Dearest Nellie.

I think I have never had a more rushing day than this & I expect tomorrow will be.

I received your letter this morning at 10 am & had previously drawn up the enclosed letter to Lansbury & to the Home Secretary! The former I sent off by express messenger to reach the House of Commons tonight! I have had no lunch yet at 3 pm this will express my strong feelings!

I have just heard from Boris that you are not returning today. I want you to rest well until after tomorrow night so that I may come & meet you in London on Wed or Thurs, or when you are ready to return. I shall have my rush over tomorrow night & could do some business in London on Wed.

I am sure you will think the Territorial Officer has used his rank to some purpose & justified, & repaid himself for all his past work & time at your expense!

Always your loving

Tom
