My dear Pippa.

I was so sick about it all. You see I had to go & see Julian about Sat. 1st promised & couldn't disappoint him. I thought I was also to see Pam for Sunday but that fell through so I at once worked out an amazingly ingenious & terrible scheme to go on for Petersfield Sat. night sleep at Southampton (got to you Sunday morning meaning to spend Monday with you but of course I couldn't with all this. I hoped tho' you'd understand. I got yr. wire to say no just as I was starting to catch the train, so I had to make fresh plans. I was very much disappointed but supposed you had good reasons. Pippa I do want to see you soon. I've been rather better but no such violent attacks. I've filled up cozily & evening hard but not always successfully. Now when shall I see you? I'm afraid you're really very ill & I ought to come & nurse you. I wish I could get you to go to Craig. I'm sure you ought to.

I shall have the children back Apr. 9 - 12 then take them to Fairland my people & then from about 16th I shall be very much at a horse end and longing either for some one to ask me to a nice country place or for you to come with Pamela or Lytton or alone or with someone else I might get to Darhins. Do tell me what you'll do. Or would you come for part of the time while the children are there. say 8th - 12th or later on when I'll have them again. I think the best plan is for you to tell me what you can do and let me try to get in somehow.
Do do this.

No I can't live with Logey now I don't get in enough with his world. I don't really live with anyone just now I should get too hard & hard.

I had a good time with Julian & his pal Rowatt who's older & rather a swell, not liked very much by the authorities but I always find him nice and rather intelligent. He's read a good deal & talks very sensibly - he's very much the gentleman. Julian seems to be doing better. I suppose the process of normalizing the young has some value but it makes me feel very uneasy to talk to the masters who do it, even to Badley whom I've known since he was at College.

Do tell me about Wadsworth - did you discover the illegit. child by internal evidence or what? I must get the news life.

I haven't read much lately. nor played chess.
Write again soon - yr. letters do help me out so much, tho' I'm afraid I seem cursed & wayward.

Yrs. Rogers.
