My dear Mrs Roberts

I have been a very long time in writing to you about your paper. And now I hardly know what to say except to advise you to read Helen Reed's Women by Theodore Besterman I do not agree with his conclusions any more than I agree with yours but he does clearly show that your contention affects only a very limited part of the subject. And I think his honest on pages 230 & 231 about Paris - my is more really credible than yours, therefore I cannot see that even if it were general which it is not - it could in any way affect the mind of men with regard to women priests. That there is a fear of men with regard to women is probably true - but that is largely due to a fear of male dominance being instilled into them from their earliest years.

I hope Mr. Roberts is better. I will do what I can & write again later on -

Yours very sincerely
Jane Walker
