"He was afraid that women voters would be plied with drink - but chiefly feared an increase of power would be wielded by the priests & parsons."

Jacob Bright described by one great historian as having a greater measure of intellectual daring and suppleness than his more famous brother

my dear B.G.

I intended to get a "comic" card but I was later than I thought from lunch ~~so~~ have to resort to my scibble.

Many many happy returns from Zelia & myself; with good wishes for many more July 4th's & thank you again for all your many kindnesses to me over the past years - Warm regards,

As always
