THE MARCH of PROGRESS and HOW IT AFFECTS The birthplace of Jesus Christ "Janks and 11" guns in the Holy Land" Daily News, 28 April 1917-

As Russia moves towards Peace and a truer freedom than this our world has ever known, the other peoples of Europe slowly rouse themselves to follow. One of the latest signs of awakening comes from France, where the Socialist Congress has agreed to send delegates to Stockholm, and the National Council of the Party has called for a meeting of the International. This is a remarkable advance, for until recently Renaudel and the other leaders have declared it impossible for the Socialists of enemy and Allied nations to meet until Germany should be vanquished.

The British Government watches the temper of the people. It wonders what will transpire at Leeds, and, just to remove immediate causes of provocation, the Clyde deportees have been sent home after fourteen months' exile, and the prosecution of the engineers' strike leaders is with home after fourteen months' exile, and the prosecution of the engineers' strike leaders is with a valley of bombastic threats from the Attorney-General as to the terrible things that will happen should trouble occur again. Three British Socialist delegates are being allowed to proceed to Petrograd, but not to Stockholm, and Mr. Henderson is being sent to neutralise their influence. Mr. Barnes is being taken into the War Cabinet, and it is said that Mr. Lloyd George is anxious to secure a Labour Representative as Food Controller. Of course he is! Of course, he wants to shift from his own shoulders, and to place upon Labour, the responsibility and shame of starving our people. The man must be mad indeed who accepts the office of Food Controller without the power to eliminate private profit and more hateful to the suffering people; if the War is prolonged, as the Government intends, to the bitter end, when one side or the other—and who knows which?—is obliged to succumb to exhaustion. The War weariness of our people is growing daily: it is clearly expressed by the little crowds of women who gather around the newsagents' shops in working class districts to read the War news chalked up on the black boards.

the War news chalked up on the black boards. The Government means to continue the war for a long, long while: the calling up of men of 50 years is a proof of that!

But what will be done at Leeds? Are we ready to follow Russia: are we ready to inaugurate the movement which shall speedily make England free? If so, we must adopt a very strong and interesticate were of points. We must except to free? If so, we must adopt a very strong and independent course of action. We must cease to indulge in mere weak complaining at what the Government does, and in dull patient "doing the best we can" with the bad schemes the Government devises. We must give the Government its marching orders. We must make our own constructive plans, both in the things of war and the things of peace, for the international Socialist Commonwealth which we desire. We must struggle unfalteringly to secure the establishment of that commonwealth and refuse to tolerate the world as it is in these days of hideous warfare, or the world as we knew it before the War. And let there be no mistake about our demand for immediate Peace on the basis of "no annexations:

Our readers will regret to hear that our friend George Lansbury has been suddenly obliged to undergo an operation, which was successfully performed on May 20th. We are glad to report that he is making good progress towards a complete recovery. He will be missed at Leeds.

RUSSIA'S CALL TO PEACE

"You are deceiving yourselves, gentlemen, or, rather, you are vainly trying to delude your fellow-countrymen concerning the real policy of the Russian revolution. The revolution will not sacrifice a single soldier to help you repair 'historic injustices' committed against you. What about the 'historic injustices' committed by yourselves and your violent oppression of Ireland, India, Egypt, and innumerable peoples inhabiting all the continents of the world? If you are so anxious for 'justice' that you are prepared, in its name, to send millions of people to the grave, then, gentlemen, begin with yourselves."

This is the reply made by the Russian Council of Workers' and Soldiers' Delegates to the statements of British newspapers that the War aims of the British newspapers that the War aims of the British newspapers and Soldiers' Delegates further demands a direct "yes" or "no" to the Russian programme of "No ANNEXA-TIONS: NO INDEMNITIES." If the answer be "no," then "the Allies will be taking upon themselves the same responsibility for the continuation of the War as the Governments of Germany and Austria." The organ of the delegates Council explains annexation as:

"The foreible seizure of territory in the possession of cell explains annexation as:

ne forcible seizure of territory in the possession of er State on the day of the declaration of war. "Withunexation" means that not a drop of the people's blood

Such a declaration can only mean that if the Allies refuse to adopt the principle of "NO ANNEXATIONS; NO INDEMNITIES," Russia will refuse to continue fighting with them and will conclude a separate peace. That the formula, "no annexations: no indemnities" is intended to "no annexations: no indemnities" is intended mean precisely what is stated is clearly evidenced by the statement of the Workers' and Soldiers' Council that: "not a single Russian soldier will Food to repair 'historic injustices." Council that: "not a single Russian sounce who be sacrificed to repair historic injustices." Whether the Council has yet brought the Provisional Government fully into line we do not know, but, judging by the events which have taken place since the revolution there is no reason to doubt that the Government will soon be forced to follow the bidding of the Workers' and Soldiers' Council. Similar resolutions passed by the delegates from the front and their refusal to fight on foreign soil will reinforce the decisions of the Council.

Council.

The statement of Mr. Farbman (at one time. London correspondent of the Petrograd "Bourse Gazette," and now on the staff of Maxim Gorky's "Novoya Zizu") that "the Allies should not Whovaya Zizin') that "the Allies should not regard the Russian Revolution as a means of victory, but as a means of stopping the War," is eminently true. The progress to that end, however, appears to be, not easy and ordered, but a perpetual upward struggle, in which those who come forward to lead, lacking the courage to lead straight onward, are swiftly superseded by the awakened masses, who firmly grasp the ideal of human brotherhood. Thus, first the Czar and the Grand Dukes, then Rodzianko, Kutchkoff and Miliukoff, have been thrust aside. It seems to us that Kerensky, too, will go, for, unless the British Press misrepresents him, Kerensky also has failed to realise the greatness of the movehas failed to realise the greatness of the move-ment he would lead. When Mr. Will Thorne came back from Russia he told "The Times" that came back from Russia he told "The Limes" that the fraternising of the German and Russian troops had suddenly ceased. Were the statement true, the heavens might weep for it, for indeed the most noble ending to the War would be that the men who are fighting should lay down their arms, in realisation of their common brotherhood, and

ADULT SUFFRAGE in realisation of their common brotherhood, and say: "Friends, we will fight no more." But happily Mr. Thorne's statement is untrue: Kerensky's repeated appeals to the troops prove that it is not so. Bunakoff, at the All-Russian Council of Peasant Deputies is reported to have said: "This spring, by agreement with the Allies, we ought to have opened a general offensive, but instead of that we concluded a separate truce." That seems to sum up very clearly the situation on the Russo-German front. It is, indeed, a wonderful happening: when, oh when, will it come to pass in every theatre of War?

Whilst the Russian soldiers are holding a truce at the front, progress seems to march apace in Russia, even if only some of what we hear be true. Some weeks ago it was reported that a four-hour working day had been established, and now Skobeleff, the Socialist Minister of Labour, has submitted a proposal for the nationalisation of a part of the mining and metallurgic industries. It is said that the land is to be freed to the peasants, and a correspondent of the "Manchester Guardian" reports that in the little villages the peasants meet nightly to discuss how this shall be done:

As Russia moves towards Peace and a truer N.U.R. branches in South West Ham have passed resolutions calling on Mr. Will Thorne to nove an adult suffrage amendment to the Fran-hise Bill, and instructing the railway M.P.s t

PLENTY FOR THE RICH, FAMINE FOR THE POOR

May 24th, under the auspices of the W.S.F. May 24th, under the auspices of the W.S.F. Committee, fifteen women went, from g-class districts of Hampstead, Camden Bow, Bromley, Poplar, Custom House, and gr Town to West London to see whether could be obtained there. They went first to I's Stores in Knightsbridge, a fine large shment where everything is done in great The place was thronged with smartly dwomen, who seemed to have no difficulty using all that they required, but when the I women, who seemed to have no difficulty ining all that they required, but when the growth most assked for sugar, the high and assistants behind the counters appeared juite deaf. One of the East Enders asked to Endershouse whether the shopkeepers y sugar, and on learning that this customer en supplied, the East Ender pressed still argently to be served with half a pound, an behind the counter protested: "I don't anything out of selling half-pounds of (evidently the assistants get commission sale of some commodities). "That is a between you and your employer," replied etween you and your employer," replie an from East London; "I want half them to the assistant who had refused to the sugar, and saw it handed over. As it found that other assistants were meeting the ests of other members of the sugar-buying with contemptuous silence, the manager again requisitioned, and finally every member party secured half a pound of sugar. "What of common people there are about!" one of od's regular customers was heard to say, at most of the others cast looks of horrified issequence up narty. Our party of course. upon our party. Our party, of course d to the assistants that it is their dut a poorly dressed woman with as much because she has less time to spare, an om Harrod's the fifteen working women proed to the Army and Navy Stores in Victoria et. They saw the pampered dogs in the etes outside and the men in uniform standing e paid to look after them; the men in uniform open the doors which customers are surely e capable of opening for themselves; and the ses of leisured, over-dressed people. There no difficulty in getting sugar at the Army and y Stores. The women found that by giving name and number of any subscriber, each of nould pret in to a like of surgar over the counter and up to 7 lbs. could be bought to send home —fancy, having one's things sent home, some of them thought!

It seemed obvious, if Harrods and the Army and Navy Stores may be taken as a sample of the whole that there is plenty alike of sugar and every other commodity in the West End of London where the well-to-do go to shop. Every member of our party was struck by the contrast between shopping in these swell neighbourhoods and in the working-class districts. The experience of one of the party who lives in Bow on the previous Saturday is typical.

At 6.40 a.m. she put her little boy in the sugar queue which had already formed, though, of course, the shop was not yet open. Then she went home, dressed her children, and make their breakfast, without eating anything herself. At 8 a.m. she put a little girl in the potato a queue to relieve her little son and send him home to his breakfast.

At 8.30 a.m. the boy returned to her, and she gave him money to go to Stratford to buy bread, as it is easier to obtain it there than in her own district.

At 9.5 a.m. she got her sugar and went to relieve her little girl in the potato queue.

At 11 a.m. the greengrocer began to serve the potatoes, and some time alterwards she returned home, having spent from 6.40 a.m. buying "Sunday's dinner," the one dinner of the week.

From Harrods our party went to a Lyons' teashop, where one of the waitresses moved away a box of sugar lest they might be tempted to take any a box of sugar lest they might be tempted to take any a box of sugar lest they might be tempted to take any of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War sugar supplies.

shop, where one of the waitresses moved away a box of sugar lest they might be tempted to take any. Later on one of the party asked her whether she could get all the sugar she needed at home. She replied that she lived at Wimbledon, and that her mother had to wait three hours in a queue in order to get sugar. Some of the East Enders wondered what would happen if the waitress should succumb to the temptation to take a pound of Lyons' sugar home with her.

The sugar party then went to the Food Controller's office at Grosvenor House, Park Lane, and being already well-known, they were shown into the Duke of Westminster's magnificent library and interviewed by Mr. Austen Taylor, one of the secretaries to the Food Controller.

Miss Price introduced the deputation, which impressed upon Mr. Taylor the fact that whilst sugar is plentful in the big West End stores used by the well-to-do, it is terribly scarce in working-class districts. Each woman gave her experiences and each had a similar story to tell. Go poor mother explained that, as her husband is tubercular she is obliged to be the wage-earner for the family. Therefore she cannot

Mr. Austen Taylor stated that the West End is supplied with 60 per cent. of the pre-War sugar supplies, and that the same percentage of the pre-War supply is sent to the working class districts. The sugar party pointed out that if this were so it would be unfair, as the poor always eat too little and the rich too much, and that 60 per cent. of the West End pre-War supplies would work out at considerably more per head than the pre-War supply of the working class districts. Moreover, in munition areas the population had increased, whilst in the West End the population had decreased.

The women declared that they could not stand the present situation much longer, and that they

Mr. Austen Taylor said he hoped that they would not do such a thing in War-time.

The women replied that the present is a time of war on their children, and that it is their children for whom they are fighting.

ANY COMPLAINTS? By P. J. Dollan

When you have been in a military barracks guard-room for twenty-four hours or thereabouts an officer visits you in your cell, and after having a look round your palatial abode asks: "Have you any complaints?" At least, that was my experience, and when the question was asked of meleould but reply that I had only one complaint, which was that I wanted Peace, and protested against being detained because I had that natural and very common complaint. I had plenty of house-room, abundant food, good bedding, civil treatment, and my one complaint, therefore, was that along with many others I wanted Peace. Unfortunately it was a complaint which the officer could not remove, because, although the armed forces are fighting for Peace, it cannot be born of War.

The complaint is not measure of the reached the remainded of the war to case with a complaint of the remainded of the war will heave in sight. The common people can have Peace out emerge towards securing Peace. The Russian workers and soldiers have shown us how to follow their lead the end of the War will heave in sight. The common people can have Peace will come from those who are prepared to do things rather than from those who complain. If Peace is worth having, it is worth striving for, and no sacrifice is too great if we have the cause at heart. The national Labour and trade union organisations of Scotland have resolved in favour of Peace, the complaint is not meaning the properties.

any complaints?" At least, that was my experience, and when the question was asked of melould but reply that I had only one complaint, which was that I wanted Peace, and protested against being detained because I had that natural and very common complaint. I had plenty of house-room, abundant food, good bedding, civil treatment, and my one complaint, therefore, was that along with many others I wanted Peace. Unfortunately it was a complaint which the officer could not remove, because, although the armed forces are fighting for Peace, it cannot be born of War.

The complaint is not uncommon. Everybody has it in civil life, from the Premier down to the humblest labourer, and in the Army from Sir Douglas Haig to the newly recruited bugler bey. In other countries the complaint is universal, Governments and armies seem unable to find a remedy. All of them tell us they are fighting for Peace, but the longer they fight the further of its Peace. This would seem to teach us that fighting cannot bring Peace, and still those who try to win Peace willout fighting are maligned, persecuted, or imprisoned. It does seem strange that I and others who want Peace are imprisoned, because we express that want, at the order of a Government which went into this War to end War! Truly the world is upside down.

If the Governments of the world really wanted Peace, they would encourage Pacifists rather than imprison them, for it is only by a general acceptiance of the principles by Governments which make the country would seem to warrant the belief that the Governments on their countries. In any case it is idle to expect Governments which make War to make Peace. Burglars don't make War to make Peace, and experience of the principles by Governments which make War to make Peace, and experience of the principles by Governments which make War to make Peace and the fact that such facilities are withheld in this country would seem to warrant the belief that the Governments in other countries. In any case it is idle to expect Governments which

Pre-War supplies is one which we receive without any sense of conviction. A member of the Poplar Municipal Committee on Food recently stated that only 25 per cent. of the pre-War sugar supplies are coming into the district, and when questioned on behalf of the committee shopkeepers in the district draw an exceedingly gloomy picture of the general food situation. One shopkeeper in the Roman Road, Bow, in the Poplar Borough, says that the shortage of sugar, margarine, and condensed milk is acute, and that as munition work has brought many more families into the district, the Sugar Commission ought really to have sent here an increase rather than a decrease on the pre-War supplies. On the other hand, many shopkeepers sadly say that if they could get only 50 per cent. of their pre-War supplies they could manage very well, as the high prices are forcing their customers to eat less. One woman, who bought her business from an Austrian after the anti-German riots, is allowed no sugar by the Comission because she did not sell it in 1915.

One shopekeeper, who complains of the shortage of margarine and condensed milk is a system that created prompting their customers to eat less. One woman, who bought her business from an Austrian after the anti-German riots, is allowed no sugar by the Comission because she did not sell it in 1915.

One shopekeeper who complains of the shortage of margarine and condensed milk, says that the little shops, because they have no facilities for carting their supplies, buy such goods from the vorkers when they like to claim it.

It arge multiple shops which has branches all over London says that his firm has plenty of condensed milk, because it imports it, and that his firm is trying to crush out the smaller shops.

The St. Pancras Food Control Committee reports that:

"Certain foods are not procurable at all in certain poor neighbourhoods and yet can be had without any difficulty at the big West End stores."

Surely the case

little shops, because they have no facilities for carting their supplies, buy such goods from the bigger shops of the district, and these bigger shops, being now only able to get enough to supply the retail, refuse to sell to the little shops. Another small shopkeeper in the same road makes the same complaint, declaring that the big shopkeepers are endeavouring to crush out their little neighbours. He urges that the little shopkeepers who live in the district treat their customers with greater consideration than do the big companies owning many shops. The little shopkeepers are working only for a weekly wage: he himself draws £3 a week out of his business, and does not look to make any profit beyond that; if he buys food cheaply, he sells it cheaply; whereas, he says, the big comany profit beyond that; if he buys food cheaply, he sells it cheaply; whereas, he says, the big companies are out for making profits, and whether they buy food cheaply or not, they sell it for as much as they can get. He says that he and men of his sort are at present losing heavily: he lost £3 5s., more than a week's wage, in five weeks' time. He further protests that whilst one of the branches of the Home and Colonial Stores was only fined £1 for refusing to sell sugar except with other commodities, small traders in Whitechapel were fined £12, a crushing sum to them, for the same offence.

the Department offering to send us a stereotypeu block of the words "EAT LESS BREAD" for insertion in our columns. This appears to us typical of the Food Control activities!

Food rioting has begun in Glasgow, 400 women having stormed a potato lorry.

Thirty thousand people demonstrated on Glasgow Green on Sunday, May 27th, to demand the resignation of Lord Devonport, to protest against the granting of the Freedom of the City to Lloyd George, and the increase of salaries to highly-paid Corporation officials. Glasgow is not alone in its revolt against the system that creates plenty for the rich and famine for the poor. The "Daily Express" reports that Lord Devonport has resigned. He was never the right man for the policy is more important than the personality. We wish to have all the food that there is equally distributed: we wish to abolish rich and poor, and to secure plenty for all.

Mrs. Boyce sprang up and said so that everyone could hear: "If you can do on 1 lb. of bread a week, you have money to buy any substitutes, which we cannot only fined £1 for refusing to sell sugar except with other commodities, small fraders in White-chapel were fined £12, a crushing sum to them, for the same offence.

There are many opinions on the report of the Speaker's Conference, but one out the American Conference, but one out the Speaker's Conference in Speaker Speakers Conference Speakers Confere ble them to "sweep the city." It will thus be that such practices as that referred to are conplated—and undoubtedly acted upon.

n 1912, the proportion of votes cast for Labour entitled them to 13.66 seats and under P.R. 14 seats were obtained. Anti-Labour, according to the votes polled, was entitled to 16.34 seats and actually obtained 16 seats.

Thus it will be seen that the system of P.R. with the use of the single transferable vote secures representation in proportion to the voting strength of the Workers' Suffrage Federation Annual Conference

Annual Conference of the Workers' Suffrage Federation was held. Delegates representing the London and provincial branches were present; also some members as visitors. Miss Norah Smyth, Hon. Financial Secretary, took the chair. Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, Hon. Sec., read the report of the work of the Federation, which was most comprehensive, including the holding of nearly 1,000 propaganda meetings. The report will be printed shortly, and those interested will be able to read at leisure of the tremendous volume of waried work accomplished. The officers elected were:—Hon. Sec., Miss Sylvia Pankhurst; Hon. Financial Secretary, Miss Norah Smyth; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Edgar Lansbury; Hon. Assistant Sec., Mrs. Minnie Lansbury. The new National Committee consists of Mrs. Bouvier, Mrs. Casey, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Drake, Mr. Fuller, Mrs. Hart, Nurse Hebbes, Miss Lagsding, Mrs. Pascoe, Miss Price, Mr. Redgrove, B.Sc., Mrs. Scurr.

The following are among the resolutions which were passed wearinguely.

Mr. Redgrove, B.Sc., Mrs. Scurr.

The following are among the resolutions which were passed unanimously:

This Conference considers that the proposals contained in the Report of the Speaker's Conference are unsatisfactory, and hereby declares that no franchise measure will be acceptable to the working class unless it provides for:

(a) Complete Adult Suffrage for men and women for Parliamentary and Local Government purposes.

(b) The abolition of Plural Voting and of the University Franchise.

(c) The abolition of the Pauper Disqualification.

(d) Continuous registration to secure that removal from one part of the country to another shall not disqualifiy.

(e) Provisions to enable absentee voters to record their votes for the home constituency in the place where qualify.

(e) Provisions to enable absentee voters to record their votes for the home constituency in the place where they happen to be at the time of the election.

And further urges the Government to introduce a measure embodying these provisions without delay; and expresses its determination to oppose any franchise measure which falls short of Adult Suffrage.

Country a scheme for child pensions which shall provide that on application by the parent or parents of a child an adequate allowance shall be paid to such parent or parents on the child's behalf until the child is 16 years of age: these pensions to be sent by post and administered by the Board of Education.

That this Conference considers that in view of his past association with the Wholesale Provision trade, and his well-known opposition to the interests and claims of the workers, Lord Devonport is absolutely unsuitable to hold the office of Food Controller, and calls for his immediate resignation. This Conference further calls for the nationalisation of food and necessaries with local control by the local authorities and the complete elimination of private profit. It declares that if under national control there is found to be a genuine shortage, an equal share of rationing shall be resorted to.

g shain of resorted and the state of the sta

This Conference recognises that modern wars are of capitalist origin, and that whilst private competitive trading continues the danger of war will not be entirely wiped out. Whilst working to secure a co-operative system of society which shall render wars impossible, the Conference urges:

(a) The establishment of an International Council for the settlement of international affairs. The members of this Council to be men and women elected upon an adult suffrage basis to represent the various nations, the decisions of the International Council to be ratified by the National Parliament.

(b) The establishment of international Free Trade and the abolition of "spheres of influence," the internationalisation of the trade routes and narrow seas and the freedom of the seas.

This Conference calls for the immediate repeal of the

This Conference calls for the immediate repeal of the Military Service Acts, and sends its hearty congratulations to the men who have resisted them.

This Conference affirms its determined opposition to In-dustrial Conscription and its determination to resist it, and recognising that the so-called National Service Scheme is of this nature, this Conference calls upon men and women not to enrol under the scheme.

This Conference pledges itself to work to secure that women shall be made eligible to sit as Members of Parlia ment, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, Jurors and for all elective and administrative offices.

That the Executive Committee be urged to co-operate in every way in agreement with the aims of the W.5 F. with other societies, especially Labour and Socialist organisations whose programmes include adult suffrage on a democratic basis.

The W.S.F. urges the enactment of provisions for:

(a) Establishing the Referendum.

(b) The Initiative.

That the referendum be used within the Federation for the ratification of resolutions adopted by the Annual Connew departures in policy where urgency and rapidity of action are not essential. The National Committee to have it in its discretion to decide that it shall itself take the responsibility on any particular occasion for sending out voting papers direct to each member, but as a general rule the National Committee shall not be responsible for doing more than sending out notices of referenda to the branches and the branches to be responsible for conveying the same to individual members: referenda to be taken either on the initiative of the National Committee or on that of one-third of the branches.

That the organ of the Federation be called "The Workers' Dreadnought."

That this Conference, realising that the capitalist system of society is irreconcilable with the freedom and the just demands of the workers, urges the W.S.F. to work for the abolition of that system and for the establishment of the Socialist Commonwealth in which the means of production and distribution shall be employed in the interests duction and distribution shall be employed in the interest of the people.

That this Conference hears with great satisfaction the delegates of the LLP, and Bs.P. have won the right to proceed to Russia, and desires to impress upon the delgates the importance and magnitude of the demand in the country for complete Adult Suffrage. The Conference als desires that this demand should be explained to the free people of Russia who are now the standard bearers of Free dom in Europe. We also desire, through the English delgates, to congratulate the Russian people on the magnificant demand which they have addressed to their own an to the other beligierent Governments for a statement of their terms of peace and for a general renunciation of the remaining of the standard powerful efforts bring about a general Peace on these lines, and trusts the such efforts will be continued until complete success he been achieved.

ANOTHER ARMY CLOTHING SCANDAL

Already there is another Army clothing bribery scandal, and, from what we hear, the evil continues unchecked. We are convinced that thieving is also rife in the Army Pay Departments, the wives and dependants being the persons defrauded.
