My dear Husband,

I have but time for a scrap tonight, for ever since Mrs Brown-head left us on Monday, things have been going at such a rate, and so they still go. But we shall finish up, I hope, on Saturday. Perhaps better than any words of mine will be those of Miss Brownhead, in the letter which I send to you. Let me leave it by return mail, for it is a testimony which I value. He enjoyed his visit and Ella's very much. I hope they will come and see us again when you are home. About the prices of the things the book was £1.17. and the altar desk £2.14. but as they were a present from me to the school church, I did not think anyone would want to buy in much they cost. I hope you would pay the 10/- of carriage which would bring the amount up to the £5. I wanted to spend. Your waterproof was £3. The two suits and the odd pair of trousers, came to £8.10.
I pay for everything as I get it, so as to leave no running accounts.

No. Mr Dally only sent two cases. Do write to Harve and find out from him to whom that third one was addressed. He knew nothing about it. Mr. said about that poor young man being killed at Naini Tal.
It is well you have had that bad part of the road on the way to church attended to. Do take care of yourself. Now I have no more time, and I might add not much more strength, though the spirit is willing.
Your loving Ep.
