Dear Sir.

Referring to the various heads you requested information on which we noted at the time of your visit under the following numbers:-
We enclose sheets filled in as you requested showing the (1) number of men employed here;
(2) The various departments (3) The wages;
(4) The hours, & (5) whether the work is time or piece:
work. With regard to (6) Overtime (6) there is no extra allowance, the weekly wage covering everything, except in the case of millwrights who are paid by the day.
Their hours overtime are charged as 1/2 hours
each after 5.00 P.M.

There is no special seasons (7) and although we have at your request tabulated a week in winter & a week in summer, it will be seen that the two are practically the same. Training required (8) is given here; promotion being, as a rule, regular throughout the departments.

Willwrights & Coopers, however, come to us as skilled workmen.

Regularity of work (9) is practically shown by the sheets.

Age limits (10) are not definitely laid down, but it will be correct to say that men do not come to us under 21. We fix no limits for retirement, which depends on a man's health and capability for work.

Clubs established amongst the men (11), are a seven years benefit club shares 1/- a week, and a Burial Club with subscriptions of 1/- a week. The Company allows interest on the capital of these clubs.

Meal times (12) are an hour for breakfast, an hour for dinner with 1/2 hour at 11 o'clock for luncheon. The majority of the men go to their homes for breakfast & dinner. For the rest convenience for cooking is arranged in the "lobbies" in each department.

Dress (3) is distinctive in as much as men in the Brewhouse, other than stokers, and in the stores wear paper caps of a particular shape for each department, & white linen jackets.
Drink (4) All have a regular daily allowance of beer & in some departments there is practically no check on the amount a man can obtain.
Notwithstanding this, excess is exceedingly rare. & trouble in this score is scarcely known in any of the departments. These allowances are of course a practical addition to wages.

The Company provides a reading room & library with smoking & billiard room which the men can join at a subscription of 1^s a week.

They have built blocks of dwellings accomodating 41 families, the tenements being 2 & 3 rooms, with a separate closet & scullery accomodation for each set. And these are only let to their own servants, & at low rents.

The facility with which false deductions are drawn.

We wish to specially request that any deductions you may draw from these figures & facts we have given you may be submitted to us before you accept them for publication in any form. It became clear during our conversation here how easily false deductions can be drawn. (!!!!)

We of course understand from your first application that none of these figures or statements themselves are to be published without our consent and that the enquiry is strictly confidential.

We are Dear Sir

Yours faithfully

They employ 92 or 93 men + 10 or 20 day men are taken on as busy times requires them. In addition they have 20 men employed in delivering in their private trade. Work begins at 5 a.m. in the morning up to 5.30 at night. On Saturday work ends between 2 + 5. These are the regular hours of the men engaged in the brewing operations. Draymen have no regular hours, they come in when they have done their work which may be early or late. The draymen are paid a ~~regular~~ ^{fixed} wage with an allowance on the empties they bring back. 12/- a week is the fixed wage for a first class man, + the earnings of the men from bottom to top vary from 24/- to 50/-

Summer is their busy season. + Winter their slack.

No special training is required for the work.

They give preference to men from the country, as country men are steadier than Londoners, they don't know so much.

When a man comes he is generally put to cleaning out casks & rolling them about the yard.

If he is a smart man, he may be shifted to the brewhouse, & the good men will be shifted to other departments, but as matter of fact men rarely go to one department & remain in it.

The rise in wages depends on the number of years service and vacancies caused by men being promoted.

The last regular men gets about 2/- a week. Two men & an engineer work night shifts, so that there are always, three men on during the day in one week & off next week.

He will let me know whether the directors will give detail wages return, by October 10th.

Registrar of London Gen. Hospital

As to the accidents to Brewers Servants.

Method of finding it out.

Points to be remembered.

October 2.

Saw Registrar at London General Hospital Mile End Road - Ec. with reference to seriousness of accidents to men employed by Brewers. who said that:-

Alcoholic patients are undoubtedly worse subjects than abstainers when it comes to the question of performing an operation. But whether Brewers servants are more liable than others to bad sores he could not say. I might go through their catalogues of cases treated - pick out the number of those who were Brewers servants & compare them with the same accidents happening to persons who were not Brewers servants. It would take about 5 or 6 wks to do. He was so busy or wd have been very glad to get out some of it himself for us.

Here are two things to be remembered with ref.
ference

Healthy men generally chosen.

get best treatment when ill.

Hence it follows.

19.
to any men employed by Brewers.

1. That Brewers as a rule choose country men as their servants who are naturally healthier subjects than townsmen.

2. That Brewers are very liberal subscribers to Hospitals. If it were not for the donations made by them it wd be quite impossible to maintain the London General Hospital for instance.

These subscriptions give right to free treatment. If a Brewer man hurts himself in the smallest way he is sent at once to the hospital. There is no question about it the man is not left to treat himself or to let his sore get poisoned in any way.

Hence it follows that in addition to being healthy men to start with, brewers men have the best possible treatment when they are in any way ailing.

So that they probably possibly might be more liable to bad sores rising from small scratches but they wd probably suffer less & get well sooner because of the adequate & immediate treatment they wd receive.

Draymen are paid a fixed weekly wage of 14/- as driving money & in addition get 2/- for each barrel they bring back.

Truncers have 9/- per wk as driving money. Their earnings vary with the amount of trade that is done.

Very uncertain hours are worked by the men. They may not in a busy summer week be back till 2 or 3 in the morning.

They loiter about on the way - are treated by the houses which they visit. Their late hours are partly their own fault.

Stablemen wait till their teams are in. They are paid nothing extra for long hours; on the other hand they have a slack time after their horses are out in which there is nothing for them to do except laze about.

The other men in the brewery are given an overtime rate after 6 P.M.

In the morning the loads are sent off to their destinations by the loading-out clerk. It is on him that the length or shortness of the journey depends. He is supposed to arrange it equably.

The first turn men do work that is near home. i.e. they supply the Strand & City. No drags may deliver between 9 AM & 6 PM because of the extra crowding of the street that would result.

This causes both eagerness & lateness amongst these men.

Mr. Stansfeld & Co. Swan Brewery. Fulham.

Interview with Mr. Stansfeld.

Employ in all about 300 men.

They are family brewers though they do a little in the public line as well.

They pay 2s/- to the lowest man in their employ. This he said was the ordinary rate for unskilled men such as are necessary in a Brewery. Any one can handle a cask who has strength enough.

The men work in gangs under foremen.

They copy their neighbours & become practised.

Their work is regular all the year round.

They supply customers to their houses in the small barrels containing 4½ gallons known as 'pins' in the trade.

Their customers are chiefly small tradesmen, clerks & working men.

The draymen work long hours occasionally but it is not really necessary they should. He has divided London into distinct beats: each each worked by certain men. Beyond a given distance there is a depot which is constantly supplied from the Brewery. Orders from a distance come to the Brewery at Fulham & are then forwarded to the different depots whence they are executed & the customers supplied.

The great trouble of delivery to private customers are the loose women. The Draymen in the Chelsea, Pimlico & Willesden districts especially are exposed to the greatest temptations.

These women will do anything for a drink. The Draymen deliver in their houses & will tap other people's casks for them.

The Draymen besides delivery, is also a canvasser for new orders & is paid by the number of new orders introduced.

He employs about 100 canvassers besides men otherwise unknown to him but who bring him orders & are paid for them. After they are gentlemen's servants. For the first 4 orders a commission is paid, after that the customer belongs to the firm.

The little ways of canvases.

Brewer's yeast & Baker's yeast.

The true difference between the two.

Baker's yeast made by one London Brewer.

Some of these canvases cheat. They serve 2 or 3 Breweries (family) in this way, introduce a customer for 4 times to one & then take him off for a time to another & so on. Most of the men employed in this way have other means of livelihood. What they earn is an extra.

Mr. S had written an article on the manufacture of good beer which he gave me. In it he had stated that Brewer's yeast was exported to Germany & then come back here as Baker's yeast. This had been denied by some foreign correspondent: who printed out that English brewer's yeast was used chiefly by distillers at home & abroad.

German yeast is the result of German brewing when the fermentation is very slow & retarded as much as possible by the use of ice.

German yeast sinks to the bottom whereas English yeast rises to the top & is skimmed off. This is the difference between one & the other.

Mr. Lovibond here tried & he believed with some success to make Baker's yeast.

Extinction of family brewers by light bottled ales.

Machine made barrels used.

Seasons.

Variation in numbers & wages accord in busy & slack week

Mr. Hansford feared that the small family Brewers who disposed of their goods in small pints were doomed to extinction in the future. The large brewers are taking to bottling. They supply grocers. The grocer who is the man on the spot will cut out the canvasser. Bottles are rather more convenient though slightly more expensive & when ordering tea & coffee the customer will be saved trouble by being able to order beer at the same time. In view of this he is building a house & settling up plant for a bottle store.

They buy their barrels: which are now machine made. Machine made are smoother & more polished inside than hand made & slightly cheaper. They have roasted hand made casks.

There are about 5 yeast dealers in London employing not more than 60 men altogether.

The full net receipt of beer duty in the year amounted to the large sum of 10,494,329*l.*, representing an increase of 560,008*l.* compared with the preceding year.

Under the seventh section of Act 53 Vict. c. 8., 3*d.* duty on each barrel of beer brewed was surrendered to the Local Taxation Account. This amounted to 392,279*l.*, leaving for Imperial purposes 10,102,050*l.*

The duty on beer brewed was raised as from the 17th April 1894 by 6*d.* a barrel to 6*s.* 6*d.* a barrel (irrespective of the 3*d.* per barrel assigned to local taxation). This increased rate of duty, like that under spirits, was imposed until the 1st July 1895.

† This table includes beer made in the month of March, the duty upon which is not payable to revenue within the financial year.

The quantity of beer brought to charge in the past year in the United Kingdom shows a decrease of 1.56 per cent. compared with the charge of the previous year. The percentages of difference for the separate parts of the United Kingdom are: England, decrease 1.98; Scotland, increase .82; and Ireland, increase 1.19.

The increased yield of the duty (Imperial) over that of the prior year, viz., 565,102l., proved to be almost identical with the Budget Estimate, although the quantity actually retained for consumption was less than that in the prior year by 407,500 barrels. The greater part of this falling off, however, occurred in the month of February 1895, when the weather was unusually severe, and much restricted the manufacture.

Employ 460 men.

All regular winter & Summer.

Work until the work is done sometimes long & some times short.

The tendency has been in the last few years for the work of those employed & more especially of the clerical staff to increase out of all proportion to the increase in the amount of business done & profits made!

Draymen are paid regular weekly wages. They used to give them so much on all empties brought back but now they find regular wage works satisfactorily. They are divided into 3 classes. Ironmen rise to be Draymen.

The general Brewery work is done in (camps) under under foremen. Men as a rule begin as cellar

-men & are then moved to other jobs as found suitable. There is some trouble about choosing foremen. It is difficult to get the right men always. Think that they are not quite sufficiently careful in the Brewery.

They prefer men from the Country. but not nearly all their men are countrymen. Still a Countryman w^d have the preference if it was a question between two new hands.
Londoners are less steady & more apt to shirk than countrymen.

The whole Brewery is arranged on the system that each man should have something to look forward to. For this reason there are classes amongst the Draymen.

They use both hand & machine made casks.

the time that hand made throughout do.
They have tried various ways of making their men more comfortable.

They have a kitchen at which the men can buy good food well-cooked at cost price. They started this as a help to the cellar men & lowest classes employed (23/- to 25/- men). But it has been a failure as far as they are concerned. The better men - more highly paid & more educated - are those who use the kitchen - the cellar men fight shy of it. They seem to be wanting in confidence for some reason.

In the same way they thought they might be able to supply clothes for the men at a cheaper rate. But this was never tried as the men were so much against it. The only thing they do do is supply each man with his coal at the same rate as the Brewery is supplied. The contractor who supplies them supplies also each man at his home & each man in this way will score about 1/9 per ton.

Barrels brewed at standard gravity in reference to bulk of beer.

Brewers' Comt.

Its affect on the trade

He thought that the number of barrels ^{brewed} at standard rate w^d represent too great a bulk of beer drunk because stock ales & even the ordinary running ale was rather above standard gravity.

Still some brewers brew under standard gravity for running ales & publicans will adulterate sometimes.

Brewers Comt is an association of the 9 (at present) to 10 or 12 largest brewers in Ldn. They manage the trade interests, schools, charities etc.

They settle price ^{helps} ~~at~~ which their members shall not sell their beer. The outside brewer is not affected by their decision nominally.

Among these chosen 9 it is agreed that if any one applies to change his brewer from one to the other, they must inform one another of the same & not outbid one another.

A is not satisfied with ^{terms obtained from} beer brewed by B wishes to change to C. A will be a ^{very} very great exception if he has not been lent money to start in business by B.

B & C are both members of Brewers Ct. A thinks that C will lend him money on easier terms than B. C on being from A writes to B to ask him how much he has lent & is bound in honour not to lend more. A will gain nothing unless he really is dissatisfied with the beer supplied by B & in that case he may transfer his self on the same terms as he had had with B to C.

Rents of pubs vary nominally between £70 to £50 a year. The actual value of them is obtained from the incomes in the form of a premium £30,000 or so. To pay this premium you must always borrow: few men are rich enough to do it without.

London houses are only bound by custom (very strong) to deal with those who have lent them money. They are generally free for tobacco etc. Brewers court are the only old city Guild which is really effective. They admit none who
