Walk with Inspector Thorpe round district bounded on the South by Church Road: on the west by the Rendlesham Road: on the North by the Northwood Road & on the East by Stoke Newington High Street:

Starting at the Police Station in the Stoke Newington High Street. South & then East along the Church Road past the West Hackney Church. Rev. Mr. Jukes. "Church a very popular one, it is always full, last Sunday the harvest festival there was a regular struggle to get in." Along the Evering Road, which is still red as map. South down the Maury Road. This end of it is pink map marks it red. 2 storied. 8 rooms + 2 kitchens in each house. rent £36. Shops at the south end of it. Then South west along the Rendlesham Road, here 2 storied, pink. Then N.W. up Landfield Street into the Block of streets on the way St. Nellington St. Landfield St. Heatherley St. & Stellman Street; known as 'Norris's Island', 'Tiger's Bay', 'Spikes Island' or 'Myrtle Grove'. Why 'Myrtle Grove'. Th an aristocratic name given sarcastic-like." This is the roughest quarter of the district but much better than it used to be. Its inhabitants are low-bred English - none are Irish - of no particular occupation. Some are labourers very few earn a regular wage. Some of the women wash but most of them - "You had better judge for yourself" said the policeman on the beat. It used to be the worst of ex-convicts, now there are none, they have moved to the Trukerbury estate in South Tottenham, especially the St. Ann's Road. There is ^{only} one licensed man in the neighbourhood & he is a reformed character. "It is a foul libel that the police give information to employers." Well, but it is sometimes done because I certainly know of at least one case - "That must have been where the employer asked of the local police whether any of his men were on ticket-of-leave, then it might be done."

There is no public entry into Narviss' Island except through Rendlesham Road. There is only a wooden boarding between the lower end of Benthall Road & Stellan Street but the ground between the boarding & the street is private property. It would be a great advantage advantage to the Island if this were opened but not to Ban-hall road. The backs of two houses in Ottaway street back upon James Road from which the police have a right of entry into the district: the public may do so on payment of 1^d as they go through. Twelve years ago the Land-lords in the Island wished to raise the tone of the inhabitants.

One of them invited them ^{police} to go & live there rent-free & at the same time offered them a right of way through his back yard. They ~~police~~ accepted. Six of them are now living in the Island. Rents are still much cheaper than anywhere else but ~~within~~ the district has improved so greatly that instead of asking no rent the Landlords now demand 7/6 per week. Since Jubilee this has been raised 6^d which makes 8/- for 4 rooms & 2 kitchens.
Houses two storied, flush with the pavement, narrow backs. There is a good deal of pitch & toss, police have orders to stop it, every now & then they make a raid but the 'crows' at the corner always give warning.
"Besides what's the good of it, you with a lot of trouble you may get half a dozen fellows fined 5/-,
they pay or go to prison, & then come back & start again." What about the police having been caught gambling.

gambling themselves? "Not in my time." He has been here 3 years. But evidently there ~~is~~ some truth in the Rev Joyce's statement that four had been caught.

The land lords of the 'island' he thinks are small men. The largest owner has 8 houses. Ottaway St. is marked the best of the lot, on the map is purple; it does not look it. Landfield Street is the best ^{according to the police} & looks it.

The backs to the houses are larger, rents higher is 10/- per week for the same amount of room as in the best of the houses. Mellington St. which the police call 'middle' street is the worst but hardly looks as poor as Ottaway street because it has small railinged fronts. Heathely Road consists of the end of the other streets on its south side; on its north side are the 'Kendlesham' Rooms - a mission place with an announcement of a meeting for the 'band of Christian police' - and Jenner's news a ramshackle stabling place for horses & carts. Stillman St. has 8 shops and a beer shop: the shopping place of the district.

The inhabitants give no trouble to the police. All the children about were looked & looked healthy. All the houses 2 storied. Landfield St

The Reighton Rd. on the North side. 3 storied: rents £34. 2 inspectors live here. Two or 3 yrs ago rents were £30; 15 yrs ago the houses would not let at all. Rents are going up all round. 'Anything will let or sell in Stoke Newington now'. Character pink to red. Morcott Rd. 2 storied 7 roomed houses. 2 rooms in front 3 at the back & 2 kitchen. Manor Road the same. So too Bentall Rd.

Then North up the west side of Stoke Newington Common. Some new & some old houses: the new built in 1882 & the old in 1788. They are called Sanford Terrace. Map marks them purple but they are better than this. pink & barred with red; probably their character has bettered since the LCC took over Stoke Newington Common. has 2 or 3 stories. Neighbourhood improving. Houses on the East side being done up, evidently by contract, 6 men on 6 six ladders working on 6 houses, belonging to one owner. rents £20 to £30. 4 rooms with 2 at the back. Clevedon St. 2 st. purple as map. Union Street which is dark blue on the map has gone, its place being taken by tenements, built for a better class than lived there before: these are not yet finished. Bull Alley, a 'cow' at the end of it shuts down 'Bull alley' as we appear. Caters its inhabitants, a remnant of labourers houses built for the poor behind the High St. when Newington was a country village, each with little gardens in front. Bawling Green St. has also been appeared. There are a great many tenements & model buildings about here. Gibson St. on the North, entered under an Iron gateway with a cemented court consists entirely of 4 storied model dwellings built by "the Metropolitan Association for improving the dwellings of the Industrious classes rents 5/- to 6/9 per week." Fairy Street is now called Garnham St. & has been run right into the High St. at the High St.

Then down the High Street on the West side of which are 3 or 4 small courts with low two storied houses, remnants of a former time, inhabited by carters for the most part who ply their trade in the High St. The first of these is Chapel Court. 2 storied, 5 houses, light blue. Then Pawn brokers alley, now called Kynaston ^{avenue} Court. 6 houses, with good front gardens & remnants of a fine show of dahlias, very well kept. Mason's Ct - rather lower down looks very poor, Carters children playing all booked. Another court lower down nearly opposite the end of Union Road called White Hart Court. entered by a very narrow passage past a butcher's shop which is ~~made~~ entirely of wood, also light blue - only 7 houses. cul-de-sac on its North side past the Methodist Free Church, called Hamilton Place 9 small 2 storied houses, roadway full of chickens, light blue. Note. These courts being on the west side of the High St. properly belong to our district 16. On the East side of the High St. are a set of 2 storied streets, Leswin Road, Bayton Road, Darville Rd which are more pink than red in appearance. One of Magpards confectionery factories is in Leswin Street. Jessen Road, Union Road, Johns Rd. are equally two storied & pink.

General Remarks.

The general character of ^{that part} Stoke Newington included in these two walks with Inspector Thorpe is pink barred with red. The inhabitants of the houses are probably better off than those in the pink district to the west of the Chatsworth Road but very few of them are the sole occupiers of their houses. Single lodgers are usual. One general servant is in the larger houses ^{and} heads of families or lodgers all turn out in the morning to go to the City to their work. "You

Outside of the High Street there are remarkably few Public Houses.

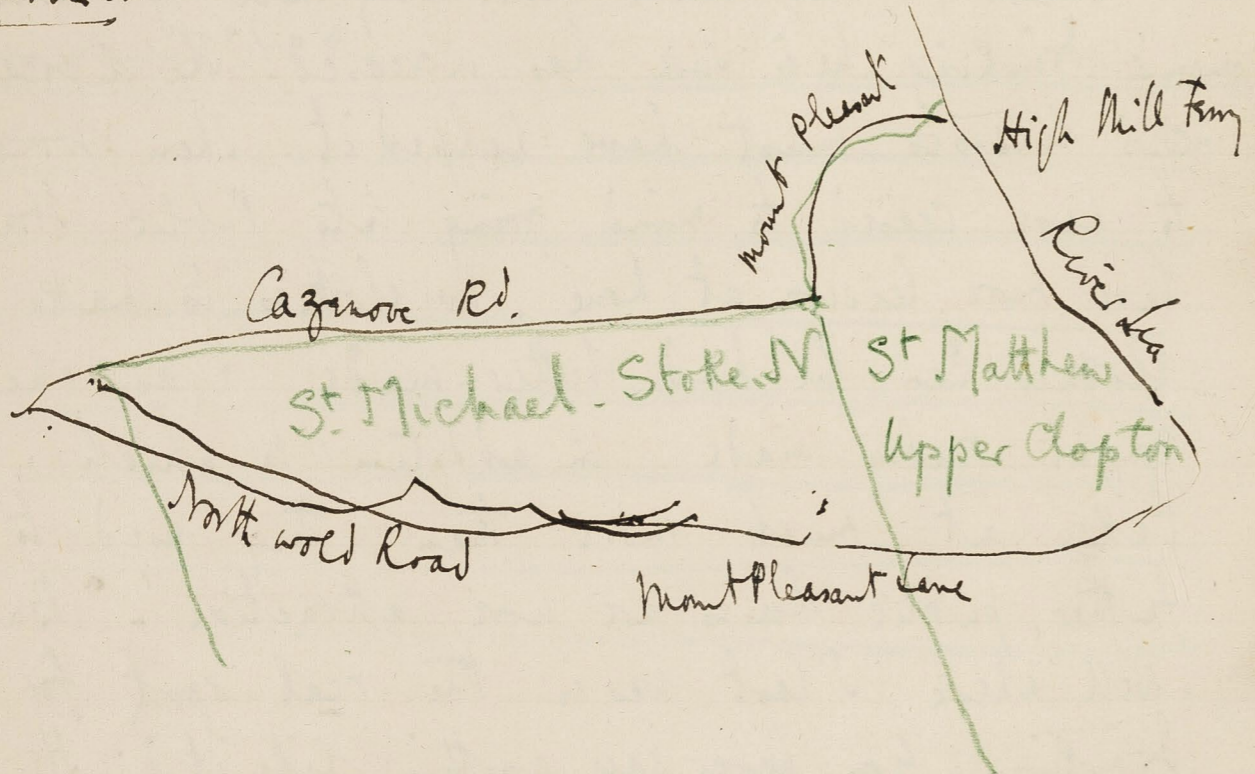

Thorp strongly disapproves of any but children of the working class being sent for beer. "With the children of labourers it does not much matter, they don't hear any language different from what they are accustomed to at home but with my class it is different" & he never wd send a child of his. He has noticed however that children of his class are sent for he has often watched them go. "Children don't generally sip the beer but women do". Children when told to fetch beer choose the house naturally where they are given sweets. Publicans are not allowed to give ~~sweets~~ ^{them} and the police have orders to prosecute where it is done. "Some of the agitators got hold of head quarters & had that order passed." If children did sip, sweets wd if anything tend to prevent them doing so. Said he did not think sweets were often given, at that moment out came a little little girl with a jug from the public house next to the police station, & her mouth evidently full of them.

Women's drinking he is sure has increased. "The increase of gro-cers licenses must have helped it. Then women seem to have ceased to mind going into Public Houses. They have more leisure at home, so clothes to make because clothes can be had better-made & as cheap when bought ready-made, in addition to which they are taken out much more than they used to be, further, public houses are more attractive." "But Clerk-
-well where I lost was is the real spot for women's drinking. You never saw anything like it." He was there six years, at the beginning of his time all the cases of drunkenness were men (practically all),
at the end of it four out of every 6 were women."

travelers give wrong addresses, you can't disprove them, it is dangerous to run them in because every now & then one may be telling the truth.

Orchard Hill & Eli's Place look like poor relations of the street here, then up the Harrington Hill & into Mount Pleasant Lane. At the top of the hill is a tree house. Two policemen at its door one of whom had no business there & had been drinking - "Fairly caught" said Thorpe. On the west side of the lane is the Springfield park estate gradually being cut into by 2^{1/2} storied houses with an attic, red in character. Remnants of large old trees, old gardens & old houses still about. The new houses are tenanted by one family only: rented at £6.

Then west along the Warwick Road; large old, double fronted ugly, yellow brick houses, each with a carriage sweep of their own. Trees on either side of the road. Three storied. Rented at £80 to £90. Too good for the neighbourhood as it is now. Cazenove has equally large houses at its east end which become semi-detached at the west end. The old will soon have to give way: Goldstone Road is creeping up from the Northwold road with the houses that modern occupiers want. Twelve to six years ago there was Number 66 Cazenove Road which is typical of the houses on the western portion of the road, is to be sold. 6 bed rooms 1 dressing. 3 reception. 97 yrs lease from Dec. 25. 1877. Ground rent £13. gravelled front approach held in common with number 64.

General Remarks. The 3 poor spots in this walk are 1. Rosington St dist 2. Detmold Rd dist 3. High Hill Ferry. Nothing vicious only very poor. "You may say that brutality is a thing of the past in London, any more we have now have none of the roughness of former days." The rich are leaving the district, so are the poor: the first in search of the green fields they used to find here: the second to Walthamstow where houses are cheaper and fares to London by the G.E.R. only 2d. Their places are taken by a middle class who if they have a family rent a whole house at £30 to £35 & let off some of the rooms. The houses

Houses are all built for 2 families: 2 rooms + a kitchen on the ground floor, 2 rooms + a kitchen on the first floor + a common scullery + W.C. at behind. The garden belongs to the tenant of the whole house. "If you have children you practically must take a whole house, none will take a man + wife with encumbrances." Tenants may leave at a week's notice but the landlady has to agree to re-main in the house for a twelve month.

Police very rarely drink. Every where they do so much less than formerly. In the outskirts of London it is less usual than in the centre. "A crowded district with rough beer houses is where you will find that the police are offered + accept most." Said he used himself always to have his half pint of an evening when he was a constable but ever since he has been an inspector he has made it his practise not to drink away from his own home, where he takes regularly a glass at dinner + another at supper. He has never heard here of the police taking money in these parts instead of beer. Why the publicans offer beer + money is when they have frequent occasion for police services in turning out Drunken men etc". Here the neighbourhood is respectable they they very seldom have to send for the police, therefore they don't put temptation in the constable's way.

The best way to get a new license nowadays is to start with one for wine & spirits, these are granted very freely, next time offer to give this up for an 'off'-beer license, as often as not you will be allowed to. After that there is more difficulty but for an 'off'-beer you may get and 'on & off' & in the end obtain a full license.

But an application for a full license right away is sure to be rejected. I hope attends the licensing court regularly. Both the Vestry & the teatotalers regularly oppose any new licenses. But the Vestry will probably be less keen about it in time. "The saving in general rates is so large owing to the extra rates they are getting from the public houses that they will be loth to do so."

General Remarks. On the whole this an artisan district. Artisans who live in 6 or 8 roomed houses and let off 2 rooms. Houses generally 2 storied, 15 ft frontage, letting for £30 to £34. Flowers in pots usual in the ground floor.

floor front windows but the flower pots not so often put in painted china inside-pots as in more clerical districts.

The ^{only} poor portions are the courts & little street off Church Street. None of them give any trouble to the police.

As regards publicans & police: Torpe said that it was certainly to the advantage of a policeman, if he was minded to have his beer that a house should be badly conducted. 'If it was not badly conducted he would not be given drink'. But it is practically impossible for anything of this kind to go on in a main thoroughfare. Too many people are passing for it to be worth the risk.

The danger of taking drink now is such that whereas 15 years ago not one policeman in 100 was a teetotaler now he put the average proportion as 1 in 5.

There are not many tallymen living in the district but they do a deal of business in the neighbourhood. They come up here from Bow. 'It's their power of talk'. Wives left at home all day, dull, along come a tally man with an oily tongue: they like a gossip & but have the chance of seeing many men: so they talk & then buy.

On the south side of the road opposite the end of Shakespeare Rd is Thomas' Place leading to Philip St & thence to Watson St. The first two are very poor - labourers - light to dark blue - no trouble to the police - children booted but in ragged clothes. Watson St has a rough character but is not so poor. Some 3 storied houses inhabited by respectable people at the west end "they came in before the neighbourhood went down, they are the owners of their houses & would move if it were not so expensive to do so, they own one or two houses about here & so don't like to be far off but if it were not for these two reasons they would not stay." General Remarks. The poor district here is that which lies between Howard Rd. & Matthias Rd. It belongs in character to that which is south of it - Garden Cottages etc.

Thorpe says they have no trouble in the district. There are no thieves. Both thieves & fences live in Hoxton, they come out here to do a bit of business occasionally but don't live here.

The only people of whom there is any complaint now are the Socialists. They have come up here from Bow & try to hold meetings. But the neighbours

Mr. Reeve. Manager of Buxton's Brewery

More drunk but less alcohol.

OP
F.H.D.
Talk with Mr. Reeve Manager of Truman, Stanbury & Buxton's Brewery. at Brick Lane.

People generally drink ~~exactly~~ more beer now than ever they did but the proportion of alcohol consumed is not ^{any} ~~the~~ greater. Statistics of all countries shew this, even in spirit drinking countries, i.e. that the amount of alcohol consumed per head is a steady quantity. The beer brewed now is much lighter than the beer of former days. Men will have beer. Coalheavers and all who want a quantity of drink don't care for water but on the other hand they don't want to get drunk, they are insisting more & more on a light beer. Brewers are now recognizing this demand. The great bulk of the beer drunk is four ale. Those higher in the social scale who have no extraordinary thirst to quench prefer something ~~quite~~ heavier. They drink less in quantity but as far as alcohol is concerned there is not much

much to choose between the two

The profit on spirit is more than on beer but beer is always the more important item. In not one per cent of their houses is a larger sum paid for spirit than for beer. In a fair house the payment ^{to the Brewer} per month would be £50 for spirit and £100 for beer

The price of houses has gone up enormously. Only yesterday he heard of a man came to him - a speculator who had bought three 'untied' Public Houses and had paid £300,000 for them. One of them being a good deal more valuable ^{either of} than the others two. There is a great deal of speculation. Men buy houses without any intention of keeping them, do them up, then resell them. They have thought for many years that top prices had been reached but they still move upwards. (Noel Buxton said that at present prices they did just pay. The lowest price for a beer house in London wd be £500. "but anything worth so little as that would not be worth it at all.")

With regard to the policies of licensing magistrates they

they have no policy.

If you gradually increased the numbers of licensed houses he did not think it would increase the amount of drunkenness or make people drink more but it would give the ruddy ones greater opportunities, you would probably have more noise & the cost of supervision would be greater: what you want is just to keep abreast of the demand. If you stint it there will be a natural resort to illegal practices, if you give much greater latitude you will ^{be providing} a greater number of places to which noisy fellows will be able to resort.

The system of putting in managers answers very well. The supervision is much greater. They have men constantly going round to see that their beer is not adulterated. Salaries of managers vary from 30s per week to £500 a year in a very large house: the ordinary rate for a man working with the help of his wife and a potman is 50s or 60s per week. A bonus on profits is sometimes given. All the police are paid or given drinks: with Inspectors it it takes the form of a testimonial when they are leaving the district! It is more of a bribe to them to do their duty than to neglect it. A policeman will come at once when called if he gets something. He will keep loafers from the door, he will take less notice of a drunken man (it may not be the publican's fault that a man has been served). It is a trade custom to tip him. Buxton said this payment went under the guise of service rendered in calling ^{the publican} ~~him~~ in the morning.

Mr. Reeve. promised ~~to~~ an introduction to a friend of his ~~over~~ the clerk to the Tower Hamlets licensing justices and also to some publicans both managers & free men. Himself he has risen to the position of manager of the Brewery from being an office boy in it. He is now about 60 years old ~~and~~ his father was a poor dissenting minister.

Truman's regularly use the 'map of London Poverty' before buying any new house in London, as a check on the would-be vendors statements as to the character of the neighbourhood round his house.

Talk with Mr. _____ manager of the Public House at the corner Chapel Street and Liverpool Road. has been a publican 20 yrs.

Chapel Street is one of the cheapest market streets in London 'the second after Christ Street in Poplar so they say'. Great many women turn in to the shop after marketing. Also many prostitutes come in here 'crowds of them in the neighbourhood'. Women drinking on the increase. Thinks process licenses have much to answer for. Women put damn spirits as tea. Men if anything drink rather less.

Friday night very busy as well as Bank Holidays. Gives 2/- a week regularly to the policeman - 'It's a trade custom, everyone does, so I do'. Says they ^(police) divide it up among themselves. he gives to one only. Police wont come at once if wanted unless they are given something, they can make themselves very disagreeable if they like. thinks their services cheap at 2/- per week. About twice a month he

he calls them in to turn out drunkards. 'Its too dangerous to give them drinks, you can only do that in the back streets, there it is usually done.

House depends for its main trade on a regular nucleus of customers but not so much as the two preceding ones. 'Casuals' i.e. passengers come in here.
but every house has its regular set of customers
even if they do a large casual trade as well.

He employs two men and a potman besides himself.
Bars ranged all round a hollow in which the barmen stand. Payments all put into a slot and change taken from a little wooden box with one side open and a row of trays with

CP G.H.D.

Talk with Supt. Macfadden, of the Nor Islington Division at The Police Sta Stoke Newington High Street. He is a Scotchman & very cautious speaker.

He deplored the great increase in ^{values} ~~prices~~ of licensed Houses. A license is practically never endorsed. Magistrates chary of doing it unless the offense is very serious indeed, result, it is never done. "When a stroke of the pen can rob a man of £20,000 you will naturally hesitate, it's only human nature."

On the other hand ^{he said} it seems unfair that by granting a license you ^{shd} increase the value of one mans property by thousands while you leave his neighbour who paid the very same amount at the outset with his plot worth only hundreds.

Does not like to give a decided opinion, has always refused to do so to the licensing Justices, but is inclined to think that a great increase in the number of licenses wd do no harm. Don't do away with the preliminary enquiries as to a man's character but when you've got got that grant him a license without more ado." ^{he said,} This w^d.

have the additional advantage of reducing values. a magistrate w^d not hesitate to endorse a license worth but £50.

As to women's drinking - it has increased but he doubted whether grocers' licenses had helped it. "I know it's always said that they have, but I never have come across actual proofs, if a woman is inclined to drink she will have it whether she can get it from a grocer or no."

As to Sunday drinking - The Manor house is their great Sunday house. Its owner has 2 men at the door to find out whether customers are bona fide travellers or not (One of them is a pensioned ex-police sergeant who gets 7/6 per day for the job). In his opinion it is kept in a very orderly way. The beer house about 20 yards down is not open during prohibited hours. Why? "I think it is because the Sunday traveller drinks spirits & not beer, it is not far enough out for them to drink because they are really thirsty. Then Sunday is a holiday & the custom everywhere is to have something extra good." He thought that the interests of the public would be better served by having several houses

Difficulty of Drink questions

open on Sunday round Finsbury Park but could not say that he had any complaint to make with the service of the Manor House Tavern in itself.

'You may argue all these questions about drink & licenses up & down & at the end of it have no decided opinion on the question.' He mentioned the difficulty caused by the varying influence of alcohol on individuals. With many men who have been drinking no effects are apparent until they are fully 100 yards away from the licensed house, then they suddenly become unmistakably drunk.

General Remarks. District much improved, less rough - 'None of the squalid poverty that you see in Canning Town.' not even in the poorest houses. Much less brutality in roads now than formerly. The great thing is to know your rough characters - 'if they ^{know they} are known it takes all the fight out of them'. When there is a domestic row the police don't interfere but if it comes out of doors they have to. Policeman once he sees the row is going to be big whistles for aid he never goes away to seek it 'it wd be thought cowardly'. Help is always near. There are a great number of men on duty round about.

Beer houses here as in other districts make the poor neighbour-hood. They always have a local clientele. Each has its own set of customers. Even a neighbour if he did not belong to this set wd be looked on as a Kenee. In fact he wd hardly dare go in.

The Public Houses also have a nucleus of customers, but they depend on casual passenges as well. No public house is set apart in the same way as a beerhouse. In the south part part of the walk there are the Public Houses of the residential neighbourhood ^{type} ~~class~~ doing a good jug trade like those in St Beauvoir town.

Between 8-11 PM are the hours when the habitués are found in their favoured houses. They are the fullest hours for all houses. Women go to public houses just as the men in poor districts: they are not likely to have been affected by the granting of grocer's licenses: Mason could not say he had noticed an increase of drinking among women of the middle class but said he was hardly in a position to judge of it. Children he said do not sip the beer they are sent to fetch 'their parents are too sharp after them for that.'

T.B. Richards - Publican

The gross turnover of the Great Eastern.

Oct 26.

C.D. G.H.D.

T.B. Richards of the Ordnance Tavern. Barking Road
Canning Town. A man recommended by Mr. Reeve of Mr. Truman's as having a special knowledge of the trade & being reliable.

Mr. Richards is a big man looks more like a policeman than a Publican. He is proprietor of the Ordnance Tavern having been advanced money by Truman's but works the house by means of a manager - ^{he is therefore} a sort of middleman manager. Before he came here he managed the Great Eastern Hotel for Truman's.

This is not such a big house as the 'Great Eastern' but at the same time does a large trade. In 1891
when he was in the Great Eastern his gross takings for a whole year were $17,300. ~~He~~
He did, that is, a trade of $1300 per month. As manager there he was paid $5 per week.

Here at the Ordnance Tavern he is overseer to his manager does the accounts, is always about but does not live on the place. Since then he has had as many

Prices.

Causes of rise.

121
many as 6 houses under him but has disposed of them. Houses have risen so much in value that it has been ^{more} profitable to resell them than to trade in them. A short time ago two houses were bought by Charringtons, one, a smaller one than the Ordnance for £4,000 and another - a freehold in the West India Dock road for £66,000 - (This I think was the Aberfeldy Tavern) Mr. Riches at the time of the sale tried to reckon what the house would be worth & priced it at £50,000: he cannot think it will be a successful venture at the higher price -

He had several reasons for the rise in prices.

1. The greater security felt by investors that there wd be no temperance legislation for some time to come.
2. The amount of money seeking investment and the much lower rate of interest that would be taken ^{now} than formerly.
- 3) The population was increasing but the number of licensed houses was decreasing slightly in total number & largely when considered in ratio to

to the population.

With regard to reason 2 he said that he had had offers from Bank managers for loans of money at 4% a thing unheard of some years ago when the Brewers were the only lenders to publicans. The outside public indeed are content with so much lower a rate of interest than Brewers that in spite of the fact that Breweries have been turned into Limited Companies and troubled their Capitals, yet it is probable that the proportion of the ~~publicans'~~^{publicans'} interest to the brewers' interest in licensed houses is greater now than 10 years ago. i.e. that although brewers have been tying houses in every direction yet that the publicans themselves put into each house a larger sum than ever they did before.

The custom at the 'Ordinance' is entirely working class whose tipple is beer.

Friday & Saturday nights & Sundays between 1-3 are the busiest days of the week. On a Saturday evening he will often serve 4000 persons.

The household staff is 11 in number one of whom is a general servant employed in house work. Two are bar.

Busy nights

The power of the police.

Early calling

barmaid, two portmen: leaving 6 men to serve behind the bar ~~in~~ in addition to the 2 women.

'If you serve 4000 men of a working population you must serve a few who ought not be served'. They get near the windows if they are too drunk to come to the bar & a pal passes a pot back to them. There is a policeman on the point duty just outside & if he chose he could run each one of these men in as they came out.

'If the police made a set against you they could ruin you certainly!'

Mr. Richards said he was still & always had been on very good terms with the police. They invite him to their dinners, send him excursion tickets to Gosport at the time of their annual outing etc. He thinks they do their duty and are always policemen first & friends afterwards.

When he was an acting manager he always gave 1/- per week to the man on the beat for calling me in the morning! Now he gives nothing himself personally but thinks his manager probably does. He said ~~it~~ it would be no good to pay the

the police to wink at any illegal proceedings such as allowing adulteration, for the public house was far too much under the public gaze. 'You have always to remember the risk of anonymous complaints to head quarters, which always means an enquiry from head quarters without the knowledge of the men in the subdivision.' This he implied would be sufficient to prevent the payments by publicans ever from becoming so large as to be a public scandal.

"It's quite certain you will never stop drinking by legislation just as you will never stop betting."

Mr. Richards had just engaged two private detectives to watch his house as he suspected a man of betting but had never been able to catch him. Today is the Cambridgeshire, rather than run any risks he had gone to the expense of these two men. He said it would not affect the amount of betting in any way but it might save him from having a man caught by the police in his house. He said that betting tipsters were so good to the custom of a house. The way they carry on betting in spite of his vigilance is this. The bookie knows his customers and only wants a place to meet them them in, the bets are exchanged by means of slips of paper. If you object the man rolls up the slip walks to the gas & pretends he has only taken out the piece of paper to light his pipe. His urinal at the side of the house is also used for the exchange of wagers.

He said that, commercially speaking, it was much more profitable for him if the police did do their duty. It was not gain to him to serve drunken men ^{for} it only got the house a rowdy character & drove away more business than it brought, ^{for the same reason} ~~also~~ he did not want to have loafers round the door. But, as he could not help serving drunken men occasionally he wished the police to recognize the spirit in which he did his work and therefore not to run them in. This is why it is so important to be on the right side of them."

He said there was a good deal of betting in small sweet-shops and that it was increasing: was declined to deplore it 'because there is less money left for beer'. Women are taking to it as well as men: these are even women bookies.

His trade depends on the connection of the house as well as on casual passengers but much more on the former than

Drink Refrains

Women's Dept.

Children

Women's Drinking

than the latter. 'But a beer-house depends a good deal more on a local connection than a 'public'.

During the day there is practically no drinking for pleasure that begins in the evening. ^{In the morning only} ~~practically~~ men come in for bread & cheese with their beer but so neat 'it wd not pay'.

Women come on Mondays & Tuesdays. They generally drink gin neat except when the weather is cold when they like hot water with it.

Children dont sip, their parents are too careful that a full measure is brought home to them for that. They are not often given sweets now since the police orders against it. Language if anything better at the pub than at home. He should ~~not~~ say that women's drinking was not on the increase: it is not among women of the working class with whom he has to deal. This class is not affected by the grocer's licenses. 'A higher class go to them, they dont touch our trade'.

Three years ago he heard of suppers being given to Police inspectors but has not heard of anything lately: police rules are much stricter than they used to be, testimonials are not approved of: concerts where tickets are taken by the neighbours ^{had}

Mr. Richards's manager here is paid 50/- a week. The wages of servants, barmen & portmen is charged to Mr. Richards apart. Food is also allowed at the rate of 10/- a week per head up to 8 persons & 8/- per head above that number. Drinks & cigars are allowed ad lib. House-rent free. So that the manager has really nothing but his own clothing to pay for.

Here the question of treatment by customers is not an important one. Sailors are the worst for it. West enders & City men the next worst. Here it is purely working class. Mr. Richards used always to accept a glass of gin with his customers & then help himself to plain water.

"A man earning 25/- a week down here would certainly keep 5/- of him it himself for beer & tobacco."

Starting from the Police Station in Upper Street, then south down Cross Street: working-class some dwellings: old houses: more people than pink. Then down Queen's Head Road. 4 poor two storied light blue cottages at the Essex Road end: better built 1787. Lower down, purple as map 2 1/2 storied. Then come a block of streets named after the apostles John, Thomas, James & Peter - all of the same class, map marks them pink: Mason said all were working class, purple: unfurnished apartments usual. How some rooms he knows let to 2 or 3 single men (in one room) workmen. 6 roomed houses.

Public House doing
a 'cutting' trade

1 a wash-house, 2½ storied : no servants kept : fair small gardens behind, not built out into Rheidol Terrace is 3½ storied & 8 roomed but otherwise like the foregoing.

Then West along Danbury St (the new name for Essex St) at the corner of which is the Duke of Cambridge public house : covered with hills : "does one of the largest trades in the subdivision" said Mason, is a cutting house, sells ^{special} gin at 4½ a gallon which you buy elsewhere at 6d and 8d beer (bitter) for 6d.

On the South side of the road are Clasnee & Hanover Streets, both pink to Purple - Canal smelling very bad & looking beastly : gardens of Hanover St back on to it.

From & William Streets north of it 2½ storied look worse than Governor St. but are not so: road badly kept: purple to light blue: all this bit is inclined to go down in sympathy with Governor St.: saved from being so bad by not being cul-de-sacs.

North again up St. Peter Street which at the end has shops. At the north end is an old house called 'Black House': supposed to be the Black House of Dickens said Mason, now occupied by a Mr. Repake an undertaker.

The Police staff of the ~~Stoke~~^{Solington} New subdivision is about 150. of whom 120 are constables and 12 are sergeants. In the best part of the district their duties are practically confined to watching. There is very little party giving of an evening because about 80% of the inhabitants of Canonbury are Jews said Mason, so there are no extras to be got in this way. In the poor parts there is nothing to 'bring'; there its the rows that take up most of the police's time.

General Remarks. There is not a really poor bit in this walk. The west side of the Blackstock Road is poor but it is in the Y Police Division. Mason said he thought the real problem that required solution was what to do with young fellows of an evening. In the X Division this is the great Police question. Every evening crowds of them come back from their work & loaf about the streets: they join in with whatever fun is found & embarrass the police. They don't belong to Clubs. There are not many places of amusement for them to go to.

Betting goes on 'or always will'. Police have had complaints & warned men. Men disappeared & they thought they had got rid of them now they hear there is a lady bookmaker in their place. What is a £5 fine to a book maker, he pays it & starts again!

Prostitution - Only one suspected brothel near Canabury station. 'A regular business', he said, 'not a place where you would need go to look for suspects: men come out of it with all their goods & chattels' chattels on them as they went in." Not like the East End (Mason was 7 years in Shadwell) where toothils he hinted were convenient for the police, bad characters went there & they always knew how & where to put their head on them.

Detectives

He would like to see one very large Public House for each district. Less temptation to drink & "It would have to keep many servants & we sh^d always be able to find out what was going on."

There are 4 or 5 plain clothes Detectives in each Subdivision. No particular part of London is more liked ^{by the police} than another, it depends on individual tastes.

OP

G.H.D.

Nov. 7.

G.C. Whiteley. Town hall Chambers. High Street. Southwark.
Clerk to the licensing justices. (Newington)
His district covers all County Council London South of the Thames, as far west as Lambeth is all Bermondsey & Southwark.

Mr. Whiteley is about 55 years old: very portly, so talkative in fact that it is almost impossible to ask him
a question once he is started.

He said there were 12 petty sessional bodies (i.e. licensing magistrates) in London.

He sends out 73 summonses to justices to attend his court. The usual attendances varies from 5 to 10. He says it is the same every where.

No body he said had a well-defined policy. In practice they all try to restrict the numbers of licenses.
He urges his body to grant only full licenses.
Beer houses he abominates - would get rid of them all but ^{most of those in Bermondsey} they are under the previous to 1869 clause

clause & ~~for~~ unless there is any distinct complaint a-gainst them their licenses must be ^{renewed} granted.
It is in the beer houses ^{that} there is adulteration and treat^{ing}ment of the police. The large houses have too much at stake to venture on it. He does not believe there is any regular corruption of the police.
Knows of no money payments. Sometimes he said an inspector is given a supper in order to make things pleasant "but no more than you or I would do if we wanted the presumption to be on our side."

His bench has just passed a resolution that licenses
should only be granted subject to a promise not to serve beer to children. This is being sent round to all the petty sessional bodies but on the whole he does not ap-prove of it: He would like to insist on a separate compartment for those who come to fetch draught beer. The harm is not so much to the children as to the general servant: children take their beer & go straight away with it, they are sub.

subjected to no annoyance. But the young girl of 16 or 17, who has just left school and is at work in a small household as general servant, gets chaffed when she goes to fetch the beer, makes undesirable acquaintance, & often it is the first step in her ruin. Therefore, he says, have separate compartments for jugs; a great many of the better houses have recognized this & have already provided them. It wd be no good to pass a law against the serving of children: mothers take them in with them from babyhood they are accustomed to going in, why prevent them from going in on particular occasions only? Probably the law if passed wd have no effect: thousands of respectable men send their children for beer & see no harm in it.

An example of useless enactment be pointed out ^{may be seen} in the licensing act of 1874 which in order to encourage the restaurant department of public houses declared that each PH must have 2 rooms exclusively reserved for the use of the Public: likewise every beer house ^{must}

must have one. But there is no definition given of a room. In practice one of the rooms has become the Saloon Bar, the other room is used by the Publican as his private sitting room. He has a list of all the licensed houses in his division & thought he had an official map showing them, but on reference to the map which he had not looked at for several years he was surprised to find nothing on it.

He thought it wd be best to have free trade in licensed houses but was afraid of the sudden demoralisation that wd come from granting it. As things are he wd prefer to see licenses gradually diminished & the increased capital value of the remaining houses be put into the pockets of the public. The objection he thought to the gradual increase of the number of houses would be the decreasing value of existing houses consequent on such a policy - 'It wd be robbing the existing proprietors!'

Prices of houses, he said, had reached their highest: there was bound to be a 'slump' soon. Even now he

he thought beerhouses cd. not possibly pay a legiti--mate trade. Therefore you find the abuses of alteration, betting, police treatment etc in beer houses.

Very willing to give any further information.

CP G.H.D.

Interview with Mr. T. Cox. Manager of 5 Public Houses at the Pembury Arms in Hackney. Amhurst Road.

Mr. Cox has dark brown hair, beard & whiskers, is about 50 yrs of age, middle height: his father, grand-father & great grand-father were publicans & his son is going to be one.

He has 5 houses under him. 1. Pembury Arms Amhurst Rd of. The Unicorn at the junction of the Commercial St & Shoreditch 3). One in Tottenham 4). One in Denmark Hill 5). One in Honeston (?)

Mr. Cox said that the old fashioned publican was a man of the past, with his white apron long clay pipe & his habit of drinking with his customers. Now you have a different class of managers - a capitalist - a better class. He

Bars.

Customers.

Serving drunken men.

He thinks that houses never were so well managed as now.

At the Pembury Arms there are 7 bars. two of which are reserved for men only. One is for jugs & bottles. Women are never allowed in the new compartments not even wives of customers.

His chief custom is from the residential class of the neighbourhood, clerks & city people who come home have their supper, then take a turn out of doors & come in to meet their friends at the Pembury Arms. With some houses the main trade is done with passengers. 'It depends of the kind of district you are in.'

It is not important that your house should be conducted respectably. Therefore you must serve no drunken man. His potman fetches the police & he turns out anyone they see has had too much. He sends for the Police in preference to letting his potman turn them out because of the remarks that will be made. 'Look at him turning a man out treating a man man like that after he has made him drunk. The Police are not always near. He has tried for years to get a point placed opposite his door but unsuccessfully the Commissioner always says he cannot spare any more men.

Every week he pays 1/- per week to the police as 'call money'. Nominally it is for calling the servant just before 6 o'clock. This house opens at 7. His house is shut at 5.30.

The potman is now called 'Porter' in better class houses pots are seldom used now. Glasses are becoming more & more universal; the reason being that when you have women at the bar you can't prevent them from having favourites & it used to be their habit to give nearly a pint to such as these at the price of half a pint. Men too when they asked for a half pint always liked to have it served them in a pint pot & insisted on full measure; which they told by tipping up their pot thus

With a glass you serve $\frac{1}{2}$ a pint just which both you & your customers can judge of before you hand it to him.

Those to whom meat & beer is done in public houses are the servant girls sent to fetch beer - not the children. In his house he now has a separate compartment for jugs & bottles so as to prevent this source of annoyance. Children sip, he has often noticed it. He never gives sweets. Considers it unfair trading but has lost the custom of many children by doing so. 'A child will go 100 yards further for their parents beer if they will get a sweet by so doing'. He did not think that the gift of sweets stopped the habit of sipping.

Houses have gone up enormously & still are going up. Thinks many of them cannot pay at the present prices. 'They are getting more & more into the hands of brewers'. They are worth more than they can give a return on now because of their prospective monopoly value. No new licenses are granted. Population increases & with it the demand for beer.

He has noticed no increase in women's drinking with

Treatment by customers

187
With regard to the treatment by customers. Mr. Cox when he served behind the counter always refused to accept drinks. People were offended at first but rather glad of it later. They gave a preference to the house when they knew they wd not have to stand a drink to the publican.

Inspector Thresher - retired after 26 years service in the London police corps. of which 12 years were spent in Whitechapel. He keeps a sweet stuff shop now in the Upper Clapton Road. Address. Swanley Ho. The Pond. Upper Clapton Rd.

Thresher is a man of about 50 years of age. A teetotaler & has been all his life. Has left the force now 3 years.

He knows very little of the neighbourhood he has now made his home & was, like the active police, unwilling to say anything that could be construed as unfavourable to the force.

As to indirect earnings he said they were practically nil 'if they were divided among the whole force I don't believe they wd amount to $\frac{1}{2}$ ^d per head per month'. There used to be call money for waking men & shops in the morning but this has gradually become a business of itself & each each district now has its own early callers. The loss to the police has been a gradual thing. Began well before the Trafalgar square days. Fact is that every now & then there was a case to be run in & that meant that a whole batch of men had to be left uncalled. Customers were dissatisfied & so cast about for some more certain means of being woken. He fancies that ~~some~~ ^{some} such publicans ~~to~~ ^{still} do pay call money though he said it was quite exceptional that they should pay anything at all.

Police man sometimes get treated to beer but this is less common than it used to be. Public houses are so much more strictly kept. There is so much money at stake in them that it is not worth the publican's while to run any risks. Beer houses are more likely to offer beer than Publics. He admitted that any man who looked as if he wd not mind a drink would get it. He has seen portmen bring it round to the constable in the urinal at the side of the Public. But policemen are a ^{more} more sober lot than they used to be.

 Children do sip the beer they are sent to fetch; but this is not the origin of their liking for beer this dates back to early infancy while they were yet in their mother's arms. Mothers drink stout in order to increase the supply of milk in the breast but often help the baby straight from the pint pot from which they help themselves.
 There is a good deal of betting about. The difference between betting here & in Whitechapel is that here it goes on in the streets but in Whitechapel, in the clubs.

Superintendent Vedy, head of the Y Division, (headquarters, Holmes Road, Kentish Town) recommended Inspector Dyball as intelligent & knowing district well though he had only been in it a year. They have no old inspectors in this quarter "owing to many recent changes". Inspector Dyball has black moustache & beard, rather over medium height. Has been in the service 8 yrs. is now about 40. General Remarks. Dyball said that the beer houses were always used by particular sets of men who passed passed their evenings in them: over a pot of ale sitting & smoking generally labourers, they are their clubs & not places where they get drunk: he said they met a real want and spoke more highly of them than of public houses whose object he said was to send you away as soon as you ceased to drink. The number of off-beer licenses is noticeable. In this district they are generally combined with wine & spirit dealing or retailing (in bottles) or with grocery shops. Clerks wives prefer to send their children to them rather than to the beer house or public house, so does the better artisan: this beer he said was no cheaper but supposed to be purer than that bought at the public. He has noticed no increase in the drinking of women.

Off-beer licenses.

Paunbrokers.

Paunbrokers he said have every morning a list brought to them by the police of goods that have been stolen & that possess some mark of identification on them. Paunbrokers do a fair business here, not many of them. Monday & Tuesday the day they are most used. On Friday or Saturday the wife receives her house keeping money from her husband. With it she pays for the goods she has bought on credit during

During the week & also the Sunday dinner, further she takes the family clothes at of pawn for Sunday. On Monday or Tuesday the rent collector calls & the clothes are put away again to raise money for him: then the process is repeated. The chief motive is the raising of money said Dyball the safety of the clothes in the pawnbrokers' shop is only a secondary consideration. (Donaldson of Hackney Wick told me last week that the Wick pawnshop took regularly 2000 bundles every Monday & gave them out again every Saturday. He also said that the sufferings of the boys in the stowing away room from flea bites was something awful, he knew one of them)

Dyball repeated what others have said of the impossibility of being a lodger if you had a family. Hence it comes that the families are the tenants of the whole house & let off as much as they can.

Tenement houses are those in which the different floors are taken directly from the land lord, lodgings houses those in which the tenant is the subletter. The ordinary small house in the district

District, a house with 2 stories has a front & a back room on the ground floor, a kitchen & a wash house built out behind. Upstairs there is one room in front with 2 windows, one behind, and what is called the 'slip' room over the kitchen. This is generally fitted with a range & often with a sink as well so that the 2 storied house may be let, (& generally is) to two families.

As an Inspector he has every other Sunday as a free day. Ordinary constables are free one day every fortnight. 'On leave' it is called. Those on leave are generally those chosen for special duties such as watching at weddings, concerts, entertainments etc. Permission is first obtained from the Superintendent, so arranged that each man has an equal amount of this form of duty. The man engaged receives 5/- the rest (generally ~~2/-~~^{15/-}) is ^{posted for} divided equally among all the men at the end of the year.

Then West along Hornsey Road which is poor at this end. Some new 3 storied tenements (Ingram Ho & adjacent Ho) just built & a common lodging house for men with beds at 6^d per night - on the north side. On the south side is a block of dark blue streets - all very poor but people who work hard for their living' said Dyball. Brunswick Grove - with ill palinged fronts - many broken windows - 2 storied. Let out in separate furnished rooms. Light to dark blue. Then Brand St. further west with Brand Court out of it, dark blue, 2 storied, wheels & vegetable refuse lying about in street, coster the inhabitants. Cats' meat seller - cooked horse flesh 2½^d per lb, & men make a very good living at it too for nearly every poor family is a customer for its cat even though it can hardly afford to feed itself'.
