equal societies, but with very big organisations the vote can never accord with real opinion. The vote in this case was 1,849 to 307. If we assume that one-third of all the members of the societies represented was against the decision of their delegates, on the basis of the miner's vote, we should have had the decision recorded as follows:—

FOR: 1849 minus 616 plus 102 equals 1335.
AGAINST: 307 minus 102 plus 716 equals 821.
which, judging from the expressions of the delegates, would much nearer represent the true

Many votes were recorded in favour because of the Bristol decision, but something of the under-lying feeling showed itself next day when the con-

the Conference, and upon its resumption the motion to appoint a committee was carried on the motion of Fred Bramley, and the motion condemning the deportation was also carried. A dramatic debate was closed by a decision to send a telegram to Lloyd George demanding Kirkwood's immediate release. This action was taken much against the desires of the Chairman, and the credit for it is largely due to the persistence of the delegate of the Lincoln Trades Council, gratulatory telegram was read from Lloyd George. The Conference shook with laughter, and a delegate enquired when a wire was coming from Lord Northcliffe.

The great event of the second day was the appearance of David Kirkwood, the chief of the Clyde deportees. Much cheering and counter-cheering had greeted the champions in the previous debate, but there was no partisan welcome given to Kirkwood. The whole of the delegates cheered with fervour, and the little man could not proceed for some time. He made his statement with quiet dignity. It was restrained in utterance, passionate in its sincerity, and telling by reason of its moderation. His concluding words to the effect that he would not return to deportation, but would go back to Glasgow swept the Conference off its feet. From every part of the hall arose a bitter shout of "Henderson!"

Conference off its feet. From every part of the hall arose a bitter shout of "Henderson!"

Mr. Henderson does not lack courage, and he rose to face the assembly, but looking for the first and last time during its sitting nervous and perturbed. His explanation was not very satisfactory, and in my judgment established the fact that Kirkwood and his colleagues were deported because of the offended dignity of the then Minister for Munitions. The deportation had apparently taken place without Mr. Henderson's knowledge, and he only accepted responsibility after the event. He suggested that the Congress should appoint a committee of enquiry, and on behalf of the Government pledged himself to a production of all documents. J. T. Brownlie, as President of the A.S.E., also stated the case from the Executive's standpoint. It did not disclose much strength. A phrase to the effect that Kirkwood was present owing to the efforts of Mr. Henderson, and the A.S.E. Executive brought Robert Smillie, of the Miners, to his feet. He pointed out that every word of the explanation of Mr. Henderson could be accepted, yet the point at issue was not met, which was, not the breaking of Trade Union rules, but the deportation of citizens without trial. The luncheon hour intervened at this stage, and cooled the passions of one of the youngest men at the Conference. On the last day it was announced that the members of the committee elected were Robert Smillie (Miners), A. Bellamy (N.U.R.), T. Shaw (Textiles), J. Hill (Boilermakers), and A. G. Walkden (Railway Clerks).

The Conference passed most of its resolutions with but little debate. They dealt with the reconstruction after the War, and were drafted by the Executive Council, it is said largely by Sidney Webb. This may be only gossip, but if he did not draft them, they were done by an apt pupil. In this connection there is rather a good joke. Hutchinson, of the A.S.E., moving one of these resolutions, denounced the author of the Trade Union articles in "The Times." These are generally believed to be written by—Sidney Webb.

The Franchise resolution was moved by W. C. Robinson, the Textile Operatives representative, and read as follows:—

(1) That this Conference declares that the War has made obsolete all our past system of enfranchisement and registration.

(2) That the only solution of the difficulties that have arisen is adult suffrage, including women.

(3) That registration should be so conducted that every properly qualified person should have the opportunity to vote at elections, and that this entails both a short period of qualification and continuous registration.

(4) That the soldiers and munition workers should not only have the right of voting conferred.

tinuous registration.

(4) That the soldiers and munition workers should not only have the right of voting conferred upon them, but that arrangements should be made by which that right can be exercised, including the provision of facilities for all candidates to put their views fairly before these electors; and that as far as possible similar arrangements should be made for the convenience of other electors necessarily absent from their constituencies.

(5) That redistribution of electorates should take place at once.

(6) That no election conducted on the present

(6) That no election conducted on the present register, or before the above changes have been made, can return a Parliament which represents

THE SPEAKER'S CONFERENCE REPORT

The report of the Speaker's Conference is entirely unsatisfactory, and every effort should be made to secure the substitution of manhood and ood suffrage for its medley of anomalous womanhood suffrage for its medley of anomalous half-measures.

The recommendations are unsatisfactory as regards the men's franchise; they are still more unsatisfactory as regards the women's franchise.

Women will be told, no doubt, that they ought to be delighted "because the Conference has decided by a majority that some measure of woman suffrage should be conferred." The Daily News heads its leading article on the subject, "The Women's Victory," and we may agree that the recommendation illustrates the fact that the justice of women's suffrage is so generally felt that Women's Victory," and we may agree that the justice of women's suffrage is so generally felt that no Franchise Bill which does not include women has a chance of becoming law. But this fact was made clear when the Asquith Reform Bill of 1912 was withdrawn, nominally because the Speaker had declared the women's amendments to be out of order, but really because the Government could not be induced to agree to bring the women in and the Bill could not secure a majority without them. Since 1912 the cause of women's enfranchisement has made much headway; and we are of opinion that a referendum taken now upon the simple issue as to whether a woman should vote, would undoubtedly show a great majority in our favour.

In short, we are all agreed that a measure of women's franchise will be inserted in the next general Reform Bill, and whilst not being so cocksure as to forget the need for driving the point home, we must devote great attention to the practical question as to what sort of franchise was reto have.

The Speaker's Conference has failed to recommend equality between woman and man; it has also failed to recommend equality to do anything logical, it loses the advantage of having only one set of electoral lists to prepare and one set of qualifications to satisfy, and puts for-

THE WOMAN'S DREADINOUGH!

In 1908 only about 871,768 women in England and Wales were qualified to exercise the municipal vote. At the census of 1911 there were 11,423,230 women above 20 years of age. But, after all, the graduates are a very small minority of women, and they have manifold advantages denied to their fellows. The age limit is put up also against the masses of girls who go straight from the elementary school to the factory.

SHUTTING OUT THE WAGE-EARNERS. If women are to wait for a vote till they are 35 years of age, the vast majority of those who are employed as wage-earners will never vote. The census of 1911 showed that 2,699,365 women between the ages of 20 and 35, or 36 per cent. of women between those ages were employed as wage-earners, whilst between 35 and 65 the wage-earners numbered only 792,025, or 19 per cent. of the weapen of those ages.

The woman's Franchise is the one on which the report proposes to graft a still more fancy Parliamentary franchise for women.

The commendations for the Local Government franchise are as follows:—

The LOCAL GOVERNMENT FRANCHISE.

(not applying to Scotland and Ireland).

Any person who is an occupier (either as owner or tenant) shall vote on a six months' residential qualification.

Neither sex nor marriage shall be a disqualification, not provided that husband and wife shall not be qualified in respect of the same premises.

For Local Government purposes the vast majority of married women, indeed, practically all the married working women, would remain disfranchised as socompared with the older woman, against the unmarried woman as compared with the married for Road, E.

PLURAL VOTING.

Plural voting is to be modified.

A man may not have more than two votes, one for his residence and one for his business or University. The University franchise is to continue and to be extended to the newer Universities.

We wish that Parliament may have the wisdom to sweep away both forms of plural voting; they are merely methods of placing more power in the hands of those who have already the advantages of money and education.

A SERVICE FRANCHISE.

Residence for one month is to be sufficient qualification for any person of full age who is or has served in His Majesty's forces.

We have no quarrel with this provision, except that it should apply to all men and women. ABSENT VOTERS.

Provision is suggested for enabling voters com-pelled to be absent from home to vote by post. PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION.

The further limitation of candidate's expense The further timitation of canadate's expensis is also a sensible provision; but the proposal, either to charge to the candidate the expenses of any organisation that holds a meeting to recommend his candidature, or to prosecute that organisation for corrupt practices, is a most drastic one which requires very serious consideration.

But these are minor matters, the franchise is the main question and the franchise proposals will not do! They are a patch-work of checks io neutralise the power of the majority of the people in the interests of the privileged minority.

Australia, New Zealand, and many States of America and Canada have adopted complete adult suffrage, and in these forward moving democracies the effort, so far from being to devise such checks and balances, is to secure a still more direct means of popular control. To this end, as State after State from time to time revises its constitution, such innovations as the Initiative, Referendum and Recall are introduced. If Britain would break away from amongst the autocracies of the past and

WOMEN IN THE LABOUR MARKET

THE WAITRESS'S LIFE

THE HORRORS OF THE TIPPING SYSTEM By A WAITRESS.

I have been asked by some fellow-waitresses to relate to you some facts concerning the conditions under which we are obliged to work.

under which we are obliged to work.

Take, for instance, the wages at the Cabin Restaurant in the Strand: the waitresses are obliged to work alternately on early duty from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and on late duty from 11.30 a.m. to 11.30 p.m. The wage is 75. a week and tips!

When the shop remains open till 11.30 there are naturally often duties to perform which keep the employees later. A few days ago one of the waitresses was not allowed to leave the shop until her last 'bus had passed. She had to walk home, and did not arrive till nearly 2 a.m. after running up and down stairs for nearly 12 hours at the restaurant. On the way home she was annoyed by men, who thought that no decent girl would men, who thought that no decent girl would out at that hour!

Out at that hour said enough to shock the derage worker, but the tragedy of the tipping stem, which obtains in most restaurants, none in know save those who have worked under it.

system, which obtains in most restaurants, none can know save those who have worked under it. When engaging waitresses managers usually remark that much money is to be "had" in his shop, and consequently many young, pretty and respectable girls start work as waitresses. Each girl is shown three or four tables and given to understand that she must wait on anybody sitting at them, and that any money left on them will be a "tip" and will supplement her wage. It is painful to watch a girl picking up her first "tip." She blushes as some man customer takes out a handful of money and with more or less ceremony places a few coppers under the plate. (I say a man customer, because comparatively few women "tip" at all.) In most cases the girl waits until the customer is right outside the shop before picking up the plate. Consciously or unconsciously she resents taking money from a strange man. After a few months, however, such resentment has in most cases completely vanished. The girl has learnt the most successful way of canvassing for her wages—that of sinking entirely her own individuality in order to amuse and please the customer, whether he be coarse or refined. She will be almost rude to those who do not make a practice of "tipping." If she is pretty, men customers offer to take her out, and instead of refusing as she would have done a few months previously, she accepts almost invariably, for her very soul has been wounded and dwarfed. Young girls have told me, almost in tears, that even the managers have insulted them; that they have tried to kiss them or have offered to take them out. I have on many occasions heard managers talk in a shameful manner to young girls, who know by experience that they must tolerate it or go. Married women are usually safe from insults.

Unfortunately, few waitresses are class-consisting.

a living wage regardless of the generosity of those with whom their business brings them in contact, why not the waitress of the restaurant in which they dine?

The men are fighting for freedom(?). This is the kind of freedom left behind for their wives and daughters!—J.B.

GOVERNMENT SWEATING

An examination for female clerks in the expense accounts office at Pembroke Dockyard has been held. The subjects of examination being commercial arithmetic, handwriting and orthography, composition, and typewriting, and the wages to be paid will be 18s. per week, with zs. war bonus. The maximum rate to which successful candidates can advance will be 25s, per week.

We take these facts from the "Naval and Military Record"; they speak for themselves! The minimum demanded by the National Union of Clerks is 35s. a week.

MUNITION WORKERS' WAGES MUNITION WORKERS' WAGES
The special arbitration tribunal appointed to enquire into the differences between the National Federation of Women Workers and Pirelli's General Cable Works, Ltd., with reference to the rate of wages paid by the latter, has now issued its award. This is a somewhat lengthy document, but the principal findings of the arbitrators summarised are that women of 18 years and over shall receive 44d, per hour; girls of 17 and under 18, 4d; girls of 15 and 16, 3d.; and girls under 15, 24d. Women and girls may be rated at a hallpenny per hour less than their proper rate as prescribed for probationary periods not exceeding one month in cases of women over 18, two months in those of girls under 18, and three months in those of girls under 16. Additional payment in respect of overtime, night-shift, Sunday or holiday work shall be made in accordance with the class of women or girls concerned. Piece-work prices shall be such as to enable a woman or girl of ordinary ability to earn at least 33d over her time rate as prescribed by this award. The above rates and conditions are to be recognised as war rates and conditions, and as due to and depending on the exceptional circumstances resulting from the present War. The new rates of payment, which come into force immediately, constitute a substantial advance on those previously obtaining.

Nottingham plain-net lace-makers having raised strong objection to the introduction of women operatives in their branch of the industry, it is officially reported that the Home Office authorities have decided that women's labour must be retained during the War in this branch of the trade, but shall not be afterwards encouraged.

The Home Office appears to assume that it can move women workers about at will. Equal pay is a more substantial safeguard than any Government promises.

for the exploiters, and until the waitresses are safeguarded by a trade union, they will never be able to demand a proper wage and so wrench themselves from being toys for men. If other shops must close at 8 o'clock, why not restaurants?

WOMEN POLICE

The Ministry of Munitions advertised last week for 300 women police, "to protect women workers and prevent carelessness" in War factories. An allowance during training (about three weeks) and "good salaries" were promised. Women who ap-plied for the work found that the allowance during training was £1 a week and the salary £2 a week. The women were to pay £10 for their uniform; if unable to find all the money at once, they might pay £4 down and the rest by instalments.

The practice of introducing police into the factories seems to us a dangerous one from the

INCREASE OF FOOD PRICES

The syndicate of hotel-keepers in Berlin has decided to crease food prices by 50 per cent. from February 1st.

According to a Budapest telegram, the tenants of this town have decided to increase the rent by 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. The increase of rent-is the result of increased prices of food and necessaries.

Scenes of disorder and tumult are continually taking place in Berlin broweries as a result of the beer shortage.

A meeting was held in Havre (France) to agitate against alcohol. An address has been sent to M. Briand asking for the immediate suppression of alcohol.

FOR BREAD AND PEACE

FOR SREAD AND PEACE

Serious riots have taken place recently in Gratz (Austria), owing to food shortage. The population demonstrated in the streets asking for peace and an increase in food rations. The police could not control the rioters, and asked a egiment of infantry to intervene. The people resisted, and oddiers were injured by the excited crowd. The comnandant ordered them to fire, but the soldiers without exception disobeyed. The soldiers returned to their baracks, whilst the crowd continued the demonstration unongst the demonstrators were many relugees from indica and the Isonzo.

The Italian War Minister has decided to replace all men illicials in military hospitals by women. The number of oldiers who will be replaced by women and sent to the ront amounts to about 20,000.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE AND PARLIAMENTARY MOKALS. A manifesto of the Northern Men's Federation for Women's Suffrage, by Mrs. Aracliffe Sennett and signed by the N.M.F. Committee and sixteen Glasgow Magistrates. The pamphlet is a strong plea against the re-introduction of any form of State regulation of vice. A brief historical survey is given of the various Acts for the Regulation of Vice, conjoined with the various franchise Bilis, Josephine Butler's agitation, and the attempts to secure protection for girls and legal guardianship of their children for mothers. This is to show the connection between the disregard of women's interests and their disfranchised state. The following striking parallels are given as a postcript:—

How we are Born. A Letter to Parents for their Children by Mrs. N. Jr., with preface by J. H. Badley (Headmaster of Bedales School), London. C. W. Daniel Ltd., Graham House, Tudor Street, E.C. Tells in simple language, simple enough to be understood by children, the facts about sex, and gives useful advice. Is written by a mother who has talked with her children on these matters, and has endeavoured to write as she has talked. Though written for children, it gives some facts which older people are not always as clearly aware of as they ought to be. The author says that a boy of thirteen on hearing that she was writing this book, asked with surprise, why she should write what everyone knows. She answered that many children do not know, but again he persisted, "Don't their mothers tell them?" she answered. "Many of them don't," and again he asked, "Why?" "Because they are ashamed to speak of all the uncleanliness which people so often make of the sexual law as you know. And then their children grow up without understanding clearly anything about themselves or the animals in this respect." Then the boy was eager that she should write the book and eager to help. "I will tell you whether every boy will understand it," he said. The author submitted her manuscript to the boy, and altered it as he suggested. Some parts he found "too babyish," and asked for more scientific expressions: other expressions were altered because he found them too scientific, and wanted something easier to understand. In a foot-note the author explains that in the Russian edition of her book the common vices of sexual life as well as its good and natural aspects are dealt with, because it was found necessary to do so. This section is not contained in the English edition because of "the difficulty of publishing such discussions here,' though vill take no harm from reading the book on his or her own

"THE PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE SCHOOL CHILD." Pamphlet by R. E. Roper, M.Ed. (Vict.), from the League for Physical Education and Improvement, 4 Tavistock Square, London, W.C. Mr. Roper says: "Education is not so much a preparation for life as a path of life.... Whilst in this world the individual ego inhabits a body through which it communicates with others. .. Whatever in school affects municates with others. Whatever in school affects the development of this body (rog good or 11) falls with the province of physical development. You cannot afford to crowd it into an hour or so per week. Nothing but ignorant or dishonest reasoning can excuse the According to news coming from Budapest violent scenes ook place at the opening of the Hungarian Parliament.

Mr. Roper quotes a number of cases:—

Case 3.—"This boy is a specialist in botany and chemistry, rather nervous and shy, and over-exerts his own to such an extent in holding a pen that his writing becomes worse than illegible. It has every appearance of gross carelessness, and as no examiner would bother to read it, he is unlikely to get the scholarship to which his "mental" standard is easily suited. In addition to class exercise, he has individual practice in writing with a pen which gives him a small electric shock when he grasps it with more than necessary pressure. Incidentally, he

QUESTIONS OF THE DAY

THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Parliament will be opened on Wednesday, February 7th. Mrs. Drake will be in the Lobby from 2.45 p.m. onwards, and will be pleased to advise W.S.F. members wishing to interview Members of Parliament. Those who are not accustomed to Lobbying are also invited to write to Mrs. Drake at 49 Crediton Road, Tidal Basin. Everyone who wishes to secure Adult Suffrage should at once communicate with the local Members of Parliament and the Prime Minister. Every branch of every organisation should do the way with the local to the relief of civilian distress caused by the War. £2,920,800 of this was spent in doles to the families of soldiers and sailors who ought to have received separation allowances from the War Office. Only £487,385 was spent on civil relief, which was doled out most meanly, leaving its recipients still hungry and cold. The store of human energy and health which was dissipated by this churlish treatment of the unemployed workers is needed now and cannot be replaced.

SIR EDWARD FRY ON THE TREATY.

"Common Sense" reports Sir Edward Fry as ecommending that the wishes of populations within it is proposed to transfer from one Power to nother should be ascertained by a plebiscite taken older the superintendence of representatives of the neutral Powers. This is in accord with our win view: we fail to see how anyone, save the opulations concerned, can decide what those opulations desire, and we are strongly of opinion hat no population should be transferred, save by its own desire. We are glad to welcome the dherence to this view of a man of so much weight and experience as Sir Edward Fry, who arbitated between France and Germany in the Casa lanca incident of 1909, and from 1900 to 1912 as one of the British members of the Permanent or further stated that he doubted the wisdom or the Arbitration at the Hague. Sir Edward Fry further stated that he doubted the wisdom or breaches of international law, and was opposed to a tariff war.

We anxiously appeal for help in our open-air campaign. Friends are asked to come to the meetings and stand by the speakers to sell and distribute literature and to get signatures to the Peace Memorial. More speakers are Lord Selborne, Sir Starr Jameson—and Mr. Hodge!

EAST LONDON PEACE CAMPAIGN.

The joint committee which is organising the Peace Campaign has arranged for a procession to march from Beckton Road, Canning Town, via East India Dock Gates, and a demonstration in Victoria Park on Sunday, April 1st. The Hon. Secretary is Mr. Lane, 123 Hampton Road, Forest Gate. The Hon. Meetings Secretary is Mrs. Bouvier, 400 Old Ford Road, Bow, E. Friends are asked to volunteer for speaking, billing, canvassing, &c.

We anxiously appeal for help in our open-air campaign. Friends are asked to come to the meetings and stand by the speakers to sell and distribute literature and to get signatures to the Peace Memorial. More speakers are also wanted. CHILD LABOUR IN FRANCE.

"COLOUR ARROGANCE."

The "Church Times" has joined the advocates of imorting coloured labour into this country. It argues that position to the scheme springs from "colour arrogance," which it declares to be "not only a sin, but a folly." If coloured labour comes to be introduced, will the Church Times" insist that the black man shall have the ame wage and the same freedom as the white man? We ear not. Unfortunately, the "Church Times" is usually bund to be on the side of reaction, and if Africans were rought to work here under indentures, paid blackleg rates, and detained in compounds, it is improbable that the Church Times" would make a protest.

HURRY UP, Mr. HODGE!

"After the War our women will surely get their reward in having the franchise extended to them," said Mr. Hodge, the Minister of Labour, at Rotherham. But women do not want to wait for the vote till after the War; they want it now.

THE VOICE OF LABOUR

Bruce Glaiser dealt with the demand for a meeting of the International with considerable skill.
Robert Williams quoted with effect the resolution of the old International, dealing with the duty of Socialists and Labour men in time of war. J. R. Clynes contended that if the resolution was carried it would mean that Labour would declare that the claims of Germany to victory were admitted.
Ramsay Macdonald, who had a great reception, stood for the meeting of the International. He pointed out that French, German, Belgian, and English Cardinals could meet in war-time to elect English Cardinals could meet in war-time to elect a Pope, and the Jesuits of the belligerent nations could meet to choose a General; German and British directors of great capitalist concerns could meet with the knowledge of their Governments, but Labour could not.

but Labour could not.

Argument, however, was useless, and the resolution was rejected by 1498 to 696, and the resolution of the National Union of General Workers "to fight until victory was achieved" was carried by 1036 to 464. The B.S.P. Peace resolution was defeated by 1697 to 350.

The speeches of the French and Belgian Socialist delegates were interesting, especially Socialist delegates were interesting, especially that of M. Longuet representing the minority in France. was, however, in favour of seeking some way out of the mess as in France they were coming to the point when their nation would be exhausted. The last vote of the French Socialists was for supporting the War to the bitter end, 1,537 against 1,407. German militarism could only be destroyed by the German people.

Longuet's colleagues, although pro-War, and the two Belgian, delegates, although also bitter against Germany, insisted on the need for the restoration of the International.

Altogether, the Congress voted as was expected. It was an old man's meeting, and its decisions accorded with the views of elderly people. Yet in many ways it was sound, and one came away feeling that there was plenty of tinder which could be ignited at any moment. The Government will make a grave error if it thinks that Labour is altogether docile. ****
