My Dear Kelly,

I meant to write to you during the holidays, but I delayed — not merely out of business — but because I meant to send you my little article on Rowden at the same time and presumed that it would be handily be forwarded to you while you were on your travels. By the bye I do not know at all where you have finally gone for your holiday, but I hope in any case that you have enjoyed it and I suppose you will their place. Dylan. States is charming and in the best of scenery now soon return to Prussia.

I spent a few days at Bunsen's on my return from England and then stayed at Berlin all over the month of July. From August till 11th of September I have again been in Bunsen and enjoyed a very luxurious dolce far niente, the weather being lovely most of the time.

Our lectures begin about the middle of October only, but I had to go to Berlin for business arrangements.

besides I found that you can have too much even of a good thing in the way of idleness. Mending my old clothes and reading Italian novels besides taking walks and doing a little garden work becomes more satisfactory after a while, at least from the point of view of one's intellectual conscience. However I am very lonely here now with too little definite work to fill my time before the term begins again.

My stay in England has left me a store of pleasant memories on which I shall draw for a long time, and I hope you will find a trace of them in my article on Rowden. I was sorry they would not reproduce one of the photographs along with it, but there were some technical objections about that. My sisters wish to be very kindly remembered to you. They are both very well, but will not join me here before the winter. She will perhaps pay a visit to England next spring, having been asked to come on a visit to the Lakes.
