ADMINISTRATOR AND FABIAN

Lord Olivier, who died at Bognor Regis yesterday, was one of the foster-parents of the Labour Party; he filled offices of high distinction as a Civil servant, including the Governorship of Jamaica, and after retirement rose to be Secretary of State for India in the short-lived first Labour Government under Ramsay MacDonald.

in the short-lived first Labour Government under Ramsay MacDonald. He was a man of much natural ability and keenly responsive to the calls of unfortunate sections of the people, as for instance in his condemnation of the colour bar and racial dis-crimination. Such championship, however, often provoked vehement controversy, for he was intolerant of criticism, and there was un-conscious humour in his account in "Who's Who " of his recreations—" the normal forms of loafing and dilettantism." The Right Hon. Sir Sydney Haldane Olivier, P.C., K.C.M.G., C.B., first Baron Olivier, of Ramsden, County Oxford, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, was the second of the 10 children of the Rev. H. A. Olivier, rector of Poulshot, Wilts, and was born on April 16. 1859. After spending part of his childhood at Lausanne, and being educated at Kineton and Tombridge Schools, he went to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and after heading the open Civil Service competition list in 1882, entered the Colonial Office. This did not check early prominence in the Fabian Society, of which he was Secretary from 1886 to 1890. With Sidney Webb, Bernard Shaw, and Graham Wallas he shaped the policy and ultimately the traditions of the society. His contributions to the alliance were a wide culture, a literary taste of a high order, and an artistic sensibility. The velvet coat he wore in defiance of usage of the day suited this tall, handsome, distinguished-looking man, and gave him the appearance of a dignified Spanish hidalgo. His witty "Poems and Parodies," issued in 1881, showed his frequently exercised skill in occasional verse. In 1890-91 Olivier acted as Colonial Secre-tary of British Honduras. In 1895 he was given his frequently exercised skill in occasional his frequently exercised skill in occasional verse. In 1890-91 Olivier acted as Colonial Secre-tary of British Honduras. In 1895 he was given the special appointment of Auditor-General of the Leeward Islands. On his return to White-hall he served Lord' Selborne, the Under-Secretary, as private secretary. In 1897 he was appointed Secretary to the West Indies Royal Commission, and he was sent to Wash-ington in the following year to assist in reciprocity negotiations on behalf of the West Indian Colonies. From 1899 to 1904 he was Colonial Secretary of Jamaica and on three occasions acted as Governor. On returning to the Colonial Office he was made principal and Coloured Labour" (1906) he laid the foundation of thought on which other workers built.

synthesis of the considered views of a large number of organizations with first-hand experience of our outstanding social needs. He has outlined his proposals with enviable clarity and supported them with balanced and cogent reasoning. It is significant that none of the critics has attacked the thorough-going admini-strative reforms which SIR WILLIAM BEVERIDGE has proposed. The patchwork administrative structure of the British social services, with their varied, often anomalous, and in some instances wholly inadequate scales of benefit or assistance, admittedly needed a drastic simplification and overhaul in the interests of both equity and efficiency. SIR WILLIAM BEVERIDGE has shown how it might become a unified system of social insurance and assistance, working on rational and consistent principles under the general direction of a Ministry of Social Security. It is also significant that, although the finance of the scheme in general has not passed un-challenged, no substantial body of opinion, certainly no organization with any claim to renresent the manual workers has challenged, no substantial body of opinion, certainly no organization with any claim to represent the manual workers, has seriously objected to the high price—in terms of compulsory weekly contributions —which wage-earners will be called upon to pay for the greatly extended range of benefits provided under the scheme. That British workers place a high value on social security is shown by the compara-tively large sums which they are prepared to invest in various forms of voluntary social insurance, over and above their social insurance, over and above their compulsory contributions to State insur-ince funds. The notion of getting some-hing for nothing has no place in the

JANUARY II, 1943

United Nations: Tasks Ahead

NE YEAR AGO the United Nations was founded. At first the concept crossed our minds in a casual, fleeting way. One year later it is being driven into the consciousness of the American people a thousand times a day. The concept of the United Nations has established itself as the concept of the future. The beauty of it is that unlike the League of Nations, the United Nations can rise in unbroken growth through its birth and infancy in the war and its adolescence in the relief and reconstruction period to its manhood in the peace.

The United Nations celebrated its first birthday gloriously in Russia, splendidly in Africa and the Solomons, doggedly in China, hopefully in Europe, the Americas, and in the British Commonwealth. It celebrated it brilliantly in a series of speeches by United Nations leaders, outlining its future. For China, Dr. S. R. Chow proposed the creation of a regional structure of the United Nations for the Pacific with its council, its court and its armed force. For Britain, Sir Stafford Cripps endorsed the creation of representative armed forces for the peace. For America, the President and Admiral Leahy demanded the continuation of the United Nations after the war, and Henry Wallace clothed the concept in a world council, and world financial and commodity agencies, to establish the underlying conditions of peace.

The administrative staff of the combined boards of the United Nations celebrated its birthday in a hardworking day in which the staff proved, in the course of its normal routine, that a practical world organization was no longer a dream, but a fact.

In the last war the administrative machinery of the Allies was simply a projection of the administrative structure of the British government. Britain was the one center of the Allied war effort, purchasing her supplies from all corners of the earth, and directing their flow into a single, narrow front. This war created two centers, in London and Washington. This division forced the United Nations to establish the new administrative principle of decentralization of authority according to ability. Under this principle Britain acts as the representative for the United Nations in executing tasks such as handling certain supplies and gathering intelligence in certain areas, for which she is best equipped. America, the Commonwealth countries and occasionally Russia, China, Mexico and Brazil, operate in the same way, within the framework of the combined boards. This principle of the delegation of responsibility is capable of indefinite extension. In a modified form-because centralization is of less importance, and representation of greater importance in peacetime-it can serve after the war. It has solved a main administrative barrier to world government the issue of where authority and executive responsibility lie.

Of course this structure is not yet strong enough to withstand the shock of peace. It remained for Wendell Willkie to close the birthday celebration by speaking in the voice of the United Nations itself:

... People obtain in a peace only what they win while they fight.... We will have no United Nations after the war unless we make the United Nations now a fact.... If the world of which we dream is to be achieved, then today, not tomorrow, the United Nations must become a common council... What we need is not the hope of a grand council after the war... but a council today ... an actual, working council...

This is the first task of the United Nations for 1943. A year ago, the objective of the supreme executive of the United Nations—the Roosevelt-Churchill conference—was to bring about an Anglo-American offensive in 1942. The logical methods of the executive was through the creation of the Anglo-American combined boards. Historically, this was the right method. While the Nazis held the initiative, the Russians could not participate in the common councils aimed also at Japan. China did not have in Washington men who could meet on terms of equal authority with British and American officials. Had the structure of the combined boards included Russia and China in 1942 it would have lacked the concentration of executive force which it now possesses, and which now can be extended.

This year our objectives are to create a second front in Europe as part of a two-front offensive against the Nazis, and to retake Burma as part of a campaign against Japan based on China. The method required for these objectives must be the extension of the United Nations' machinery to China and the Soviet Union.

In a month's time a representative relief and reconstruction council will be created. But as Dr. Chow arrives in Washington from Wuhan to coöperate in postwar planning, the dissatisfied General Hsiung and his military mission are leaving Washington for Chungking. Broad participation in post-war planning is no substitute for broad participation in the prosecution of the war.

The first task of the United Nations is to create the representative Supreme Council, with its regional and local commands, that T. V. Soong, Walter Nash and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek have been demanding. Increasingly as this is accomplished, our slogan for 1943 should be "All power to the combined boards!" Beneath the combined-board structure, we should bring the patterns of our national administrations into closer relations with each other. In 1942 we created the United Nations to aid in our separate wars. In 1943 we must make this a United Nations war.

The second task of the United Nations, in 1943, is to determine what kind of a world we are fighting for. When the United Nations was a wartime marriage of convenience of America and the British Commonwealth its purpose was unimportant. But if the United Nations is to become permanent, if the partnership is to include an imperialist power and a violently antiimperialist nation, a nation which is the stronghold of capitalism and one founded on the damnation of capitalism, then its purposes begin to matter very much.

The demolition of the tensions that arise between a socialist and a capitalist country are largely America's task. The future program which Henry Wallace has proposed, of raising standards of living everywhere, is one to which the Soviet government will subscribe wholeheartedly. But Wallace does not yet speak for America. There is still talk in our army circles, as there is in Chungking, of the coming war against Russia. There is even a growing uneasiness in certain centers in America about the Soviet successes. The hard core of this anti-Soviet feeling, like the anti-British feeling, is the Catholic Church. Its fear revolves around the threat of revolution, mainly in Europe, but also in America. We can do a great deal to dispel this fear in 1943. Fear of revolution in America is present only in those who doubt the ability of American democracy to solve its economic problems.

Fear of revolution in Europe will also be reduced when Russia takes her place on a relief and reconstruction council, making it plain that she wants to work with us in restoring European democracy. The Communist Party also has a contribution to make. Rightly or wrongly, the American people still believe that it is actively working to bring about the dictatorship of the proletariat. It should make it clear in action that it intends to use force only in defense of democracy against a fascist rebellion; with that definitive every liberal will agree.

The demolition of the tensions that arise between imperialist and anti-imperialist nations is Britain's task. The British people, with our aid, must make it absolutely clear in 1943 that it is no part of the purpose of the United Nations to maintain the exploitation of the British colonial empire, and the other empires that stand or fall with it. Already Russia and China have lost a great deal of their support in India and elsewhere by refusing to lead the struggles of the colonial peoples against British rule.

Imperialist nations are inclined to think of world organization in terms of the techniques of rule and enforcement which it adopts. Anti-imperialist nations, when they think of world organization, think of the purposes for which enforcement is required. Wallace showed an understanding of this when he offered, as the colonial program of the United Nations, the industrialization of the undeveloped areas. But Japan industrialized Manchuria, and Germany promised to industrialize the Balkans. The question is, industrialization for whom, and under what kind of a society? British officials have made it clear that they see international organization as a means of restoring empire. But if this is to be the purpose of the United Nations, then certainly it will be no world organization. India, Russia, China, and perhaps America, will refuse to participate in such a system. In 1943, the days of colonial exploitation should be numbered.

Britain must pay a heavy price for the United Nations. So must we. The third task of the United Nations in 1943 is to make clear that the future lies with it. At the same time, it must make sure that the future will be democratic, not simply by a generous reconstruction program but by making it possible for democracy in Britain to survive the tremendously hard time that the abolition of empire exploitation involves. This means heavy economic commitments by America and other creditor nations to a financial agency of the United Nations, which should be created in 1943. As an act of faith we need, also, military commitments, a series of twenty-year pacts of mutual assistance, signed among America, Russia, China and Britain. In general, coöperation between governments has advanced far ahead of coöperation between legislatures in the United Nations. In 1943 our legislatures must move closer together, and give political commitments about the future of world organization.

The fourth task of the United Nations in 1943 is our task. We must come to see the United Nations as the organization, not of twenty-nine governments, but of a thousand million people. We need our own United Nations International; we are establishing it in the Free World Association. In 1943 we must make this a great world movement whose American section will be so strong that it will force the issue of our role in world government out of American politics by 1944.

More than ever, in 1943, this must be a people's war. Nineteen hundred and forty-three must be the year of continental invasion. If the peoples of the continents of Europe and Asia see us as liberators they will rise up as we come, and annihilate the fascists. If they are indifferent to us, we shall grind forward at a terrible cost.

If we accomplish these four tasks in 1943 we can make this struggle a United Nations war for a United Nations world. For the peoples of the world, this would be a new Emancipation Proclamation. Like Lincoln's, it would be a great war measure, bringing the war to a swifter, more decisive conclusion, saving hundreds of thousands of lives. We must bring this home to every family with a stake in this war. It is deeply and urgently true.

Washington
