

for me. He was a lovely man, who could express himself: & indeed he is the Father of English Prose, sober, sweet, clear, cadenced.

Go to Warwick on Thursday to lecture to the King's School on Irish Literature, & then to hear de la Mare lecture to the Children.

Then back to shoals of Camb. papers, all through Christmas, then again to Hilder, & so forth.

My best wishes to you for Christmas and always. It must be very nice in France I think: but I was born loving the French.
They are rational & funny, 2 qualities I esteem. I miss your fugitive arrivals in this little "Hole" of mine.

Yours very sincerely
