Dear Miss Macmillan,

Your letter of Nov. 18th to Mrs Fawcett came before the Executive Committee of the London Society yesterday. I am desired to express their regret that the financial position of the Society makes it quite impossible to offer any substantial support to your Committee, in spite of the cordial sympathy that is felt with you in your undertaking.

They are unanimous in their strong feeling ~~that~~ as to the desirability of your pleading your own case; they consider that this would have a most striking effect and they greatly hope that you will decide upon doing so.

I hope to send off your addressed envelopes before Xmas.

Believe me,

Yours very truly

Miss J. C. Macmillan,
