

Copy of allien from Lady Augusta Hauley - & Mrs. Chalk.

"I cannot describe to you the pleasure & interest with which I have read Mrs Hubbard's little pamphlet, or thank you enough for having made me acquainted with it. My husband has much struck with the last page - I wish he wd be to spread the sound ideas he has on the duty of Parents & think of the future of their race - quite as much as that of their sons, in the way of giving them the means of independence. Wd. Wm.

our exertions. If people do not only believe that it is not to make them lose caste but quite the contrary, & that they are much better wives (if they marry) for having been prepared for a practical life & having had the training that gives & especially in feeling that they need not marry for a livelihood. I think that so much of women's influence for good is lost by their false position in that respect. Men &

beat the ^{special} pulpit of Mr.
Parry well & nicely, & moderately, in such a robust spirit that I feel sure he would have equally persuasive & temperate arguments & urge on the more general application of the principle.
But what she has done & said will tell so powerfully in the right direction, that perhaps it is best to pause, & it will be unreasonable to urge her further on the wider field at present.
