Notes and News.

Watch the Bill's Progress.

Parliament reassembles next Tuesday, and it is expected that the House of Commons will take the Committee stage of the Representation of the People Bill almost immediately afterwards. Every suffragist should follow this stage of the measure with the closest attention, remembering that all parts of the Bill are of importance. Some of those who wish to wreck the Bill will come forward with specious and plausible amendments, which may very likely take the fancy of persons unaccustomed to practical political affairs. On this occasion let us remember Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien. An ideal measure on paper is a pleasant and attractive thing. For us, an Act on the Statutebook which admits women to the franchise of their nation is an infinitely better one.

The Government and the Conference.

Lord Courtney has already pointed out that it is dangerous to try to make substantial changes in the franchise scheme as it was put forward by members of all parties assembled in the Speaker's Conference. The Bill has been carefully drafted with the intention that it should reflect the wishes of the Conference. In some particulars, however, the general proposals, when reinterpreted by the Parliamentary draftsman, have manifestly taken a somewhat different shape from that which their original creators had in view. There would seem in such cases as these to be good reason for asking the House to accept such an emendation of the Bill as the members of the Conference (or a substantial majority of them) consider to be a more accurate reflection of their own proposals. The House has already determined to have a Bill embodying these proposals, and to attain that end the Government has had the present Bill drafted ; therefore, both the Commons and the Government will be ready to support such alterations suggested during the Committee stage as can be proved to be required to achieve this particular object.

Women and Men in the War Services.

Mr. Dickinson told the House of Commons on May 23rd that the Bill did not rightly reflect the desires of the Conference for the enfranchisement of men and women in the war services. Persons entering those services, whether in time of peace or war, generally had to leave their homes and to move about according to the requirements of their work, and the intention of the Conference, according to his view, was that a kind of service franchise should be instituted to meet these special conditions. He and Mr. Basil Peto have now tabled an instruction to be moved in Committee, the purport of which will be to delete all reference to the period of this or any other war. The following sentence shows the chief alteration which has been made in the clause :—

"Any person to whom this section applies shall be registered as a Parliamentary elector for any constituency in which he ordinarily resides, but for his naval and military duties."

This is a good deal simpler than the wording in the Bill, which implies that members of the war services who have to move about when no war is taking place lose their claim to vote. The categories of persons to whom the clause applies remain unchanged, and include, as may be remembered, those who are "serving in any work of the British Red Cross Society, or the St• John Ambulance Association, or any other body with a similar object." We imagine that medical women in the R.A.M.C. are included in another part of the same clause, which defines "service of a naval or military character for which payment is made out of money provided by Parliament."

Tenants of Unfurnished Rooms.

Another point made by Mr. Dickinson during the Second Reading debate was that the Conference had not intended definitely to exclude lodgers from the franchise, though it had removed the "lodger" qualification as such. It is in this sense that Mr. Jacobsen, we imagine, has drafted his instruction to enable the tenant of an unfurnished room or rooms in London to qualify as an elector, and that Mr. Yeo, carrying the matter still further, wishes to enfranchise tenants of unfurnished rooms anywhere in the Kingdom.

Reconstruction and Re-Employment.

The enormous tasks for which the nation ought to be busily preparing formed the theme of an imaginative article in The Observer last Sunday. For nearly three years already many industries have been held up and others have been carried on at low power. Many people have lost their fitness for the work at which formerly they earned good wages; losing such fitness by change of conditions even when not by actual disablement. There is a great deal of preliminary organisation to be carried out; and it is necessary for the Government and local bodies to be ready to take a firm hold of many supplies and services in order that the difficulties of transition from war to peace, and from shortage of skilled labour to excess of poor labour, should not be exploited to the detriment of the weak. The Government ought not to be content simply to put a "representative" woman or two upon the Reconstruction Committee, but should offer a general scheme of work to local committees, composed equally of men and women, and give them plenty of scope to make their own suggestions.

NATIONAL BABY WEEK.

JUNE 1, 1917.

The Farmer and the Women Land Workers.

Having lately returned from a visit to a very rural corner of the Midlands, my optimism about woman's work on the land has suffered a rude shock. In London, as one reads one's daily paper, one had an inspiriting vision of an army of healthy, capable young women, picturesquely arrayed, descending upon the deserted countryside, bringing comfort and relief to the heart of the farmer, harassed by the difficulty of "carrying on" with his best men gone to the Army.

There may be-I like to think there are-districts in England where this happy vision has been realised. I fear I must tell a different tale of the one I have just left. I had been away for two years—years in which to me, as to most people, life had seemed to move at a pace which it never attained in the old days, whirling habits, opinions, and one's very mode of life into the melting-pot of war. I was prepared for great changes in the village I had known so well, and felt in anticipation a little sentimental regret that it could not have remained untouched—a relic of the days of peace. I need not have worried. As far as I can see, my old home has every intention of so remaining. A few lads taken for the Army who might, in any case, have sought work in a town by now. One or two old-age pensioners, stumping the lanes rejuvenated, having emerged from their well-earned retirement to do "odd jobs about the village-those are all the outward signs of change. Of women outdoor workers nothing is to be seen. Fine sturdy specimens of manhood, sons and nephews of the farmers, exempted from the Army as indispensables, carry the milk pails from cowshed to dairy (in parenthesis it may be said that the milk is generally carried uncovered through the street, and an analysis of its contents might prove discouraging to the consumer)

To get at the mind of the farmer respecting the war, as it concerns him, is not easy. He is not, as a rule, a great reader of newspapers except local ones, but just lately a dim perception seems to have come to him that he is being blamed, outside his own community, and men naturally cautious and reserved, are disposed to shut up like oysters in consequence. They may tell you, if questioned, that they cannot get labour, and there-fore have reduced, or will be obliged shortly to reduce, their We in the towns have been told that substitute labour, stock. both male and female, is to be had for the asking, and we know for a fact that members of the Women's Land Army, already through their training period, are waiting to be placed on the land. It is very easy, and likewise very unprofitable, to relieve one's feelngs by abusing the "stick-in-the-mud farmer." Doubtless, he might obtain the extra labour required if he is to undertake the increased cultivation of foodstuffs urged on him from all sides, if he bestirred himself, and went about it the right way. To those with business training it seems a very simple thing to find out the right place to apply, make your application, and if it has no result, to push the matter further. Only those intimate with him realise the countryman's distaste for the pen, and his preference for a transaction which can be carried out verbally. Perhaps, in order to make a townsman appreciate that point of view, it might be necessary to give him. a long day's work out-of-doors, and then, just as he was settling with a pipe by the fireside, urge him to hunt up writing materials and start wrestling with official forms. Cannot something be done to bring the possibilities of substitute labour to the farmer's door-step, as it were? There are many well-educated people living in our villages, too old, or not strong enough, to leave their homes to do war-work, who could help in this direction. If supplied with full information by the various bodies responsible for placing men and women on the land, they might visit the farmers in their own neighbourhoods, many of whom would be known to them, place the possibilities before them, and if favourably received, give their help in making the necessary applications

Doubtless, this has already been done in districts where there is an active War Agricultural Committee.

In the matter of the employment of women in districts where it is as yet an untried experiment, a practical demonstration would be of more use than any amount of theory. Let every country resident who wishes well to the Women's Land Army employ, if they possibly can, a woman, carefully selected, as a shining example, in farm or garden. The British farmer is not a "hustler," but he is not a fool either on his own ground. The best, chance of convincing him of the utility of employing women is to give him the chance of seeing a woman going about unusual tasks out-of-doors in a competent and businesslike manner. • As most of our readers will already know, "National Baby Week" begins on July 1st, and our number for June 29th will be specially devoted to forwarding its objects. These are thus excellently summarised in a pamphlet issued by the promoters of the week :—

"The prime aim of the National Baby Week is to help to save the lives of 50,000 babies every year, and to improve the health of the whole infant community.

' The immediate objects are as follows :-

"(1) To arouse the sense of racial responsibility in every citizen in order to secure to every child born in the United Kingdom a birthright of mental and bodily health.

 $^{\prime\prime}$  (2) To explain, assist, and extend the work of the various children's and mothers' welfare societies.

"(3) To promote the immediate provision of additional crèches, visitors, mothers' schools, and maternity centres.

"(4) To assist in the combating of disease, ignorance, careessness, and the evils arising from improper conditions.

" (5) To raise a large and adequate fund for achieving these times and objects with the least possible delay."

Because the war is involving the absence of mothers through war work, and thus menacing the children with additional dangers.

Because so many fighting men have left their children as a sacred trust to the nation.

Because the war has brought home to the nation the fact that a nation's strength chiefly consists of the mental and bodily strength of its citizens.

(b) Mothers of all classes.

(c) The general public.

Because during the war a false idea of economy has got abroad in some places, and the expenditure on health and sanitation has been reduced in spite of a declaration from the Central Authorities that reduction of expenditure on such matters is undesirable.

A PIONEER OF THE WOMEN'S MOVEMENT.

The Manchester Guardian of May 25th gives an interesting account of the life and work of the late Mrs. Belva Lockwood, first woman candidate for the Presidency of the United States, which is well worth quoting. The article tells us that she was born in New York in 1830, her parents being farmers. "She 'taught school' from fourteen to eighteen, when she married Mr. McNall, a young farmer and saw miller. Four years later she was left a widow with one child, and resumed work as a teacher. At this time the discovery that men teachers were being paid double the salary of women started in her mind the ambition to secure justice for her own sex."

Mrs. Lockwood took a degree at Genesee College, and continued teaching till 1868, when she married again. Later on, she started an agitation for the removal of the rule forbidding women to practice in the law courts. Congressman Benjamin Butler introduced a Bill for her which was carried in both Houses in 1879, and opened all the Federal Courts to women lawyers. She herself had been engaged until quite recently in several important cases.

recently in several important cases. Says The Manchester Guardian:—<sup>4</sup> Mrs. Lockwood's dominant characteristics have been described as—Courage, pugnacity, sweet temper, shrewdness, and alertness. . . . She avoided stimulating anything like a spirit of antagonism between men and women."

150 GOOD APPOINTMENTS OPEN.

The Women Police Service has still a considerable number of vacancies in the provinces for those who are willing to train. Leisured, well-educated women are particularly asked to come forward to undertake work which is not only patriotic, but which would provide a healthy, interesting, life. The course of training occupies three weeks, and includes drill, first aid, attendance at police courts, lectures on laws relating to women and children, factories, &c. Recruits are paid 255. weekly while training. The salary commences at  $\frac{1}{2}$  per week on appointment. Correspondence should be addressed to the Recruiting Officer, Women Police Service, St. Stephen's House, Westminster. Interviews from 2.30 to 4.30, Saturdays excepted. JUNE I, 1917.

THE NEED FOR WIDOWED MOTHERS' PENSIONS.

At a meeting held at the Central Hall, Westminster, on May 23rd, the Earl of Lytton explained what is meant by the "Mothers' Pensions." It was not, he said, payment of term nothers as such, but only a maintenance grant to those mothers who through various unfortunate circumstances have been reduced to destitution. In dealing with these mothers there were two alternatives : either to take the children away, placing them n institutions or scattered homes, or boarding them out, or to give to the mother some means of providing for the children her own home. We in this country adopted both methods. To our disgrace, we had still a large number of children in the vorkhouse, but before the war the Local Government Board was rapidly carrying out the policy of removing children from mixed workhouses, and providing for them outside. We did sometimes give outdoor relief to widowed mothers; but this ought to be the rule. The underlying principle of the Poor Law was to punish poverty. It was right to make all able-bodied men work, but women with a family of young children could only be forced to go out to work at the expense of the children. It was undesirble from every point of view to make the children suffer for the poverty of their parents.

Judge Neil, of Chicago, explained his scheme of Mothers' Pensions as adopted in thirty states of America. Early in January, 1911, he went into the juvenile court in Chicago and saw the first case for the day tried under Juvenile Court Law. It was that of a mother with five children; the mother was so weak physically that she could not stand, the children were clinging around her skirts. The testimony was that the father had died three years before; the mother, a good woman, had gone out washing for three years in an attempt to support her children; the excessive work had broken down her health; she was unable to earn more money; the landlord ordered her to move, and, having no place to go, she was ordered into court.

was unable to early more indicely, the failured ordered into court. The judge on the bench said : "Officer, what is the testimony in this case?" The probation officer said : "This woman has no place to go with her children; she is unable to support them, and I think the children should be taken away from her and given to someone who can support them." The mother's head dropped in stupor, and I said : "Judge, wouldn't it be kinder and more humane if you took the mother out and shot her before you take the children away from her for ever?" He then asked who paid for the care of the children when they were taken away from their mother, and was told that the taxpayer paid ten dollars a month. "It would be cheaper to let the children's own mother go on looking after them, and give her the money to do it," was his suggestion.

' That case," said Judge Neil, " woke me up."

"I went to the State Legislature of Illinois, told them the story of this woman, and asked : 'Why not hire the children's own mother to look after them? '"

"Why, certainly," was the reply. And the Legislature bassed that law without a single dissenting vote. After that ludge Neil went from State to State, urging this law, till now t has been passed in thirty States, and has answered well in all.

On the mothers the law has had an excellent effect. It has been found that in many cases women failed to look after their children properly because the constant fear of failing and having the children taken away had a paralysing effect. Over-fatigue also acts as a poison and makes the mother degenerate. "You cannot expect a mother to be efficient if she has the double work of earning, and the care of her children and home."

The new plan has also greatly benefited children. It had reduced considerably the number of boys and girls charged before the Juvenile Courts (a large proportion of whom are the children of mothers who are out all day at work and not able to look after them), while little ones who are at home with their own mother are almost always healthier and happier than those boarded out with strangers. Still greater is the contrast between such children and those in institutions. Of the latter Judge Neil stated : "We in America have found that children reared in institutions, when they grow up and marry, and the pressure to support their children becomes strong, desert them. We have also found that children who are outraged by being taken away from their parents show the result in after life by a lack of the respect for the rights of others that normally cared for children develop.

The pensions scheme is also economical. - It costs considerably less to pay for children to be looked after in their own home than to board them out, and about a third of the cost of maintaining them in institutions."

In answer to questions after the meeting, Judge Neil explained that applications for "pensions" are heard at the Children's Court. If the pension is granted the mother is put on the county pay-roll, in the same way as the county judge or janitor, and gets her cheque every month. A certain amount of supervision is exercised by the Probation Officers of the Court (many of whom are women), who report to Court if the money granted is not being properly used. If, in spite of kindly advice as to managing her allowance, the mother proves incapable of handling the money properly, the pension may be revoked, but there have been few cases of abuse.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF LOCAL OPINION.

Sir George Joulney, M.P., speaking in place of Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck, who was taking part in the debate in the House, pointed out that the Government has given the Board of Guardians the power to remove children from the workhouses, and that local opinion is responsible for the way in which the children of each district are treated. There had been a very great advance in the treatment of children of late years. Poor Law Schools, though there were many objections to them, were better than the workhouse. The system of village communities, or scattered homes in urban districts under good foster-mothers has certain educational advantages, and the practice of giving out relief to widowed or deserted women with children was becoming more common.

Unfortunately, the-way in which such relief was administered did not bring the best out of the mothers. The tendency of our local authorities was to send the mothers out to work and then give them a miserable dole to make up the amount needed to keep the home together. Sir George gave as an instance of this niggardly dealing the case of a woman who earned 15s. a week by charing and had to pay a neighbour 11s. to look after her children, the guardians only saving 4s. a week by this arrangement, while both mother and children suffered. Another case was that of the mother of nine children obliged to take in washing, of whom a young lady visitor made a severe report because her cottage was not neat in the morning.

There had been a great advance in the separation allowances paid to the soldier's wife, and the pension to his widow. This had set up a standard that ought to lead to the improvement in the allowance made to mothers under Poor Law.

Miss Maude Royden pleaded for reform, and on a really big scale—for something that would really raise the idea of motherhood on to a higher plane. Mothers should be freed from the constant strain of overwork which took the heart out of them by imposing a burden too heavy to be borne, and should be helped to feel that in bearing and rearing children they were performing a beautiful and glad service to the nation. The great difficulty in obtaining a really adequate scale of endowment was the low esteem in which people in this country held the work of mothers. Nothing was done for mothers on a large scale except scolding them, and this was done on a really magnificent scale. There was need to rouse a sense of the value to the State of the work of mothers—a work a least as vitally important as the war work which had won so much recognition, and far more difficult.

TO SUFFRAGISTS!

Order "The Common Cause" of June 8th.

Our special number of June 8th will be of great interest to all workers in the Women's Franchise Movement. It will be a record and appreciation of the work of one who has contributed in exceptional measure to the success of our "Common Cause"—the Parliamentary Vote for Women.

How Did Your Member Vote?

Readers of THE COMMON CAUSE will wish to know how their Members of Parliament voted on the occasion of the Second Reading in the House of Commons on May. 23rd of the Representation of the People Bill-the measure which provides for Women's Suffrage. Those M.P.s who voted with the 329 Ayes " or who were tellers on that side are supporters of the Bill. The 40 who voted with the " Noes," together with their tellers, opposed the Bill, and were in favour of the amendment moved by Colonel Sanders. Every suffragist reader should be careful to note whether the Member for her own constituency voted for or against the Second Reading, or was among the absentees

An analysis of the foregoing lists shows that the majority of 331 (including tellers) consisted of 173 Liberals, 112 Unionists, 24 Labour members, 21 Nationalists, and one Independent. The minority of 42 (with tellers) consisted exclusively of Unionists. It is important to compare these lists with those which resulted from the vote on March 28th on the question whether a Bill should be drafted on the lines of the resolutions of the Speaker's Conference. The amendment proposed on that occasion by Mr. Clavell Salter was very much the same in purport as the amend-ment proposed last week by Colonel Sanders. Both dwelt on the unsuitability of passing a Franchise Bill in war time, and went on to express the desire that soldiers and sailors should be enabled to vote at the next General Election. It might, therefore, be expected that the lines of cleavage would be much the same on the two occasions. The situation, however, was mani-festly altered by the fact that the question whether there should be a new Franchise Bill at all had been conclusively settled by the earlier vote. The Government had now brought forward a Bill of wide scope, had watched over the drafting of it, and obviously meant it to become law. The question which previous opponents might therefore ask themselves was "ought not the whole House of Commons now to show a united front by supporting the Government of all parties that has framed this measure, on the recommendations of a Conference of all parties? We made our protest last March. It is open to us to offer wellconsidered amendments during the Committee stage, though not to be persistently obstructive. We ought certainly to vote for the Second Reading now."

TELLERS FOR THE NOES.--Colonel Sauders and Colonel Archer-Shee.

A SOLATIUM FOR ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS.

Lady Strachey offers an ingenious suggestion in the following letter :-"In view of the strong probability that women will be politically enfranchised in the near future, I should like to make a suggestion that will, I trust, bring consolation and hope to Mr. Arnold Ward, Colonel Archer Shee, and all those anti-suffragists who base an objection to any woman having a vote on the ground that the great majority of women dislike and disapprove of having a vote. "Of course, if this great majority simply abstain from using the vote thrust on them, the small minority of women suffragists will be rendered quite innocuous; but the plan I have to propose would do much more than this. Let every one of this majority place her vote at the absolute dis-posal of her nearest male relative; there must be no choice as to the relative, for that might amount to a political bias on the part of the woman voter, which it is the object of this plan to avoid. Its adoption would not only nullify the effect of the proposed Clause in the Representation of the People Bill, but would actually ensure to male electors a greatly increased preponderance; for we must remember that the votes thus placed at their service would be, as they assure us, those of the great majority of the women of this country. the women of this country

"I cannot but this country. "I cannot but think that a little reflection will recommend this sugges-tion to the anti-suffragist members of Parliament and others, as not only the best possible but as a truly triumphant remedy for the impending disaster of women receiving a share of political emancipation."

"Score of THE FRANCHISE."-Our apologies are due to Miss Buchan for having last week misinterpreted the point of her criticism, which was that the present Bill may only enfranchise four millions of women "who get their own living"-not a total of only four millions of women of all categories. The mistake in our comment was unfortunately detected too late to make the necessary correction.

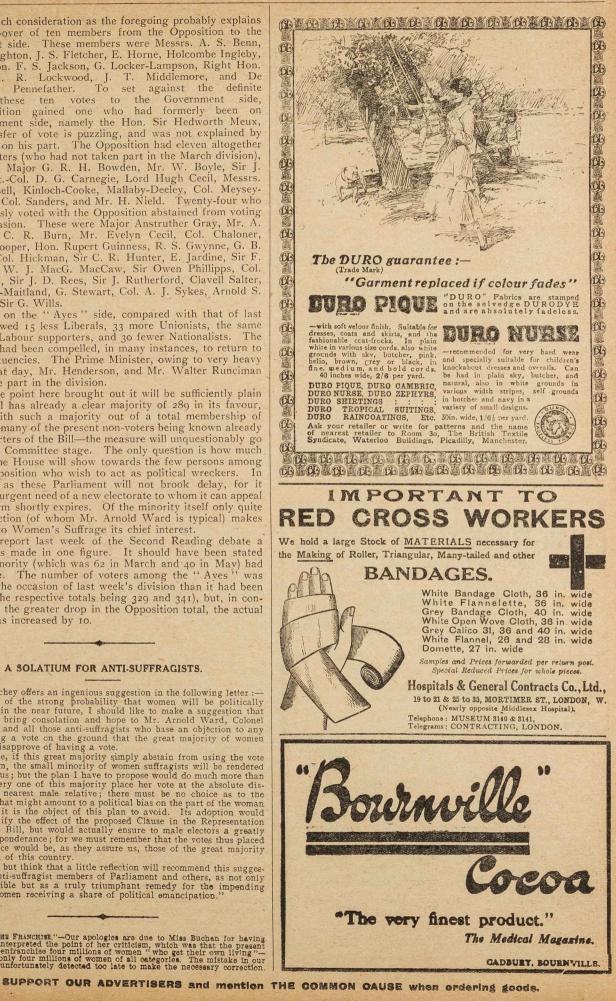

Some such consideration as the foregoing probably explains the change-over of ten members from the Opposition to the Government side. These members were Messrs. A. S. Benn, Government side. These members were wesses, A. 3. bern, U. H. Broughton, J. S. Fletcher, E. Horne, Holcombe Ingleby, Lt.-Col. Hon. F. S. Jackson, G. Locker-Lampson, Right Hon. Lt.-Col. A. R. Lockwood, J. T. Middlemore, and De Fonblanque Pennefather. To set against the definite the Opposition gained one who had formerly been on the Government side, namely the Hon. Sir Hedworth Meux, whose transfer of vote is puzzling, and was not explained by my speech on his part. The Opposition had eleven altogether any speech on his part. The Opposition had eleven anogenetic new supporters (who had not taken part in the March division), these being Major G. R. H. Bowden, Mr. W. Boyle, Sir J. Jackson, Lt.-Col. D. G. Carnegie, Lord Hugh Cecil, Messrs. Eyres-Monsell, Kinloch-Cooke, Mallaby-Deeley, Col. Meysey-Thompson, Col. Sanders, and Mr. H. Nield. Twenty-four who had previously voted with the Opposition abstained from voting on this occasion. These were Major Anstruther Gray, Mr. A. Bird, Col. C. R. Burn, Mr. Evelyn Cecil, Col. Chaloner, Sir R. A. Cooper, Hon. Rupert Guinness, R. S. Gwynne, G. B. Haddock, Col. Hickman, Sir C. R. Hunter, E. Jardine, Sir F. Lowe, Mr. W. J. MacG. MacCaw, Sir Owen Phillipps, Col. Pryce-Jones, Sir J. D. Rees, Sir J. Rutherford, Clavell Salter, D. Steel-Maitland, G. Stewart, Col. A. J. Sykes, Arnold S. Ward, and Sir G. Wills.

The list on the "Ayes" side, compared with that of last March, showed 15 less Liberals, 33 more Unionists, the same number of Labour supporters, and 30 fewer Nationalists. The last-named had been compelled, in many instances, to return to their constituencies. The Prime Minister, owing to very heavy work on that day, Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Walter Runciman did not take part in the division. From the point here brought out it will be sufficiently plain that the Bill has already a clear majority of 289 in its favour, and that with such a majority out of a total membership of about 400—many of the present non-voters being known already o be supporters of the Bill-the measure will unquestionably go brough the Committee stage. The only question is how much toleration the House will show towards the few persons among the tiny opposition who wish to act as political wreckers. In such times as these Parliament will not brook delay, for it ealises the urgent need of a new electorate to whom it can appeal when its term shortly expires. Of the minority itself only quite small fraction (of whom Mr. Arnold Ward is typical) makes pposition to Women's Suffrage its chief interest.

In our report last week of the Second Reading debate a stake was made in one figure. It should have been stated that the minority (which was 62 in March and 40 in May) had allen by 22. The number of voters among the "Ayes" was 12 less on the occasion of last week's division than it had been March (the respective totals being 329 and 341), but, in conequence of the greater drop in the Opposition total, the actual majority was increased by 10.

The Vote for Valour?

The vote as a reward-the vote as a D.S.O. decoration-the vote for valour. It is remarkable how often this one idea, in various guises, appears just now in anti-suffragist argument. Nor do we find it there alone. Many thinkers, who have passed over since the war from indifferentism or even from the " anti position to the support of Women's Suffrage, have been influ-enced by the same association of ideas. The anti-suffragists, however, are the most inconsequent in their use of this particular Some of them exclaim indignantly that the vote is being notion. demanded by or for women in recognition of the patriotic sacri fices made by women during the war, and the same persons will, almost with the same breath, demand that the vote be given to soldiers and sailors, because of the splendid heroism displayed by the members of those Services.

There must be some truth at the base of an argument which finds so much acceptance. But it is neither the main truth nor the sole truth to which the distribution of the franchise is now, or has been in the past, adjusted. Most intelligent readers of THE COMMON CAUSE have only to look back into their own nemories to recall anti-franchise arguments which were very different from this. The opponents of the extension of the franchise (whether to men or women) were wont to say that the vote should only be exercisable by persons with " a stake in the country," by whom they meant persons of large property. Sometimes they described the eligible voters as " persons of the educated classes," but education was generally a polite euphemism for wealth. There was little talk in those days of the heroism expected of a wealthy gentleman as a passport to the polling booth. Political life, it is true, was described as a rough-and-tumble," ill-suited to the constitution of fragile womanhood; but even the man who, in an old music-hall song, came back home with his hat bashed in," did not, I fancy, we his misfortune to the vicissitudes of political strife. who were anxious to keep voting powers in the hands of the few were, in former days, the least accessible to the modern argu-ment that those whose lives are most endangered by serving their country should receive the vote before all others. The plea that those who are not liable for war-service should be excluded from the electorate was certainly sometimes heard, but only as an argument against the enfranchisement of women. It was not carried to its conclusion on the other side by being used as a means of securing the franchise for every man in His Majesty's Forces. Until lately no organised endeavour has been made to restore to soldiers and sailors the voting powers which they lose through the roaming conditions of their service.

Practically everyone is agreed that soldiers and sailors of full age should be enabled to exercise the Parliamentary vote. This agreement is so general as to obscure the fact that people rrive at it by quite different paths of thinking. Mrs. Humphry Ward, in a letter published in The Times of May 23rd, arrives at it by the heroic path. She thinks of the young lives given for the British cause, and thinking of these noble tragedies, she says that " the true and ultimate sanction of the Parliamentary vote becomes clearer than ever. It is the physical force, the bone and blood of men! Everything else is subsidiary— valuable and necessary—but subsidiary." We who remember the days when Mrs. Humphry Ward used to write weightily of the great, all-round political knowledge, the ripe, well-informed judgment, the power of balancing impartially the most com-plicated considerations, &c., which were the prime qualifications needed by the voter (but not, of course, possessed by women) may well be surprised to find that soldiers and sailors are to be, as it were, excused their "General Know-ledge" paper. Nevertheless, we may be quite willing to agree that soldiers and sailors should have their votes. If they are worthy to be members of these great Services they have a right to take their share with other citizens in returning member to Parliamen

But Mrs. Humphry Ward, mounted on her heroic horse, rides too far. It is not heroism on a nation's behalf which is the ble qualification for the vote. If it were so, then women doctors, urses, ship-stewardesses, and other women who have risked heir own lives to sustain the life of other British people could not, even on Mrs. Ward's line of argument, be excluded from register

But surely the claim of the people of both sexes to choose se who are to govern them and legislate for them rests on a ich broader, more general, and more common-sense foundation. country is the inheritance of its people, who hold it as trustees the generations to come. A nation in action can only act ith the highest effect if it acts as a whole. And to be able to

The Future of the Girls' Club Movement.

How will the new scheme of elementary and secondary lucation outlined by Mr. Fisher affect the attendance at con-nuation classes already provided? This is a question which any people interested in boys and girls are asking themselves.

At the time when Mr. Fisher's scheme was announced I just been asked to organise a girls' club of which physical ercises and other classes were to form an important part. I gan to wonder, however, whether it would be worth while to a new venture on these lines; if attendance at classes is in e to be compulsory for girls between the ages of fourteen sixteen for a certain number of hours weekly. So I went for ice to Mrs. Arnold Glover, Hon. Secretary of the National ganisation of Girls' Clubs.

Ars. Glover's opinion was decidedly encouraging. It is too , she considered, to tell how the new scheme would affect and girls' clubs; but the hours compulsorily devoted to tion will be few-at any rate to start with-and it is to be ed that rather than damping the children's ardour for vledge they will add enthusiasm to their love of all that is and beautiful. There will still be ample scope for clubs will be wanted as much as ever, and it will be regrettable if there should be any falling off in public. est through a mistaken idea that children will need them , because of the additional hours of education to be extended them by the Board of Education.

EDUCATIONAL IMPORTANCE OF CLUBS.

The clubs have done a wonderful work, both educational and cial, for girls from the elementary schools between the ages of rteen and eighteen. Only a comparatively few of these have ended the continuation classes organised by the education uthorities, but they have made good use of the numerous asses run in connection with the clubs in which they seek their creation and get encouraged towards education. These asses, if they fulfil certain conditions, earn a grant from the ducation authorities, which goes to support the club.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR A CORPORATE LIFE.

It is only through their clubs that most working girls have y opportunity for that corporate life, on the need for which stress is laid by the Report lately issued by the Depart-tal Committee on Juvenile Education in connection with ployment. In their clubs girls form friendships, and they under the influence of women with better education and outlook than themselves-who in turn learn' from them, thus learning, are enabled to give a better social service. hey voluntarily submit to discipline; but are at the same time elped to develop their own powers of initiative and resource.

Mrs. Creighton, President of the above organisation, and others write from 118, Great Titchfield-street, W. r.--'' Many of the clubs affiliated to the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs are unable this year to entertain the idea of a country holidar, as food and fares present such insuperable difficulties. The girls are working very strenuously and longer hours than ever before, and they are also feeling the pressure of home anxieties. We are wondering whether the fortunate owners of gardens in or near London would place them at our disposal for Satur-day and Sunday afternoons. We would undertake that the generous kindness of our hostesses is in no way abused. Perhaps they would regard this offer as a piece of national service to give rest and refreshment of spirit to those who are helping to save the country by doing their work conscientiously at home. We shall welcome and be most grateful for any offers of help on these lines, or any suggestions sent to the office of the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs, 118, Great Titchfield-street, W. 1, to which our Secretary will most gladly respond." Some VALUABLE DEVELOPMENTS. From simple beginnings a club may develop in all sorts of s. It need never be stationary; for one thing leads on to ther, and an enterprising organiser will always find some ans of starting anything for which there is a real demand ng the members. In connection with the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs are periodical conferences, at which representatives from ated clubs all over the country meet. These not only help to the clubs together and establish an esprit de corps, but are valuable to club leaders, who learn in the course of the cussions the girls' point of view on many subjects.

THE COMMON CAUSE.

act as a whole, it must have the opportunity, from time to time, of expressing its opinion and of choosing Members of Parlia-ment who can express that opinion in further detail. No doubt, when deciding which persons should take part in the nation's electorate, it would be reasonable to exclude criminals (at least, so long as they were serving their sentences), and also sufferers from insanity. But when we have allowed for some exceptions, such as those just named, we find ourselves recognising that the vote is not an honour, like the "freedom of a city," or a reward for valour, or even for national service in the widest acceptation of that word, but it is the claimindeed, the right-of women, as well as men, to express in a valid manner their wishes and opinions about the conduct of their own affairs

THE GUILD OF HEALTH.

Another activity started by Mrs. Glover in 1911 is the Guild of Health. The lectures arranged cover a wide field, and have very good results in teaching girls how to take care of themselves. Many of them have not the most elementary knowledge of the laws of health; but once their interest is aroused it becomes possible to find out and remedy many of the little ailments and discomforts from which they needlessly suffer.

Members are encouraged to make their own suggestions with regard to lectures, and among those asked for was a lecture on the care of the feet. As a result of this lecture it was found that many girls suffer from corns at the bottom of their feet through wearing cheap stockings with a seam underneath. So stockings were added to the list of things supplied by the Guild, tooth-brushes and dressing-cases are also supplied. The membership of the Guild numbers now over 4,300. At one club a health shop has been opened which brings in a small profit, mainly from the sale of shampoo wash.

HOLIDAY RAMBLES.

Another feature of the N.O.G.C. are the Saturday afternoon rambles arranged from the Health Office.

Last year 848 girls and sixty-four leaders were" entertained during the summer by various hostesses, and hundreds more visited the gardens of the Chapel of the Ascension in Bayswater Road, where Dining Centres, Ltd., obtained permission to open a caravan Tea House, and organised games all through the summer. This year the organisation hopes for even more generosity from those possessed of gardens, for the Ascension Chapel grounds have been dug up in plots and are not available to the merry parties of last year. Will gardens in and around London be offered to the N.O.G.C. for these games on Saturday afternoons? The organisation would also be glad to utilise any estate in the Home Counties that may be empty as a country holiday centre for workers of every kind—munition workers or shop hands.

Helpers are needed for the clubs, and also funds. To starve our boys' and girls' clubs for want of funds would be an act of criminal folly; for in the development of character and training of citizenship they play as important a part as any other factor in our educational scheme

A SCALLOP SHELL OF QUIET. Poems by Enid Denis, Helen Douglas-Irvine, Gertrude Vaughan, and Ruth Young; with an introduction by Margaret L. Woods. (Blackwell, Oxford. 2s. net.)

The poems in this volume were written by four women; but though the work of each writer is different in many points the spirit is the same throughout, for all are sincere and unassuming. There is no feverish longing, wild unrest or passion here, but for the most part the quiet expression of simple, often tender, thoughts. There is nothing difficult to understand in these lines, no obscure or deep philosophy, no introspection, but, as the title suggests, a certain restfulness that soothes and comforts.

One reason why this book should interest readers of THE COMMON CAUSE is that all four contributors are Suffragists, and have worked for the movement.

The poems of Enid Denis are full of an earnest faith in God, without being narrow and dictatorial, as are so many devotional and so-called " religious " poems. One of her best is : " Behold the Playmate of the Lord," where she says :---

"Our human hopes, our human dreams, Our calculated joys, Our human wisdom's vaunted schemes— These are the Christ-Child's toys."

Though many will disagree with her sentiments, yet all must admit that she is sincere in her work. The best of her collection is that bearing the title, " To One said to be Sleeping.

It will interest our readers to know that the author whose poems are placed second in the book, Helen Douglas-Irvine, was clerk in one of the Scottish Women's Hospitals' Units in Serbia. Her poems are more ambitious than those of Enid Denis, and a feeling for what is now called " realism " is in them. There is true music in some of her lines, but in others-such as the poem Dreamland "-this is lacking, and the thought is awkwardly expressed in a blurr of ugly sounds that do not display it to advantage. Thoughts will sometimes clothe themselves in exactly the right words, but this is a rare achievement.

Another contributor is Ruth Young, well known as a speaker to members of the N.U.W.S.S. There is an undercurrent of tenderness and sympathy in her verse. She loves Nature, and the poem, "A Rainbow in War-Time," sounds a note of hope good to hear in these days. It is so easy to forget that " Dawn will follow on the dark " when the night is long. " Rain " is a good example of her style.

- "I hear the rain come beating down, Softly, sweetly on the earth; Under its kisses the plane leaves rustle With gentle mirth. After its kisses it whispers, whispers Unto the earth.
- "Why has the earth no answer ready To gentle, pleasant, patt'ring rain? Why is my heart o'erladen with sorrow, My mind with pain? I remember, remember, remember We listened together to falling rain."

The fourth poet whose work is represented here is Gertrude Vaughan, one-time Sub-Editor of Votes for Women, and from a technical point of view her verses are by far the best. She has an ear for metre, and a love, perhaps unconscious, for colour. "The Last Will of . . , " is the best of the poems included in this collection.

"THE MAKING OF WOMEN."

Messrs. George Allen & Unwin have in active preparation a volume of essays entitled "The Making of Women." Starting from the assump-tion that the vote is almost won, the book discusses the channels into which the energy of feminists should now be diverted, and the lines along which the feminist policy in England should develop. The question of women in industry is dealt with in considerable detail, the arguments both for and against "Equal pay for equal work" being discussed. Marriage and sex relationships are considered from a somewhat new point of view; and an educational policy is outlined. Among the contri-butors are A. Maude Royden, Ralph Rooper, Eleanor Rathbone, Elinor Burns, and "The Round Table," and the volume is edited by Victor Gollance.

CARE AND CURE OF THE NERVE-STRAINED.

A medical woman writes to us as follows :

<text><text>

WOMEN IN LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The Paddington Women's Local Government Association has addressed a memorial to the Home Secretary, calling his attention to the valuable work done in the borough during the last ten months by two members of the Women's Police Force, who have patrolled the streets, attended the police-court, and given valuable help in cases concerned with women, young girls, and children. The memorialists point out that the salaries of these policewomen have proved their worth, it is asked that official recognition and payment should be obtained for them, as allowed outside the Metropolitan Police area by the Police, Factories, &c., Act of 1916.

DONATIONS TO N.U.W.S.S. SCOTTISH WOMEN'S HOSPITAL.

Further subscriptions are still urgently needed, and should be sent to Mrs. Laurie, Hon. Treasurer, Red House, Greenock. Cheques to be crossed Royal Bank of Scotland. Subscriptions for the London Units to be sent to the Hon. Mrs. B. M. Graves, or the Right Hon. Viscountess Cowdray, 66, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

THE MILLICENT FAWCETT HOSPITAL UNITS.

A telegram has come from Petrograd, saying that Dr. King-Atkinson A telegram has come from Petrograd, saying that Dr. King-Atkinson and her party have reached Russia, and are at work down in Galicia. Their arrival in Petrograd is confirmed by a letter from Mrs. Elborough, dated May 6th, which has come through very quickly by Embassy bag. They arrived at 12.30 on Monday night, after a good journey, and sat up until three with Mrs. Elborough and Miss Knight, exchanging English and Russian news. After three days of business (and talk !) they took a night train to Kiev, accompanied by Sister Wright, and then went on the further journey to the hospital at Zaleschiki.

WORTHING.—The Working Women's Franchise lociety, supported by the local Liberal and abour Association, the Independent Labour arty, the Women's Liberal Association, the lational Union of Women Workers, the Church eague for Women Suffrage, and the Women's o-operative Guild, held a very successful meet-ng in the St. James's Hall, on Tuesday night, lay 8th, when Mrs. Stocks, B.Sc., of the U.W.S.S., delivered an able address on the Pocition of Women in a Reconstructed The Position of Women in a Reconstructed tate" The chair was taken by Alderman J. Far-tharson Whyte, M.A., who is a consistent sup-riter of women's suffrage in this town. He ged, in an admirable speech, that women in e future would be judged by their capacity, d expressed a hope that women who were em-oyed in industrial work would join trade tons, and see that for equal work they tained equal pay. ned equal pay. Stocks, who received a very cordial ren, contrasted the position of women before ar and now, and pointed out the need for harding their interests, both as wage-is and as mothers. She also dealt with the of infant mortality.

intering we comes the decision of the overnment to embody in a Bill the recommen-tions of the Electoral Reform Conference, and afidently expects that this year will see the tranchisement of women."

CARDIFF.—The annual meeting of the Cardiff nd District Society was held on Thursday, pril 19th. Mrs. Coombe Tennant gave a most adjustering and inspiring address on "Pa-iotism and Women's Suffrage," showing how working for the vote women are exercising truest patriotism, because of the help it will hable them to give in the difficulties of indus-ial reconstruction in pressing for much needed forms. A paid organiser was appointed to two half-time to suffrage work for the next tree months, among her first duties being the balaning of signatures of prominent citizens to be memorial. It was announced that Mr. Her-ert Cory, M.P. for Cardiff, had voted for the squith resolution, and would support a Govt Cory, M.P. for Cardiff, had voted for the path resolution, and would support a Gov-ment Bill. Mr. Soulsby reported that the r Parcels Depôt had, since beginning work March, 1976, sent away about 1,800 bales, in-ling about 12,000 parcels; and Miss Norris orted that the War Savings' Association, ngurated in July, 1916, had 63 members, and invested nearly  $\pounds$ 600. It was decided to perate in the appeal now being made all twish Women's Hospital and in particular in arrangements for a public meeting in May.

KESWICK .- The Keswick W.S.S. held a geneal committee meeting, the main business of hich was to pass resolutions of thanks and con-ratulations to those politicians who recently apported the enfranchisement of women as an upported the enfranchisement of women as an integral part of any measure of electoral reform which may result from the Speaker's Conference. A resolution of thanks was sent to the speaker or his great service in presiding over the Con-erence. Suitable resolutions were also sent to he Prime Minister, Mr. Bonar Law, Sir John imon, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Walter Long. A resolution was sent to Lord Buckmaster to ongratulate him on the passage through the louse of Lords of his Solicitors (Qualification it Women) Bill. A resolution protesting against he new clause added to the Criminal Law mendment Act was sent to the Home Secretary and many other M.P.s concerned in the matter.

COCKERMOUTH W.S.S.—This society has also ent letters to M.P.s relative to the Criminal aw Amendment Act. A Women's Suffrage esolution has also been forwarded to many ember WAKEFIELD.—A public meeting was held on Monday, April 23rd, in the Wood Street Insti-tute, when we had the great privilege of welcoming the honoured President of the N.U.W.S.S., Mrs. Henry Fawcett, LL.D. The supported on the platform by the Mayoress, and many well-known local residents, several of whom had never before appeared on a suffrage platform. and seconded by Canon Ivens). A good collec-tion was taken for the Scottish Women's Hos-pitals. The Committee, with the assistance of the "Lamp Day" Committee undertook, at the invitation of the Mayoress, to organise the Official Flag Day for the Serbian Relief Fund. This took place on May rath, and thanks to the efforts of Miss M. Spencer, who acted as Hon. Secretary, proved a great success,  $L_{95}$  11s. being cleared; of this  $L_{23}$  17s. 9d. has been sent to the Scottish Women's Serbian Unit. The Working Party is well maintained, and on May 19th a collection was made at the Opera House and Empire Theatre, which resulted in a sum of  $L_{19}$  being raised for materials, through the kind permission of Miss Sherwood. Members of the Suffrage Committee were officially invited to take part in a Food Control Conference at the Town Hall on May 2<sub>3</sub>rd.

A model nursery for the children of munition workers, between the ages of four weeks and five years, was opened on May 3rd, at 57, St. Mary's Street, Woolwich, where the Duchess of Marlborough Lady Henry (Chairman of the Committee), Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., and others will receive visitors all the day and show them round this very ideal home for children, which consists of two cottages that have been transformed into beautiful nurseries, where the children will be well cared for while their parents are at work. This is the first nursery to be opened at Woolwich, and it is hoped that the pound-day that is to be held in celebration of the opening will be so successful that the nursery will be able to be started on a sound financial basis.
