Visit to Woolwich with Mr Henry Hull, of the S.C. Mission. 55 Gildersome Street
Woolwich.

Met Mr Hull at the Dockyard Station at 3pm. Mr Hull is a London City Missionary, now stationed at Woolwich. He was formerly a Royal Artilleryman. After he left the service, he was employed at the Soldiers' Home, Shorncliffe where he added to his experience of soldiers' life.
From there, he entered the S.C.M. and was appointed to Woolwich.

At Woolwich the Royal Artillery,
Royal Horse Artillery, the Lincolnshire Regt and some companies of the Army Service Corps are stationed. Artillerymen greatly preponderate.

The Soldiers' Life.

Sergeant Giles

- The soldier's life has three aspects:
- (1) General & Field Drill - Mornings
 - (2) Detail Drill & Stables Afternoons
 - (3) Domestic, Social & Barrack life Evenings.

Of these we were to see the two latter two.

Went direct to the Royal Artillery
Barracks to see Sergeant Giles, R.A. He was quartered in the West Square. Here the stables occupy the ground floor with the barrack rooms above reached by an iron staircase leading to an open balcony upon which the rooms open.

Sergeant Giles and another Sergeant occupied a small room between two barrack rooms, for one of which he was responsible and his comrade for the other. Giles is a smart Christian young man: he had placed a number of ornamental texts and some family photographs over ab the head of his bed. His comrade, a much older man serving for 21 years, has seen service in India & is said to be too fond of his glass. He came into the room for a minute whilst I was there.

I found Giles frank & ready to talk. Said the Artillery was the hardest branch of the Service. The artilleryman has two horses to tend; the cavalryman but one. The artilleryman's day he described as follows:

Reverille - 5. 30.

6.30 wake.

Stables 6 - grooming etc

Breakfast 7. -

Soldiers are glad to leave the Army.
and would be glad to Return afterwards.

Asked his opinion of the Service as a career. He answered in a general way, that all the men would be glad when their time was up. This opinion is held by nearly all soldiers. Mr Hutt confirmed the statement and several men in the barrack rooms conformed the fact, both artillery men and infantry. "Glad to get out of it"; "Wish my 7 years were up." A young Lincoln said: "They are all glad to get out of it & then after ~~or~~ 6 months ^{out of} work would be equally glad to return. Personally, Sgt Sales thinks the army

Some Non-Coms "speak favourably of the Army.

army is alright if a man keeps right. A young corporal (Artillery) met at the Soldiers' Home, and the sergeant in charge of the canteen at the Recruit Depot gave a similar opinion. Both said that the men had good chances if they behaved well and they certainly did not regret their choice of the army. Both these men were in exceptional positions. The sergeant beside the canteen pay is a married man with several children and his wife does regimental washing so that with the extra payment for the canteen the couple make a good income. The corporal was engaged as a clerk. I did not meet a single private, who spoke a good word for the service as a means of earning a living or seemed contented with his choice.

In the artillery barrack room a few of the men were lounging on their cots but most of them were seated on their beds cleaning some part of their equipment.

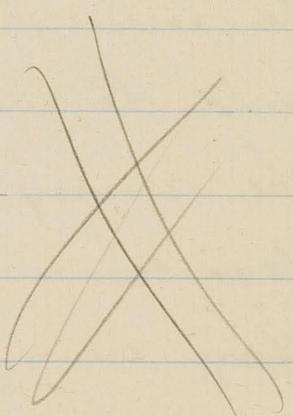

Sergeant Giles then took us to see the Sergeants' Mess room, a comfortable apartment with pictures, piano & easy chairs - some of the pictures

Artillery Barrack Room

The Sergeants' Mess Room.

The Canteen

Food is cheap.

Pictures were a gift from the bazaar of Russia.

Adjoining the room was the sergeants' billiard room.

Then visited the Canteen. In one part alcoholic drinks are sold and the adjoining part is a kind of regimental coffee bar fitted with wooden benches & tables. Here the men can obtain tea, coffee, cakes, meat & other food at cheap rates -
at prices about the same as those at dockhead.

Coffee rooms - Tea & coffee $\frac{1}{2}$ d a cup or rather a basin.

At this point Sergeant Giles left us & we went to see other parts of the Barracks.

The Recruiting Depot.

and Canteen.

The Recruiting depot where the recruits are received is a loftier building than those in West Square. Here as elsewhere the lower floor is stables. Passing upstairs we entered the canteen, a cheerless apartment, sanded floor, a few deal tables & forms etc. It is intended for the recruits. The food is as cheap as that at the other canteen. Tea, an halfpenny per cup, (It is measured in a cup but the purchaser receives it in a basin), cakes $\frac{1}{2}$ d & 1d - no plate, you place your food on the table - walls bare bare - not the least sign of comfort. Two recruits just arrived & not having obtained their regiments came in while we were in the canteen - quite boys, and rather subdued by their unaccustomed surroundings. Passed upstairs and saw the sleeping rooms. Like those in the other parts of the barracks but larger.

A Fretworking Cook'

In one room found a young fellow working a fret saw in a corner near a window, the wall in the immediate neighbourhood being covered with some specimens of his work. He was 'cook' for that room e.g. when the food came from the cook house, he received it and served it out; he had also to keep the room clean & for this purpose he is freed from drills etc & consequently had some time on his hands in the afternoon. He disposed of his work to the soldiers - frames for photographs were most in demand. He was a total abstainer. If he were shifted from here, he would have to leave his things in a box & get them sent on. Could not take them with the company.

The Cookhouse

Preparation of Meals.

9

Went to the Cookhouse. Tea was being prepared. At one side of the shed was occupied by a range of ~~boilers~~^{coppers} and close to these stood a number of pails containing a dark coloured fluid - tea. Into these one of the cooks was throwing boiling water from the coppers, ~~too~~ using two cans held in one hand for the purpose. Three cooks were employed here cooking for that block of barracks.

The Married Quarters.

We then visited the Married Quarters. These consisted of blocks of two-storeyed dwellings, the upper floor being reached by an outside staircase and balcony. The apartments seen consisted of one room; there are some with two rooms, the amount of accommodation depending upon the size of the family. The Govt supplies a few articles of furniture, stools, fender, nail table, etc but otherwise the soldier provides his own home. Nominally only men whose wives are on the establishment live in these quarters, if others marry they must provide their home outside as best they can.

No allowances are made for the wife or family.

In these blocks we found one couple, the wife not being on the establishment. The soldier who had the right to live in the tenement had a house in Woolwich & preferred to live there, so this man was permitted to take his place. This man was at home; he had sprained his foot on the previous day and unless he could return to his duty on the morrow (which was not possible) he would have to go into the hospital. His wife was daily expecting her confinement and not being on the strength, could not go into the women's hospital and would be alone there.

The Infantry Barracks

The Barrack Rooms.

Next visited the Marine Barracks, where the Lincolns were lying. It was getting dusk when we arrived. These men were evidently not so hard worked as the others. Some were lying on their cots; ^{here & then one was} others in bed; others were preparing for a walk, a few were cleaning their things and sometimes a knot were gathered near ^{the fire} talking and ready to speak about their life.

In all the rooms, as in those of the Artillery

Barracks

Barracks, the bare walls gave a cheerless tone to the rooms. In one room a print from an illustrated paper was placed over the mantelpiece and in the bandsman's room the entire space above the fire place was covered with such pictures, mostly theatrical and military subjects. These were the only attempts to relieve the monotony of the bare walls.

Talking to some of the bandsmen, I found that they were doubtful about their chances of obtaining employment on leaving the service altho' they have special opportunities to join bands etc. The general opinion was that a man should be able to play two instruments and then he stood a chance but not much otherwise.

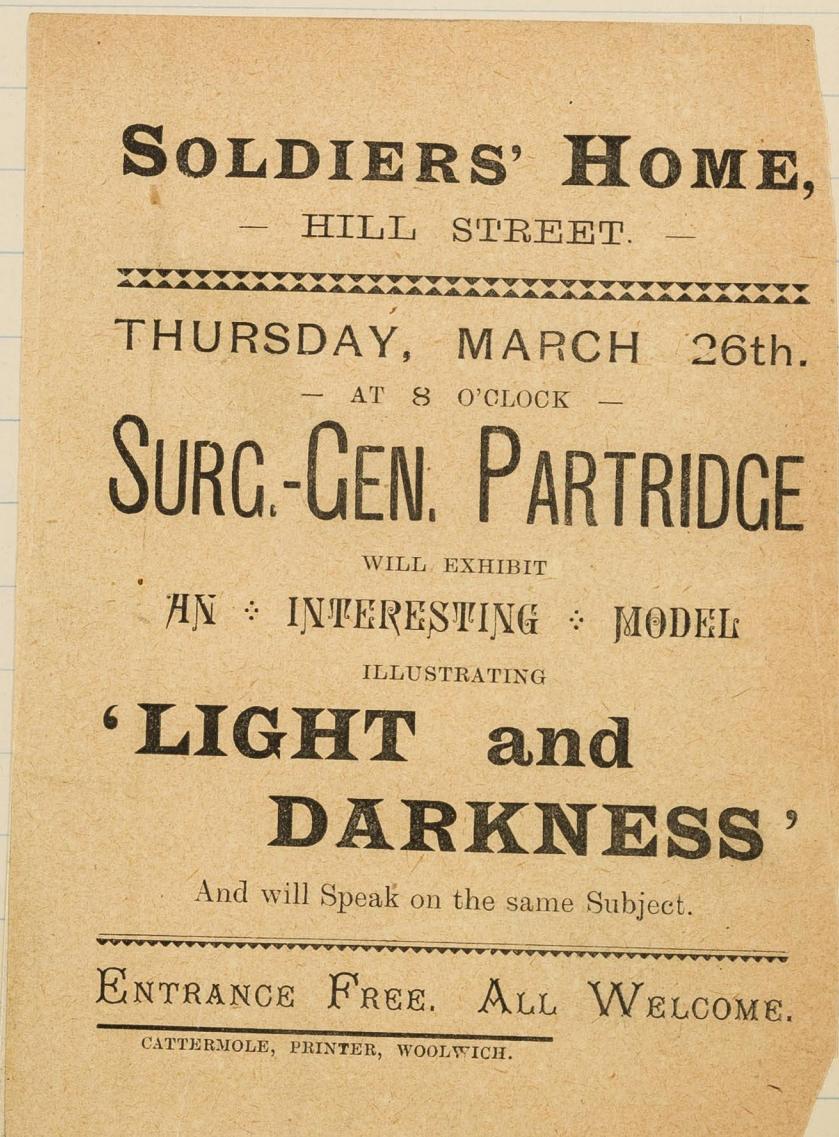

The general impression made by the visit to barracks was that whilst all that is necessary for the soldiers' physical existence is provided - his food, bed, gymnasium - there is nothing to elevate him and the discipline & routine of his life tend to repress any individuality of character.

indeed this is rendered unnecessary & as the soldier knows that whatever happens he is sure of his board & lodging for some years.

The bareness of the rooms and the absence even of the decencies of life ~~are~~ tend to bring out the coarser side of the men's character. Thus I noticed that, outside each barrack room, ^{on the landing} a bucket was placed to serve the purpose of a urinal. At the depot, a zinc bath tub was substituted, a pail being probably too small for the larger number of men. One of these I noticed was full of all kinds of filth. That Tommy should be glad to get out of barracks as quickly as possible is quite natural and the publichouses scarcely need the red jerseyed barmaids that one Woolwich pubman has obtained to attract him.

In the evening I went to the Soldier's Home in Hill Street. There are ^{three} in Woolwich. Here a reading room, billiards table & refreshment bar is provided and a large room, formerly the gallery of the Hall below, is furnished as a drawing room - carpeted, piano, tables with books & games of various kinds. Two ladies welcomed the visitors & occasionally one or more of the soldiers sang while now and then one of the soldiers took his place at the piano. At 8 o'clock a gospel meeting was held in the Hall, at which a retired officer - Surgeon General Partridge, exhibited a model. About 50 soldiers attended the front seats being reserved for them, the general public occupying the remainder of the building hall and forming the bulk of the audience.

Libraries

(See also page 41)

The men have libraries in the barracks, but they do not seem to be well patronised. In a sergeant's room, I saw a book belonging to the library, and in one of the barracks rooms two soldiers were writing a passage from the dictation of a third man, and in another a man was writing a letter. These were the only indications of intellectual activity.

Army & Navy Pensioners' Employment Society.
Secretary: Granville Knox. 20 Charing Cross, W.C.

Established 1855.

Called upon the Secretary & obtained copy of Report.
for 1895.

The Society's object is defined as "For Registering the Names, Addresses, Characters &c of Military & Naval Pensioners from Her Majesty's Service, and procuring for them such Employment as they may be capable of undertaking".

The Society has branch offices at Dublin and Glasgow. The following statistics are taken from the Report:

The following Table shows the number of Pensioners registered, and of the permanent and temporary places obtained for the last four years:—

	Men Registered.	Places Obtained.
	1892.		1893.		1894.		1895.
London,	395	839	404	765	398	723	347	660
Dublin,	124	921	140	826	113	772	97	814
Glasgow,	74	576	53	570	60	495	36	473
Total,.....	593	2,336	597	2,161	571	1,990	480	1,947

The decrease in the number of situations obtained is due partly to the depressed state of business in general, and partly to the fact that during the Christmas of 1895 no men were taken by the General Post Office, which, in former years, has been the case; the reason being that men in uniform were required.

Through married Pensioners getting employment in London 486 women and 781 children, in Dublin 628 women and 1,262 children, in Glasgow 354 women and 558 children have been benefited by the Society.

Of the places thus obtained, 100 were for men of the Royal Navy & the remainder Army men, of the latter the Royal Artillery obtained the most appointments (266) no other branch of the service obtaining 100 places.

The Council decided that when no pensioners equally suitable were available, Reserve men may be recommended. By this decision 152 men in Dublin & 77 in London received appointments. These are not shown in the statistics.

Most of the men registering are non-commissioned officers. The rules governing registration are given below:

RULES FOR THE GUIDANCE OF PENSIONERS.

ALL men discharged from Her Majesty's Military or Naval Forces with Pensions are eligible to be registered for employment. They must be fit for work & have been in the service for at least two years.

They must be of good character & have a good character reference.

They must be physically fit & able to work.

They must be of sound mind & able to understand simple instructions.

They must be able to speak English & able to understand simple instructions.

Of the places thus obtained, 100 were for men of the Royal Navy & the remainder Army men, of the latter the Royal Artillery obtained the most appointments (266) no other branch of the service obtaining 100 places.

The Council decided that when no pensioners equally suitable were available, Reserve men may be recommended. By this decision 152 men in Dublin & 7 in London received appointments. These are not shown in the statistics.

Most of the men registering are non-commissioned officers. The rules governing registration are given below:

RULES FOR THE GUIDANCE OF PENSIONERS.

ALL men discharged from Her Majesty's Military or Naval Forces with Pensions are eligible to be registered for employment through the aid of this Society, in complying with the following Rules:—

1. Any Pensioner wishing to be registered, must produce his parchment Certificate of Discharge and Pension Certificate, and give satisfactory proof of good character; as also any Testimonials he may have in his possession from Officers of the Regiment to whom he may be personally known. A copy of these documents will be retained by the Society and attached to the Register. When more than six months have elapsed between the date of his Discharge and his application for registration by the Society, satisfactory Testimonials must likewise be produced of his conduct during the interval.

2. Pensioners should present themselves at the Office of the Society when practicable. When it is inconvenient to do so they may apply by letter, and the necessary Form of Application will be sent to them. This should be filled up by the Applicant, if possible, in his own handwriting, and be forwarded to the Secretary of the Society, accompanied by the necessary Certificates as to character.

3. A Pensioner becoming acquainted with any vacant situation which he is competent to fill, intimating the same to the Secretary, will receive every possible assistance in obtaining it.

4. Pensioners registered by the Society must communicate at once to the Secretary should they get employment elsewhere, or change their address, and should they leave such employment with a satisfactory character, they will still be entitled to situations through the medium of the Society; but in the event of not giving such intimation, their names will be struck off the Register.

5. The attention of Pensioners is specially called to the above Rules, by which they will perceive that, when once their names have been registered, it is only misconduct that will deprive them of the power of applying to the Society for employment at any time.

The men's names are entered on the Register with a note as to their capabilities and the kind of situation they are seeking. The Society endeavours to obtain situations for the men by inserting advertisements in the papers and bringing the Society under the notice of employers.

Sailors are preferred
by Employers.

They never have any difficulty in obtaining places for naval men. The employers prefer them; they can turn their hand to anything and are much more handy than soldiers. Soldiers will think ~~any~~ thing out of the ordinary is not his work.

For some classes of situation they have more applications for men than they can fill, such as for a man and wife as indoor servants. Cannot get men who can wait at table. To fill such situations a man must have been an officer's servant.

In a room adjoining the office, a number of men were waiting. These, the Secretary said, were mostly men, who had had a situation and had left. He would only recommend them for temporary employment such as addressing circulars; for permanent situations he would take men from the Register.

National Assⁿ for the Employment of Reserve Soldiers
Col. A. M. Handley

National Assⁿ for the Employment of Reserve Soldiers.
Established 1886. 12 Buckingham Street, Strand WC
Interview with the Secretary: Col. A. M. Handley.

OBJECTS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

THE objects of the Association are to assist Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Soldiers, of approved character, in obtaining civil employment, upon quitting the Army, and at the same time to benefit employers of labour by enabling them, at any time, to obtain men of good character and varied qualifications, and generally to use all means that may be effectual for promoting the employment of soldiers at the critical time of their returning to civil life.

The great majority of the men are about 26 years old, strong and active, and by their few years of military life have been trained to habits of regularity and discipline. It was to assist these men at a critical portion of their career that the Society was founded.

The Assⁿ has 76 branches or agencies in various parts of the United Kingdom, in addition to its chief office in London.

The number of men for whom employment has been found since the Assⁿ was started is as under:

Number of situations obtained

Year ending 31st March,	Men placed in Employment.	Increase or Decrease %
1886	174
1887	470	+ 29%
1888	1,013	+ 48%
1889	1,462	+ 14%
1890	1,890	- 7%
1891	2,097
1892	2,614
1893	3,886
1894	4,442
1895	4,120

It will be noted that the increase of the number of situations found has stopped and that 1895 shows a decrease of 322. This is probably due to the severe winter of 1894-5. In this year about 700 applicants obtained employment in Government Offices but the number engaged by the G.P.O. was 145 less than the previous year. { The great increase in 1893 was due to the opening of the affiliated agencies. Col Handley thinks they have reached their maximum now.

About 17000 men return to civil life annually, many of whom have served abroad. Such men arrive home during the winter months, the worst time for obtaining employment.

The Assⁿ is brought under the notice of the men through the Commanding Officer. Every man of good character on entering the Reserve is (or should be) given a card which he is told to take to the Association. This card contains a description of the man & the addresses of the offices. By permission of the War Office, it is an official Army form. (See opposite side). In no cases is a man's name registered unless he be of good character. Their qualifications are enquired into & then by advertising or answering ads

Principal Occupations.

Of the ~~sets~~ 4120 situations found for men in 1894-95 the chief occupations were:

Postmen 681

Porter & Messenger 465

Labourers &c 614

Railway Porters 322

Indoor Servants 331

Grooms & Coachmen 300

Attendants at 214

Caretakers 133.

Carman 99

Police 97.

As with the other society, the Royal Artillery men receive the most appointments viz: - 445 the next highest number being 132 for the Army Service Corps.

During the year 9710 men were registered as against 4120 employed. Of these numbers 1634 were registered at London & 75 at Woolwich & employment found for 837 at London and 29 at Woolwich.

mentioning to Col. Handley the fact that very few of the men seen in the Barrack rooms knew anything about the Association, he thought that was very likely but that men of good character should be told of it on passing into the reserve. Asked whether a printed notice might not be placed in each barrack room containing particulars of the various societies for finding employment for soldiers, something on the same lines as the Factory Act notices in workshops, he agreed that such a notice was desirable. One difficulty was that while the War Office is friendly and assists them as it can, makes a grant towards the funds of the Association etc., it will not recognise any obligation to find the men employment on leaving the colours. The Department's responsibility ends with the end of the contract between itself and the soldier. It is consequently chary of doing anything that might make it appear to accept any responsibility of the kind.

Col. Handley gave me a copy of a little handbook published by Gale & Polden, Aldershot entitled "Guide to obtaining Civil Employment"

This has been revised by Col. Handley and contains particulars of the various organisations for assisting soldiers in obtaining civil employment.

Beside those already mentioned are the following:

- (1) The Register for Civil Employment. An official register kept at the Headquarters of each Regimental District by the recruiting officer here. Special Registers are kept in London by the Asst. Adjutant General, St Georges Barracks, Charing Cross, & the Officer Commanding 4th Batt. Royal Fusiliers Finsbury EC, and at Woolwich by the Recruiting Staff Officer.
- Supp. 1-4
- (II) The Corps of Commissioners 419 Strand. See p. 28-47.

III The Guards' Employment Society for non-committed Officers & men of the ~~Guards~~ Brigade of Guards.

Honsec: Capt. Pulleyn, Scots Guards. Office at Horse Guards Whitehall.

Two others ~~are~~ confine their operations to localities outside London: (a) The Riflemen's Aid Society, Winchester and (b) The Loyal Association of Pensioners, Dublin.

Speaking about the desire of the men to quit the service as soon as possible, he said that for the young soldier in India the £ 22 and a free passage home to see his friends was an irresistible inducement for them to leave. At home the latter attraction is not so powerful as the men are allowed furlough. Then the War Office does not like men to reenlist. Their idea is that the man should go into the Reserve and his place with the Batt² be taken by another recruit.

Mr G. Pullinger. The Guards' Mission

58 High Street, Pimlico S.W.

This mission occupies a private house. Mr Pullinger, formerly in the Guards, visits the different barracks and invites soldiers to the house where a meeting room is provided & meetings are held two or three times a week.

Went this evening and met two guardmen after the meeting, which had been conducted by a Baptist minister. Some tea & biscuits were provided for the men, who sat down to chat for an hour before returning to barracks.

One of the men was a colour sergeant in the Transport Branch of the Coldstreams. He is not now living in barracks as he is a married man. Speaking about the new orders for route marching he said that the men did not like it at first but they soon fell into it.

The barrack rooms vary in different barracks. They are small at Wellington, only accommodating about 14 men, those at Chelsea hold about 28 men, while when he came to Chelsea from Windsor, he thought the rooms at Chelsea small - those at Windsor are larger.

A Private in the Coldstreams now stationed at Wellington Barracks was also there. He is quite a youth, only been in the Regiment a year. When he joined he was sent to Caterham, where he had 14 hours drill a day for 114 weeks. He attended school in the afternoon and by that means he escaped other drill. He liked the Army fairly well" but will be glad when his time is up.

The Woolwich Institute

Interview with Col. P. A. Twynam CB Organizing Sec^r of the Church of England Soldiers' Institutes Assⁿ.

Gave me a copy of the Report of the Association for 1895 and also a report of the "Church of England Soldiers Institute" at Woolwich for the same year.

The Association at present comprises seven Soldiers' Institutes, of which only one (Woolwich) is within our area. It has a code of Regulations to which all must conform. These enact amongst other things that the title "Church of England Soldiers' Institute" shall appear on the front of the buildings & that opportunities for worship & religious instruction, in accordance with the principles of the Church of England only, shall be provided in each Institute; but attendance at such service or institution shall be purely voluntary.

The Institutes are open and free to all Soldiers, Sailors & Marines and soldiers may bring friends ^(male & female) to the Recreation Rooms at any hour up to 6.30pm.

The Institute at Wellington Street, Woolwich has been in existence six years and rather more than a year ago it entered into possession of a large new red brick building situated on Government ground. It is open as follows:

Sundays.

Sitting rooms etc from 2 P.M. till 10.30 P.M.

Bar from 1 P.M. till 2 P.M. & from 5 till 10.30 P.M.

Week days.

Sitting rooms from 11 am till 10.30 P.M.

Bar from 8 am till 11 p.m.

The building is intended to offer to soldiers the advantage of a club. In the bar wholesome & cheap refreshment can be obtained but not alcoholic drinks. Smoking is allowed everywhere except the Devotional Room. Free weekly entertainments have been held on Tuesdays during the autumn, winter & spring and on Sunday evenings short services, illustrated by lantern pictures have been given. The reports say that all have been well attended.

Talking upon the subject of the religious work of these Institutes Col. T. said that while they provided religious teaching, they would not allow the club rooms to be used for religious propaganda as they wanted all the men to come to the Institutes & they would not do so if they thought they would be spoken to.

Effects of Army life}
upon the men.

As to the effects of the Army on the men, he said that the fault of Tommy Atkins was his want of initiative; he is used to having everything done for him. This was partly due to his training. The rules of the service was that if you sent a private into the town you would send a non-commissioned officer with him and naturally the man thinks he is not responsible. When inspecting a man's kits, if any thing were wrong the captain would go for the non-commissioned officers in charge of the room. He tried to alter it. In such a case he went straight for the man, and would give the men work to do & hold them responsible for it. In that way he found out that men would sometimes neglect work in order to get their non-commissioned officer into trouble.

Mr H. Hawley
Army Scripture Reader
and Sergeant Shilton.

Soldiers Club.

Why men join the Army.

Interview with Mr H. Hawley, Army Scripture Reader and Sergeant Shilton at the St Mary Abbotts' Soldiers' Club, 21 Church St. Kensington.

Mr Hawley is a middle-aged man, who had served in the Army previous to his appointment as Scripture Reader. He lives at the Club, which he manages for St Mary Abbotts' Church.

The Club was opened in Feb 1887, and the total attendance of soldiers since 10140. It is open from 4.30 to 11 pm. and during the winter on Sundays for the same time. Five or ten men come in every night. (The average attendance worked out from figures given above is only 3) It is situated opposite the Kensington Barracks, where about 50 men of the Transport Corps. are now stationed.

Of the reasons leading recruits to enlist, Mr. thinks two are very strong and outweigh all others. They are "want of employment and ⁽²⁾ the desire for glory and combined with a roving disposition. These causes operate about equally.

Agrees that the Artillery is the hardest worked branch of the service. The Guards get more more drill than other infantry soldiers as they have to crowd seven years' drill into three years. Then they have guard & picket duties: these amount to at least one day a week and ^{when} less than 5 battalions are in London (as is now the case) would be 2 days a week.

The character of the men is very much better than 20 years ago. Drunkenness is less frequent nor are there so many desertions. At one time courts-martial were frequent for such offences: today the chief offence is fraudulent re-enlistment.

They are getting a better class of men to join. — although the men are nearly all boys — men who join with a view to better their position and regard the army as their profession. As examples Mr. instanced the men joining from the agricultural districts.

The pay is 1/- a day and the recruit has 5/3 a week for himself after he has paid for his groceries and washing, which amount to 5½ d a day. When he gets a good conduct badge, he has 1²/d a day additional. —

Promotion also is quicker in the Guards, owing to the shorter service and a well-conducted man can—

Character of Men

can usually reckon on obtaining his strip.

At this point of the interview Sergeant Shilton came in, and the details as to married life, washing etc. are from his experience as a rule. He has just completed his service (21 yrs) & has 14 medals & good conduct badges.

Marriage Regulations

Married Man's Income.

Regimental Washing

Before a man can marry on the establishment he must have been 7 years in the Service and have at least one good conduct badge - he should have two. He can then put his name down but he may wait other 5 years before he obtains permission.

When a man marries on the establishment, he has married quarters, fuel & light provided & can draw his rations. He then has an income of at least $8\frac{1}{2}$ a day e.g. 7/- pay & 7/- for good conduct badge, beside his daily ration of $3\frac{1}{4}$ lb of meat and 1 lb of bread.

To increase the family income the washing of the regiment is done by the wives of the married men. The washing is divided equally among the married men of the battalion, the non-coms taking their share as well as the men, if they like to do

The Army Service Corp men at Woolwich pay 1^d a day for washing & they can send articles that the ordinary soldier. e.g. pants & do so, as most of them do. In sharing out the non-comms take precedence according to rank; a colour sergeant might take the first 20 men in a company, a sergeant the next, and a married private's allowance might be made up from two companies. For this the (Guards) men pay ½d per day and this 3½d a week goes to the man, whose wife does the work. Usually they each one washes for about 23 men & this amounts to 6½d a week & from this they pay 8d a week for gathering unless the man does this himself as Sergeant Shilton did. The washing may be said to bring in not less than 4/- a week on the average. All

All the married men ^{usually} draw washing but all the wives do not do wash. They will give it to another woman and share the money equally between them so that some women may be found doing the washing for 3 or 4 others. Of late years' Shilton's wife has not done any. She has paid a woman for the day, finding her in materials soap etc.

If men cannot be accommodated in the married quarters, they have an allowance for fuel & light. It is not nearly sufficient - 15/- a month e.g. 16^d a day for lodging and 2^d a day fuel & light.

Comes under Section 20 of Allowances Schedule.

The Coal allowance is 80 lb of coal a week in summer and 120 lb a week in winter. It is not sufficient; always have to buy to eat a week & sometimes more.

Marrying without leave.

Men who marry off the establishment have no indulgences. It is not a military offence to marry but the authorities will not recognise the wife. The number of men married thus is large. Some time ago two companies of the 2nd Grenadiers, each about 60 strong, were stationed here (in Kensington). A lady wrote to ask Mrs Mawbey whether she knew any deserving case of a man married, who was not on the strength, that she could help the wife. He made the enquiries ^{and} with a sergeant pointed him to a man seated on a cot saying "He has a wife & 2 children and is a decent fellow. He does not drink but takes all his money to his wife". He spoke to the man and obtained permission for his wife to visit the woman. They found her occupying 2 rooms in a block of buildings buildings in Westminster. It was a bitterly cold day but the woman, who was unwell, had no fire and only one blanket. When she could she did a little mangleing. Practically she had nothing to live upon. Her husband gave her his money (573) a week & she paid 46 for the rooms. All such women have to depend on charity or are driven to prostitution to support their children, the latter is too frequently the case especially when a battalion leaves London.

Learning a trade. Some of the men learn tailoring at the Army Clothing Depot. A squad of men belonging to different regiments may be seen marching from Barracks to the Depot. They become master tailors in their own regiments eventually. Then there are bootmakers and also the pioneers, who know some trade but do not as a rule learn it in the Army altho' they work at it & may improve. Practically the tailoring is the only trade learnt in the Army. When working at his trade the man is paid 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per hour extra.

A Grenadiers }
Evidence }

Grenadier belonging to 3rd Battalion, now stationed at the Tower. Met in Kensington.

Has been in the Service for 6 years and will be out of his time in 10 months. Has had nearly enough of it. The Army has got worse, what with drills and route marching. The work is much harder than it was. Attributes it to the new Commander in chief.

Their turn for guard come once a week and then they are on guard for 24 hours. Go on at 10am and don't return to barracks until about 11am the next day. Only get 3 or 4 afternoons a week.

Asked why the men do not patronise the Soldiers' Homes more than they do, he replied that they do not care much for them. The men who went were a sort of two-faced people. He did not go regularly: sometimes went in on Sunday to have a little tea or something.

They become a sergeant in 6 years but then there must be a clean record. Thinks it is much better in the cavalry and infantry than in the Guards. Here there is so much 'knocking one another down'. They are pleased to have an opportunity to do you harm. If you are in trouble they will not help you but think it will bring them up one.

Likes London better than any other place. Thinks that after London the men like Dublin best - "You see it is a big city." Windsor is very well in summer but very dull in the winter.

Likes the Tower because there are so many old places - historical associations. They are always doing something to the drains. Thinks they have not got a plan of the old drains as they are always digging to find some of the pipes. Chelsea barracks are closed now - repairing drains.

a large building the Wesleyan schools occupying the upper portion.

Descending a few steps, a wide entrance lobby is reached, which opens into the general room. It contains tables with books & papers and a bagatelle board.
At the side is a small coffee bar at which refreshments can be obtained & beyond this are the baths, lavatory etc. A special room is provided ~~not~~ for married soldiers and their wives. Beds are also provided in an adjacent house to which access is obtained without going onto the street.

From the general room, another large room is entered in which the devotional meetings and soldier teas are held.

Army Service Corps Barracks.

39

Went to the Army Service Corps barracks.

This was formerly an hospital and has been adapted to its present used. It is the Depot of the Corps. The Barrack rooms are small, not holding more than a dozen men and open on wide but gloomy corridors.

My special object here was to see the arrangements made for the social well-being of the men so we went direct to the Regimental library. To reach this we passed through a large room fitted up with a refreshment room or canteen, with stove for cooking etc.

From this the reading room is entered.

This was well supplied with papers and periodicals of various kinds and might accommodate 50 men comfortably. In another part of the building the ^{Army} Church Temperance Society have a large room allotted for their meetings. This also contains tables and other accommodation so that the men may spend their evening there. There are three billiards rooms in the barrack, one for the men, another for corporals & a third for sergeants.

Regimental Library.

Subscription to the Library per month:

{ Officers 4^t; non-commissioned officers: Sergeants 6^t
Corporals 3^r, privates 2^r.

Billiard Rooms.

A Corporal of the A.S.C.

We went to the corporals. It contained one table at which a young corporal was practising.

He entered into a conversation. He thinks that the Army Service Corps is the hardest worked branch of the service - harder than artillery. Here the drivers may be out all day on convoy and after they come back have their horses and harness to attend to. They seldom get an afternoon. Some of the men are working in the Arsenal. Mr Harst also thinks these men have the hardest time.

Arrangements for Mess & Washing

In this regiment they pay 4½^d for groceries etc mess expenses & have special dinners prepared according to a plan which is printed. and is quite an elaborate bill of fare for the day, commencing with an early snack before breakfast & finishing with supper. The corporal thought the system a good one but they had not the conveniences in the cookhouse & so it was not served as it should be.

The Corps also pays more for washing than other regiments (1^d a day) because they have more things to wash.

Beyond this room was another opening directly into the canteen.

From the A.S.C. Barracks, went to the R.A. Barracks to see the libraries and theatre.

The theatre holds about 1400 people and is managed by a man who is now a pensioner from the regiment. Adjoining it is a bar, the and billiard room, upstairs there is a free reading room. The manager said that they get a full house. A new piece is played each week. Most of the visitors are soldiers, nearly four-fifths. Has seen the gallery full of soldiers, not a single woman or other civilian. The men can get a voucher from the paymaster and this serves as a pass until midnight.

No difference in charge is made to soldiers.

In the next block of buildings, the libraries are situated. The non-commissioned officers' has about 300 readers and there is a reading room adjoining where the men can sit and read. It is provided with directories of various kinds & military reference books. The gunners

The Theatre. R.A. Barracks

R.A. Libraries.

Drivers library adjoins that of the non-coms. It contains a larger number of books and the sergeant in charge says there are 1000 readers or about one in three of the men.

Subsequently had a talk with Mr Hurst about his work. He meets mainly amongst the recruits in the depot and at the hospital. As a rule the recruits are a rough lot and at the Ch. of Eng Institute they have the full benefit of them as it is the only place they can go before they obtain their clothes being on the barrack premises. At the Hospital most of the men are suffering from venereal diseases.

The Soldier's Sunday.

On Sunday the soldiers have to attend church once a day. There are two services at 10 am and 11.45; the earlier for the mounted men who have to go to stables after church & the other for the remainder of the men.

In the afternoon and evening the men are free - no drills.

THE ARMY TEMPERANCE
ASSOCIATION. 19/5/96

LETTER FROM LORD WOLSELEY.

In the absence of the Commander-in-Chief Lord Methuen took the chair yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Army Temperance Association. The meeting was held in the Lecture Theatre of the Royal United Service Institution, which was crowded with members and friends of the association, the former being, for the most part, privates and non-commissioned officers whose tanned faces indicated long foreign service, while the numerous medals which adorned their breasts bore testimony to many a brave deed in the field of battle. Among those present were Generals Lord Chelmsford, Sir R. Gipps, J.A. Ardagh, R.W. Taylor, G. Erskine, T. Gillian, R. Harrison, and H. Moncrieff, Major-Generals Sir Martin Dillon and Lynden Bell, Col. Lockwood, M.P., Mr. John Wilson, M.P., Mr. W.H. Myers, M.P., and Capt. Pirie, M.P., Lady S. Taylor and Lady Eliza Biddulph.

Mr. CLARE WHITE, the organising secretary, read the following letter from Lord Wolseley :— “As I shall be on duty at her Majesty’s Drawing Room next Monday, I regret very much that I shall not be able to attend the Army Temperance Association meeting on that day. I have read your draft report with much interest, and know from inquiries made at inspections, how satisfactory is the work done under the auspices of your invaluable association. Very few people outside of the Army subscribe to our military charities, or expend money upon our soldiers, and yet I believe them to be in every way the best behaved and most deserving of all classes. But so many rich people now take an interest in temperance work that if it became generally known that your—happily—undenominational association wanted funds, I am sure money would flow in to enable you to extend your good work. You have already done much for the Army, and I sincerely hope that God may bless your efforts in the future.”

The Duke of Connaught wrote regretting his inability to be present, due to his having to represent the Queen at the coronation of the Emperor of Russia, and expressing the hope that every success might attend the meeting. Lord Roberts also wrote a letter of sympathy with the objects of the association.

The Hon. CONRAD DILLON, the treasurer, stated that the work of the association, as it developed, showed that the regimental system on which its branches worked was the right one, throwing as it did the responsibility on the commanding officer of encouraging those who helped themselves. It secured consideration for the many who now joined the society never having tasted strong drink, and it provided a haven for those who desired to break away from bad habits and bad companions.

Brougham Castle, near Bamburgh, is the most recent addition to the list of historical properties to be let. The building was prominently associated with the stirring times of Charles I. and Cromwell, in which were bedrooms suites formerly occupied by James I. and Queen Anne, also the celebrated Countess of Cromwell. BUNNWAY HORSES AT THE DRAWING ROOM.—An accident occurred during the Drawing Room—new sixty-four horses were wounded and twenty-four others were killed. A new forty-eight horses were brought in to replace them. The Duke of Connaught, who is a member of the Royal Household, and Queen Anne, also the Earl of Derby, were present at the Drawing Room.

THE ARMY TEMPERANCE

LETTER FROM LORD WOLSELEY.

In the absence of the Commander-in-Chief Lord Methuen took the chair yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Army Temperance Association. The meeting was held in the Lecture Theatre of the Royal United Service Institution, which was crowded with members and friends of the association, the former being, for the most part, privates and non-commissioned officers whose tanned faces indicated long foreign service, while the numerous medals which adorned their breasts bore testimony to many a brave deed in the field of battle. Among those present were Generals Lord Chelmsford, Sir R. Gipps, J.A. Ardagh, R.W. Taylor, G. Erskine, T. Gillian, R. Harrison, and H. Mr. CLARE WHITE, the organising secretary, read the following letter from Lord Wolseley:—
“As I shall be on duty at her Majesty’s Drawing Room next Monday, I regret very much that I shall not be able to attend the Army Temperance Association meeting on that day. I have read your draft report with much interest, and know from inquiries made at inspections, how satisfactory is the work done under the auspices of your invaluable association. Very few people outside of the Army subscribe to our military charities, or expend money upon our soldiers, and yet I believe them to be in every way the best behaved and most deserving of all classes. But so many rich people now take an interest in temperance work that if it became generally known that your—happily—undenominational association wanted funds, I am sure money would flow in to enable you to extend your good work. You have already done much for the Army, and I sincerely hope that God may bless your efforts in the future.”

The Duke of Connaught wrote regretting his inability to be present, due to his having to represent the Queen at the coronation of the Emperor of Russia, and expressing the hope that every success might attend the meeting. Lord Roberts also wrote a letter of sympathy with the objects of the association.

The Hon. CONRAD DILLON, the treasurer, stated that the work of the association, as it developed, showed that the regimental system on which its branches worked was the right one, throwing as it did the responsibility on the commanding officer of encouraging those who helped themselves. It secured consideration for the many who now joined the society never having tasted strong drink, and it provided a haven for those who desired to break away from bad habits and bad companions.

The annual report showed that forty-six new branches had been formed during the year, making a total of 217. The membership was 11,754, as against 8,836 in 1895. The receipts for the year amounted to £1,307, and the payments £1,234. The Secretary of War had declined to increase the Government grant to the association from £500 to £1,000 “in view of the smallness of the contributions from private sources.” It was, therefore, hoped that many friends would this year make an effort to enlist new subscribers.

The report having been adopted,

The R. J. H. BATESON, Secretary of the Army Temperance Association in India, gave a short account of the progress made in that country, and testified to the value of the co-operation of the association in England. He said of the 78,000 British troops in India 24,000 were pledged total abstainers.

Captain PIRIE, M.P., called attention to the necessity of having barrack rooms better lit, and being supplied with chairs so as to keep men in. He also suggested that canteens should be closed till after dinner and that drinking water should be supplied at the mess tables.

Captain England, the Chairman, Colonel Ferguson, Sergeant Raffan, and the Chaplain-General also addressed the meeting, each speaker insisting upon the necessity of the Government providing temperance rooms as counter-attractions to the canteens.

A vote of thanks to Lord Methuen for presiding closed the proceedings.
