My dear Pippa

I can't let it alone so please forgive me if I seem horribly importunate but I really don't think you are being quite sensible. I think one ought to get all the facts possible and then decide. Now the great point of Craig is that he isn't absolute. He takes the whole Circumstances into consideration & tries to find the best thing under the circumstances.

You see I know then nerve things are the best and I also know what you my dear really refuse to face that it is a great anxiety to a good many people (myself for one if I may count and I don't see why I shouldn't) to think that for want of a little care now you may drift into a dismal kind of illness which might last years. It really would make me much happier if You would just do that one thing for me. I know you'll think I've no reason to ask it but really I have very good selfish reasons that I have come to depend on you such a lot & tho' of course I am a very good nurse I've had my share of nursing nervous invalids & wds. much rather play with you.

I bring the children back to Guildford to-morrow so write to me then.

At last to-day the post letter from V. and as usual I'd better not have wanted it so badly really I am a bloody fool and my children are entirely delightful -

Adm of dear & wife I say you forgive my impudence & perhaps that you'll just humour my whim known about it seems. Sh.

Yrs. Roger.
