Feb. 14. 1895.

Dear Madam,

My only misgiving about accepting the honour of your kindly-offered call is that, with my strong predisposition to respect your judgments on social questions, I can hardly trust myself to be true to my own. In any case, however, I am open to new lights, and can have no better friends than those who bring them.

I would have called at 2. Lower St. and spared you the trouble of leaving the house, had I been aware of your wish to see me. But it is simplest now to take your proposal as it stands; and to offer a welcome for tomorrow (Friday) at 3. P.M.

Believe me,

Yours very respectfully,

James Martineau

Mrs Fawcett.
