Mrs. Sidney Webb On The Catholic Church

Callut Imen

THE other day Mrs. Sidney Webb, in a broadcast talk on "Social Institutions" said: "Perhaps the outstanding religious institution to-day is the Roman Catholic Church: ubiquitous and unchanging; autonomous within its own spiritual sphere; a state within a state; equipped with the most elaborate specialised technique; in-fallibility at the top; offering complete mental security, together with the celibate ally poor and therefore disinterested in mundane affairs, continuously employing an empirical psycho-analysis in the periodical confession and absolution of all the faithful." Mrs. Sidney Webb's talks are of the kind listened to by serious listeners, and in the minds of, at least, some such a state-ment from such a source should arouse the desire for "more, please." Will the B.B.C. oblige. Or would it be considered too con-J troversial? It is all to the good that so striking a tribute should come from a non-Catholic source, though some may ask: "Why have we had to wait for a non-"Why have we had to wait for a hon-Catholic to say these things?" Now that the tribute has been broadcast it is to be. hoped that the opportunity for enlarging upon it will not be let slip.

A Russian Adventure

LORD PASSFIELD and Mrs. Sidney Webb are going to Russia this summer to study the co-operative movement there.

They leave England on May 14, and will be away at least eight weeks.

As the combined age of the Webbs is one hundred and forty-seven, it will be a courageous as well as an instructive adventure. Incidentally, Lenin acquired his first knowledge of English by translating a book of Sidney Webb's during his Siberian exile.

mg 17" S. 1. Napa This as un hypothel . SOVIET CONSTITUTION. Condens wo fun to my

The ostensible constitution of Soviet Russia consists of three separate institutions, all of them derived from modern Western civilisation, but taking on, in the Russian environment, differences amounting to new varieties, namely (1) Folitical Democracy based on indirect popular election by the whole body of productive citizens, and manifested in the hierarchy of Soviets;

(2) Vocational Democracy, represented in the analogous hierarchy of Trade Unionism including Factory Committees; and (3) Consumer's Democracy, existing in the similar hierarchy of Co-operative Societies, with the addition of an extensive layer of various forms of Associations of Producers among artizans on the one hand, and among agriculturists on the other, variously embedded between the Consumers' Co-operatives and the political Soviets. Added to these, all of them wellknown and gried institutions of 19th century Western Europe is another, of a different character, reminiscent of earlier centuries, having indeed, the nature of a Religious order, definitely limited in membership to a specially selected minority, less than 5 % of the population, having a creed, a discipline and a code of conduct, and the avowed and inflexible purpose of using all the resources of theoretical and applied science, in order to produce the state of society deemed most advantageous for Soviet Russia in particular, but also for the whole human race - in this purpose reminiscent Auguste Comte's Religion of Humanity. It is this Religious Order, the Communist Party, pervading every part of the organisation and every section of the community, that dominates the whole of the ostensible constitution of Soviet Russia, and gives to that huge nation today its distinctive character.

Sprouting out of all these basic institutions, in their various strata, are multitudinous and varied voluntary assoch tions and other connective tissue of the most varied nature of greater or less range and permanence.
