LETTER to the REGISTRAR GENERAL on the CAUSES of DEATH in ENGLAND, by WILLIAM FARR, Esq., M.D., F.R.S.

YEAR 1869.

SIR,

It is shown in your Report that the population of England increased somewhat more rapidly between 1861 and 1871 than it had increased in the previous decenniad ; and that the rate of mortality has consequently been slightly overstated.

This correction being made, the year is found to be healthier than usual ; and the mortality, in fact, from the class of zymotic diseases was below the average of the fifteen preceding years, although the formidable scarlet fever was both prevalent and fatal. The diseases of the respiratory organs owing to the cold weather in winter were unusually fatal.

I.—ZYMOTIC DISEASES.

Small-pox was not generally active ; in London it was incubating, in Lancashire it was more active, and in Yorkshire the registers contain 610 deaths by the epidemic, of which 100 were recorded in the Sheffield, and 218 in the Dewsbury districts. In Hull and Sculcoates 71 deaths by small-pox were registered. Ipswich, in the Eastern Division, saw 32 die of small-pox. The prevalence of these outbreaks was chiefly on the East side of the Island. Measles, croup, and whooping-cough levied their customary toll, chiefly on children. Measles was most fatal in the North-Western, South-Western, and West-Midland Divisions, and London. Scarlet fever was terribly fatal : 27,641, chiefly children and young people, died of this disease (see Table 3, p. 221), 5841 in London, and 5234 in Lancashire and Cheshire.

Continued fevers have been for the first time distinguished in conformity with the decision of the Nomenclature Committee ; and enteric fever (typhia) is found to be the prevailing form of the year, as to it 8659 deaths were referred against 4279 deaths by typhus ; 5449 deaths were registered under the rather vague name of simple continued fever.

Diarrhoea, cholera, and dysentery, were as is usual, prevalent, but to a less degree than usual : yet to diarrhoea 19,903 deaths were referred, it being still one of the most fatal of zymotic diseases.

Though ague and rheumatism are less fatal, they cause much protracted sickness, to be diminished by drainage.

Under syphilis 1859 deaths were returned ; the number of such deaths is rapidly increasing. The mortality thus designated has in 17 years risen in the ratio of 35 to 85. Some more effective steps are required to stop the ravages of this insidious disease which lies concealed by its remoteness but is the primary cause of many deaths returned under its ultimate transformations. The bones, the brain, the bowels are all infested by it. Innocent children are the chief but not the sole sufferers. Stricture of the urethra is inserted in this class because it is commonly the consequence of contagious disease.

Hydrophobia had been reduced to a low ebb until in the years 1865-6 it made a sudden start, and this canine infection was the death of 19 and 36 persons ; the deaths in the two following years were 10 and 7 ; in 1869 they rose to 18.

Glanders is fatal to rather more than 4 persons annually ; and 6 and 3 were the deaths ascribed to this equine infection in the two last years.

Under the system of Poor Laws only 52 deaths by privation chiefly adults were recorded in 1869 : the deaths under this head have happily declined during the last three years from 109 to 96 and to 52. The annual mortality to 1,000,000 was 5 and 4 and 2 : the average of the last three years has been 3·7. Want of food in its various forms causes indirectly a variety of diseases under which its agency is masked in the registers : but it may be safely affirmed that in no country in Europe is death by starvation less common than in England under its Poor Laws, imperfect though they be. Even statists are misled by an obvious fallacy. It has been often inferred that because many people are relieved to a more or less extent, and figure as paupers in official returns, England has a greater proportion of starving people than other countries. Now to make a pauper in the official sense two things are required ; suffering or poverty in one class, sympathy or wealth in another : in the absence of a legal system of relief, though there are no paupers, beggars and starvation abound.

The accompanying Table shows several important particulars respecting the deaths under this head. The deaths of females (137) are fewer than the deaths of males, 194. One third of the deaths occurred in London. The greatest number of deaths in any period of life is between 45 and 55.

The natural food for children is the breast-milk of the mother ; and its want is justly considered a cause of death ; to it and inanition of infancy 1408 deaths are referred.

Scurvy is warded off by the abundance of potatoes and other vegetables, but it has latterly increased in prevalence.

To delirium tremens, usually a form of alcoholic poisoning, 433 deaths were referred, to intemperance in drinking 331 ; making in the aggregate 764 deaths by one form or other of alcoholism : within the last three years the annual deaths by the poison of drink have happily declined to a considerable extent. We may hope ere long to see these cases further decline until drunkenness and excess in drink are no longer indulged in by any but the unfortunate monomaniacs who, for their own protection, and for the sake of society, require restraint.

Parasites, including hydatids, itch insect, tape worms, and worms of all descriptions still cause a certain number of deaths, which will probably diminish as the water-supply becomes purer, and the meat-supply is watched. The deaths by these creatures are induced by trains of maladies which are not always discriminated from other affections. The means of personal cleanliness, soap and abundance of pure water, should be placed within the reach of the whole population ; at many factories workmen may be well supplied with water ; and some means of personal coercion, if necessary, might well be employed, to prevent unclean vagrants carrying and spreading infection among their race. They do incalculably more mischief than scabby sheep.

II.—DIATHETIC DISEASES.

This class is divided into two orders ; at the head of the first is gout, at the head of the second scrofula. They are connected to some extent with the dietary order of the first class : for gout is usually caused by luxurious living, and scrofula by defective dietary. But in other diseases of this class such as cancer and phthisis, the seeds of disease appear to be often inborn ; and it is certainly impossible to trace, at present, their origin to external agencies. All these inquiries, however, are still in their infancy. Gout is, like syphilis, becoming more fatal ; the deaths registered to its account are rapidly increasing and loudly proclaim the necessity of beginning at least some reform in the dinners and habits of the wealthier classes, if they would avoid not only the pangs of this painful disease, but its disorganizing ravages of their vital organs. Refined gluttony is as fatal as intoxicating drink. When will the culinary art be kept within its due limits, by simple elegant means please the taste, satisfy appetite, and sustain health ? Who will take the lead in this cultivated temperance, and make an effort to put a stop to the annual sacrifice of so many precious lives ? Women have hitherto, and we may hope, will still continue, to set men good examples ; for the deaths of 352 men, and of but 96 women were referred to gout.

There is an increase of deaths ascribed to cancer, a decrease in the deaths by dropsy and by mortification.

Tubercular diseases are still heavy, but phthisis, hydrocephalus, and scrofula were less fatal than in former years.

III. LOCAL DISEASES

Diseases of nervous system.—The nervous system, especially in its brain development, plays so important a part in man, that its diseases in their intense forms put an end to life. The deaths under this head are 61,550 ; which, after deducting 26,015 by convulsions, including probably many vague undeveloped maladies, leave 35,535 referable severally to cephalitis, apoplexy, paralysis, insanity, chorea, epilepsy, and some other affections of the brain, spinal marrow, nerves, and senses. The progress of Pathology reveals an organic change of the structure of the brain, which has only in these later years found a place in the tables : the deaths in the year by necrencephalus, or by softening, which is a sort of mortification of the brain, were 2135 ; of men 1317, of women 818. These organic changes of the organ of the mind are attended by functional derangements of various kinds, such as imbecility and paralysis of the nerves suppressing the muscular energy.

Diseases of the organs of circulation.—The blood plays so important a part in the individual life, that interference with the general current of its circulation from any cause is often fatal ; under this head 24,899 deaths were classed. By pericarditis 676 deaths are said to have been caused ; by aneurism 595. The great peculiarity in respect of aneurism is that 457 men and only 138 women died of it.

The influence of sex is felt at every age ; but no children under 10 and no man or woman above the age of 85 died of aneurism in the year.

| Excess of men | — | 1 | 4 | 64 | 110 | 74 | 49 | 17 | — |

This disparity may throw some light on the causes of aneurism, which has been associated by some observers with gout and syphilis.* The deaths referred to aneurism increased, and no effect of the improved methods of treatment by compression are apparent in the returns. Angina pectoris, syncope, and hypertrophy caused a considerable number of deaths in both sexes. To the newly discovered cause of death, embolism, the deaths of 27 males and 66 females were referred ; only 2 males and one female were under 5 years of age ; 46 of the women, 13 of the men, were of the ages 20–55 ; so that the excess in women is probably connected with the period of child-bearing. Previous to 1866 this cause of death was not returned separately ; in 1866 the number was 18, which increased to 32, 28, and 93 respectively in the three following years 1867–9.

Diseases of respiratory organs.—The delicacy, the extent, and the exposure of these organs to atmospheric vicissitudes, as well as the vital importance of respiration, prepares us to expect to find them the seat of many fatal diseases ; and in fact the deaths under this head amount to 80,397, including 43,180 males and 37,217 females of all ages. Young children under the age of 5 years are the greatest sufferers from pneumonia, and people of 65 and upwards from bronchitis, which is the greatest enemy they have to encounter. They die of the disease especially when the temperature falls below the freezing point of water. Phthisis predominates in the earlier periods of manhood. The mortality from bronchitis has gradually risen since the year 1852, from 1·0 in 1000 living to 1·7, and in the year 1869 it became 2·0. Pneumonia and phthisis grew a little less fatal ; but not to an extent to compensate for the increase of bronchitis. It is probable that the dust and smoke in the air of cities and workshops irritates irreparably the living member of the air tubes, and thus lays the foundation of bronchitis in the chronic form. Could not manufactories and kitchens largely consume their own smoke, and thus diminish the smoke nuisance, which begrimes the faces of the people, their clothes, and their furniture ?

Diseases of digestive organs.—The death-toll paid in these diseases is very constant. The deaths by rare diseases, such as hernia, ileus, and intussusception, showing little variation. Liver disease increased.

Diseases of urinary organs.—Not only nephria (Bright's disease) but nephritis became a more frequent entry on the death register ; so the annual death-rate rose in 17 years from 191 to 337 deaths in a million living.

Diabetes is rare in childhood, but it is a mistake to suppose that it never occurs ; and it is twice as fatal in men as it is in women. The deaths in the year 1869 show this.

Diseases of reproductive system.—Sixty-five deaths only occurred in men, 1218 in women ; ovarian dropsy killed 234, notwithstanding the bold new operation, which has been practised successfully in so many cases. At the hospitals it may everywhere now be brought home to the poor women who suffer. The disease is probably one that is too long concealed by the patient, while the operation is too long deferred by the surgeon ; within the last five years an encouraging diminution in its fatality has been observed.

The organs of locomotion are not often affected by spontaneous fatal diseases ; they suffer more from injuries.

The integumentary system is the seat of many troublesome but of few fatal affections. Of the deaths here registered, it is worthy of note, that 355 were caused by pyæmia. Eczema is now the most fatal of the skin diseases.

IV.—DEVELOPMENTAL DISEASES.

The reproduction and growth of the human race are interrupted in various ways, and the interruption proves fatal in a certain number of cases. The first order of fatal causes concerns children : Still-born children are not registered ; but many of the infants that are born before term are born alive, and some survive. In the year, 8666 children born alive prematurely died, and are so returned, without any reference to any specific disease ; 1454 deaths are referred to malformations. The teeth are cut with pain and difficulty ; and in weakly children the consequent irritation is sometimes fatal ; but it is probable that some of the 4083 deaths referred to teething are due to latent causes at work during the period of teething.

Of women, 122 are stated to have died of paramenia ; while 2102 died of childbirth, exclusive of 1181 who died of metria, sometimes called puerperal fever.

The mortality, calculated by comparing the deaths from childbirth with the population, was lower in 1869 than the average ; but metria showed no decline.

The question of the mortality of mothers in child-bearing is of the highest importance, and it is further illustrated by the series of Tables 14, 15, 16 (pp. 235–7). On comparing the annual deaths of mothers to children born alive it will be noted that the deaths of mothers averaged 49 to 10,000 children born alive in the 23 years 1847–69 ; the highest proportion, 61, was in the year 1848, the lowest, 42, in the last year of the series ; thus it rose 12 above the average, and fell 9 below it. The range above the average exceeds the range below. This is a characteristic of death by epidemic disease.

Deaths of child-bearing women are sometimes caused by diseases, such as small-pox, under which heads they are then classed.

This subject is now undergoing investigation by a most competent inquirer, and the issue will lead to the diminution of this fatality, the most deplorable of all that happens to us. Senility has its special diseases; but of old age 27,932 persons are said to have died.

V.—VIOLENT DEATHS.

16,497 deaths are referred to several evident causes which it has been usual to classify as violent. The proportion to population is much what it was in the year 1852; but it is much lower than it was some years ago, when the forces at man's disposal, employed recklessly, raised the number of deaths by violence every year, until in the year 1865 they attained the high pitch of 835 to a million living.

To the deaths by burning I have every year called attention, as the number can be controlled to a considerable extent, and the number of victims of fire has been lessened; the deaths by burning and scalds were 3166 in the year 1860 and 2545 in the year 1869. Still further reductions in these deaths may be made, and are required.*

Railways and mines are still the causes of many deaths which may be prevented.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

WILLIAM FARR.

To
The Registrar General.

* NOTE.—Subjoined are the suggestions for preventing death by fire, which I reprint from the letter in your 24th report, published in 1863:—

" 1. Open fires, lights, and kettles of hot water should be surrounded by GOOD GUARDS. This precaution is of capital importance.

" 2. Children and young people, and old women, should be systematically taught the danger of fire.

" 3. The dresses of young children and old women should be made as much as possible of worsted or wool; which will protect them against cold, as well as against fire.

" 4. The muslin dresses, and cotton and linen clothes, might very properly be starched with the chemical materials which are found by experience to render them, to a certain extent, incombustible.

" 5. Private houses should all be provided on each floor of the sleeping apartments with the means of escape, in the event of the lower apartments taking fire during the night. Especial provision to be made for women and children.

" 6. Fireworks, powderworks, and chemical manufactories require special precautions.

" 7. Persons falling asleep near the fire, or near lights, in a state of intoxication, or in fits, are frequently burnt to death.

" 8. Young children drink scalding water out of the spout of the tea kettle, or fall into scalding water. This happens often in the lower classes, when the mother is out at work, and the young children are left at home alone. The means of obviating this danger are evident.

" 9. Special arrangements are, it is scarcely necessary to add, required for preventing the explosions of mines or of steam engines."

TABLE 10.—Causes of Death registered in England in each of the Eighteen Years 1852-69. To 1,000,000 PERSONS LIVING, the DEATHS from each CLASS of CAUSES, and from each CAUSE—cont.

[†] In the years 1852-57 cases of so-called "debility" and "premature birth" were classed together; when the new classification was introduced "premature birth" was kept apart, and "debility" and "atrophy" were thrown into one line.

[‡] For the years 1858-69 the number of deaths in which the cause was not specified has been distributed pro rata over all the causes in the Table.

* The Mean Annual Mortality in the 15 years from All Causes and from Specified Causes is the mean of the three quinquennial periods, and does not correspond exactly with the totals of the Orders and Classes; because under certain heads, for example, Homicide, Suicide, and Causes not specified, &c., the complete details cannot be given for the entire period.

† Mean of 3 years.

‡ Order 2, comprising Violent Deaths in Battle, is omitted, as inapplicable to the civil population.

NOTE.—In a certain number of cases in each year the cause of death was not stated. In calculating the proportional numbers, since 1855, they have been distributed pro rata over all the causes in the Table.

INDEX OF SUB-DISTRICTS.

[In this alphabetical arrangement the principle is adopted of placing the Sub-Districts (or Registrars' Districts) having compound names in the order indicated by the usual pronunciation of those names; thus, East Grinstead will be found under the letter E, and not under G as "Grinstead, East;" St. James under the letter S, and not as "James, St." The number against each Sub-District, in the third column, refers to the order in which it appears in the arrangement of the Districts in the Tables of Abstracts; thus, Abbey Holme (569; 2) is the 2d Sub-District of the Wigton District, No. 569.]
