Dear Miss Corben,

I have stated the principle as I understand it I think in several places, quite briefly in "Dominant Ideas and Corrective Principles" -Pages 30-33. As you know in Western theology and I think in Eastern, the Church has said not that women ought not to be Priests, but that the Sacramental act would be null and void. It has done its best to put the matter outside the range of discussion.

If you were to write to me later on, after Easter, I dare say I could manage a private discussion, but it doesn't seem to me that there is very much more to be said.

Yours truly
C. Arn;
