Dear Kelly

Just a few lines to ask a favour of you whether of your father
I find I have not got enough English money left to pay for my board etc. next term, but I hope to get the scholarship, if any after all, I do not want to make another exchange German money for English which transaction always admits some loss.

If your father could oblige me with a £10 note, that I should do, I think, and if he could either pay it to Kerry here (it being exactly any more messages. I wish to send C. Peters for your and the other things and my dear Kelly 200 Mark) or I would pay you when I get the scholarship - money. Of course I do not want it till at the beginning of term, when I hope we shall meet all right at N. hall.

I am looking forward very much to seeing you again, and the rest of my friends, and I also hope the change of scene and life will do me good. I have not been very well or happy of late, probably owing to these long dull winter-months with hardly any cheerful break in their monotony. However

I am grateful that papa continues to improve and that I have been able to help my mother over a hard time.
I ought to be cheerful too that all went better than I could have expected at first - but feelings will not be commanded and I am sadly out of sorts, to say the truth.
The letters from Newburn have been the pleasantest occurrences of my daily life, and should you have occasion please to give Miss Martin and Miss Pideann thanks for their last kind missives.

I shall write to London, to the Cather, as I shall not see her there, my plans being changed.
My sister Ellen will not come here before the middle of the month and so I have deferred my own journey accordingly, and shall not come up to Cambridge before the beginning of term.

It strikes me, that among the several things that I left at your house at Hmas there was a wadded flannel bag (hanging at my bed-post) that I did not get back through you.
Should it have been found, please to bring it back with you to Cambridge. I suppose this letter will only just catch you before you go down, so it is no use giving

These were intended for the
