TOTAL EFFORT NOW

TAX

OF PEACE AIMS

SIR S. CRIPPS'S APPEALS

Sir Stafford Cripps, speaking at Bristol yesterday, made two pleas—for greater efforts in this country towards winning the war and a clear lead to the world on peace aims. He said that if both Great Britain and the United States gave Russia all the support of which they were capable, then he believed there was every chance of Germany being beaten by this time next year.

Of conditions in this country Sir Stafford Cripps said:—"There seems to be a lack of urgency in the atmosphere. It is almost as if we were spectators rather than participants. I might compare it to the difference between a gang of enthusiastic spectators of

He did not believe that the country as a whole had any reservations whatever as to heir desire for full friendship and cooperation with the U.S.S.R., but there were still hose who looked at the question from the boint of view of the old fear complex. Such becople must not be allowed to influence our elations with Russia in a negative direction. Either we have a partnership with Russia in the reconstruction of Europe or we plunge the world again into chaos," he added.

What impressed him most in Russia was the

What impressed him most in Russia was the total self-sacrifice of the ordinary common people. Stalin had selected the moment to strike back at the Germans, holding his forces until he judged the moment right, in spite of the growing urgency of the threat to Moscow. The judgment of that point of time and of place would, in his view, go down to history as the decisive decision which led to the ultimate defeat of Hitler.

MEANING OF TOTAL EFFORT

The Russians had a much better idea than we had of the meaning of total effort. We were still too much cluttered up with old conceptions, party politics, peace-time organizations, the idea that we must run this war according to some set of rules which would preserve a rigid balance between the different and competing interests of the country, and we were far too gentlemanly in our treatment of offenders against the totality of war of offenders against the totality of war.

This war (he went on) is not a game to be played according to certain rules. It is a life-and-death struggle for survival, and in that struggle there are and must be no partial nterests. It is impossible to have regard to the private interests of individuals and groups and classes and at the same time to make our effort all inclusive. We have not yet attained that total effort just because so many people are still keeping in mind what their position is likely to be after the war.

We have got to have the same 100 per cent. Ic concentration on winning the war as they have in the Soviet Union if we are to join in the victory. I think the Russian Army will defeat Hitler, but only if we give them every ounce of help in our power.

Both Great Britain and the United States must help Russia to prepare against a spring offensive by the German Army. That spring offensive, if it comes off, will be the most critical stage of the whole war, and we must see to it that there is no risk of a Russian defeat because we have failed them in these hours of trial. We must place our resources where they are most needed in the views of the allies as a whole. If we do that, if, here, we work with 100 per cent. effort, if we give to Russia all the support we are capable of, then in my view there is every chance of Germany being defeated by this time next year.

POST-WAR RECONSTRUCTION

Referring to the need for a clear enunciation of our peace aims, which would greatly add to the intensity of our war effort, not only in this country but in these tragically occupied countries of Europe as well. Sir Stafford Cripps said: "It is vital that we should make our position as a country absolutely clear. In order to do that we must have some idea in our minds of what we are aiming at. We have agreed not to commit ourselves to post-war international reconstruction without prior consultation with the United States of America. We want our American friends to realize that, if they are going to partake with us as to the reconstruction of Europe, it is vital that these decisions should not be too long delayed. Delay will add to the suspicions between this country and the Soviet Union—suspicions which have not, because of their historical foundation, completely disappeared."

It seemed to him to be high time that some leading. Government in the world and none

It seemed to him to be high time that some leading Government in the world, and none better than the British, should give an indication in terms far more definite and precise than those of the Atlantic Charter of what was going to happen if the allies were victorious, as victorious they would be. The more attractive that picture was in practical terms to the people of the world, the quicker would come the victory.

"I feel that my job here now is first to do my utmost to get every aid and help for Russia in this crivical stage, and secondly to play what part I can in winning the victory which is essential and then building the world that we have

It we are to take greater risks and to give less attention to the stability of our financial position, we need a definite assurance that the provision of suitable work for both ourselves and for our employees is going to be the definite concern of the State.

Sir William Beveridge's vague references to the matter of post-war security left me with the impression that the Government's idea of providing the citizen with security was to introduce measures for the extension of the present unemployment insurance. If this is so, we cannot be too early or too insistent in convincing the Government that a scheme of this nature will not meet the case, nor will it help to relieve the present serious drag on the production of war supplies.

No insurance scheme can offer the individual more than a bare subsistence income considered in relation to his earning capacity. Further, all self-respecting men want to be assured of a livelihood through employment. To live at the expense of the country without fully contributing to the services of the country according to our several capacities is not a "new order" for which we are hoping, nor does it satisfy our ideas of implementing the "free-dom from fear" clause of the Atlantic Charter.

What the country is looking for and expecting is the entire elimination of unemployment and not merely the elimination of the worst features of a starvation existence for men and women willing and able to work. This does not seem to me overmuch to ask of civilised society. It is certainly the minimum necessary for giving the citizen freedom from fear and ensuring for the State the full and happy cooperation of its members in the efforts of both war and peace.

The problem of the natives and the Indian immigrants is dealt with but is not regarded as of major importance. It is assumed throughtout that the only vital controversy is whether the Afrikaner claim of an independent Republic on the one hand the "South Africans" including all the white races on the other is also be the predominat factor in the S. African Dominion, erman Nazism Mr. Pirot who is said to be in favous of illinand became a friend into AS. Africa and who had been over in Berlinand became a friend of Hitler's. The Dutch Reformed Church was intensely Africandist and regarded the native much as the Jews in the Old Testament regard ed other races who did not accept their God. In Chapter V. on the Divine Right of White Skin there is a quotation from Gertrude Millin in her book on the South Africans p. 190. "It has not yet happened in the history of South Africa that a really Coloured man, a man so dark that he could not, even by a general conspiracy of evasion, pass as White it has not yet happened that such a one had distinguished himself in any branch of achievement whatsoever. No Cape Coloured man has risen to high rank in commerce, art, seience, the professions or politics. Hardly any Coloured man, indeed, has even gone so far as the son of some aboriginal chief, rich in land and cattle, who, now and then struggles through an English or Scottish university to a profession, and then comes back to South Africa to practice that profession.

British prefer to hide in a mass of liveral professions. It remains a fact that the relatively high standard of life is enjoyed by the White man at the expense of the low standard of life of the Coloured man. The Afrikaner Nationalist is determined that it shall be so. "It makes a world of difference," once said Dr. Malan, 'whether a European has to compete with uneducated competition or whether he has to compete with those who are on a similar plane of education and who are as educated as himself."

In the Chapter on Africander Autarchy "Language was General Mertzog's first political weapon; his first platform, Nationalism, came second; sovereign independence third; and all of them over a period of thirty years. The progress of Afrikans culture is linked then, with the unity of the Afrikaner people and, therefore, with their political advance. How far that culture has progressed into a broad and rich field of inspiration is a matter of some debate. Reently I was surprised to hear that one of the few Afrikaner actors refused to consider Afrikans plays because of their dramatic poverty. I was even more surprised that a group of Afrikaner players were touring with "Koop my blomme," 'Buy my flowers", the Afrikans version of Pygmalion." Thus surely is deserving of one of Mr. Shaw's inimitable post cards!"

p. 303 "What General Smuts thinks of the Ossewa Brandwag is contained in a speech delivered in November 1940:

'Though it insists that it is nothing but a cultural organisation, it is clear that it is an organisation of precisely the same character as the organization which brought Hitler into power in Germany. Its methods come straight from ermany and its purpose is nothing less than to introduce into this country the system that has flourished in Germany....!

p. 305. "It is very difficult indeed to find a way through the maze of contradictions at the end of 1950 and the beginning of 1941. Mr. Pirow, still a Mertzogite in the sense that he owned some personal allegiance to his old leader, had one foot in the Herenigde Party. Dr. Malan welcoming 'the people's front' the Oddewa Brandwag, now led the party and to some extent accepted the extreme claims of the younger members like Mr. Swart; Mr. Pirow having lost, or careless of, the political leadership the Transvaal, threw a wider net in his New Order, and toured the country west of the Drakensberg (British Natal is on the east) with a formula and a philosophy designed to overthrow the Liberal Capitalist—Bemocratic order and put, in its stead, the discipline ecomomy of Christian National Socialismm or one that can only be described as such. "

P. 345 Chapter on Son eminence grise.

"At a mement when , as he himself said, he might have looked forward to a release from the burden of the Government and office, General Smuts was called once again to direct South Africa's destiny. It is given to few men to spread their lives over parliament and cabinets and fields of war, the chancellaries of diplomacy, and the study of philosophers. In a universe of political comets General Smuts has the permanency of a planet. Without him South Africa would be, and for that matter will be when he passes from it, a strange and empty land. Them, as if in strange metamorphosis of the Boer of old, he will return to the great forgiveness of nature in the philosophy of grass and grasses the political curtain will be rent in twain."

The golden wedding of Lord and Lady Passfield, which has just been celebrated, with the good wishes of the nation as a whole, has rather a special interest for Wigan people, from the fact that Lady Passfield, who prefers to be known as Mrs. Sidney Webb, is a granddaughter of a former member of Parliament for Wigan. Before her marriage in 1892 Lady Passfield was Miss Beatrice Potter, and her career as social and industrial investigator and writer was almost certainly greatly influenced by the strong character of her paternal grandfather, Mr. Richard Potter, known in his day and generation as "Radical Dick," who was three times elected Liberal M.P. for Wigan, in 1832, 1835 and 1837. Those were the years when politics clashed sharply and out of the struggle was born national reform that broadened into the nation-wide democracy which we all hold so dearly to-day.

A Democratic Joint Authorship.

No politician did more than the Wigan M.P. of a century ago to bring about this reform, and it can be likewise said that, following in the family tradition, no couple in this country have done so much as Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb to educate the people in basic democratic principles. Individually and jointly they have written books that have had a lasting effect on the history of their own time, and also the time which is to come. Their joint authorship, in fact, has meant much to democratic government, the books they have together sponsored including such important works as "The History of Trade Unionism," "Problems of Modern Industry," "Industrial Democracy," "History of Liquor Licensing," "English Local Government," "English Prisons under Local Government," "English Poor Law Policy," "The Prevention of Destitution," and "Soviet Communism: New Civilisation ?" Mrs. Webb, by the way, is the aunt of Sir Stafford Cripps, K.C., M.P., Britain's ex-Ambassador to Russia, whose mother was also a granddaughter of Wigan's former radical M.P.

Little Church, Alverstoke, Gosport, Hampshire, was the setting on Saturday week of the wedding of Miss Josephine Masterman, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Masterman, of Parham-road, Gosport, and Mr. John H. Cooper, eldest son of Mrs. S. Cooper, of The Nuniery, Orrell, Wigan, and the late Mr. T. Cooper.

Mr. T Cooper.

The bride is the eidest granddaughter of the late Mr H. S. Masterman, a former Mayor of Gosport and the brid groom, who is a sergeant on the Personal Section Staff for the Army, was formerly a baster at Gosport County School, a forcer student at Wigan Grammar School in School of Art of the Wigan Mining and Technical College, and Liverpool University. Mr Cooper has been in the army since the day of the outbreak of war. He is a newbow of Mr. Robt. Alstead, J.P., a former Mage, of Wigan.

HAT Bernard Shaw, when a boy, was like any other boy, is indicated by two stories he told me.

One day he and another youth saw a pram with a baby in it but no nurse in sight. They rushed it as fast as they could to the end of the street, where they changed direction so quickly that the baby was shot into the middle of the roadway, which terrified them so much that they vanished from the scene and never heard what became of the infant.

On another occasion he helped a friend to

On another occasion he helped a friend to set a hill of gorse on fire for the fun of seeing what would happen. A blazing hill-side happened and they bolted.

But this time the arrest of an innocent boy forced young Shaw's hand, and he confessed his crime to the owner of the property, who enjoyed the lad's eloquence and overlooked the villainy.

Music, No Affection

HE difference between Shaw as a man and any other man is that he has spent his life upsetting people by suddenly changing their direction, and has never ceased to make the specific fly sparks fly

Born at Dublin on July 26, 1856, he was brought up in a household where there was plenty of music but no affection. His father was a fanatical teetotaller in principle, a furtive drunkard in practice, and a man whose sense of humour was so highly developed that he laughed himself breathless on hearing that his business was ruined.

Shaw's mother was not a humorist and found neither the drink nor the ruin amusing: she was reserved by nature, a fine singer, and passionately fond of music.

Airing in the Slums

HAW developed an early horror of poverty and squalor. His nurse, instead of taking him for an airing in the respectable squares, took him into the slums and pubs, the air of which helped to blow him into the Socialist Movement

He was sent to church and hated it, sent to school and loathed it, learning nothing from either institution except a dislike of learning anything.

But he was reading Dickens and Shakespeare for pleasure at an age when most boys were engaged with pirates and highwaymen; and he could whistle innumerable airs from the classical operas when his youthful contemporaries were content with pantomime tunes.

26 July 2042

At the age of 14, to his disgust, an uncle procured him a clerkship in a firm of land agents at a salary of 4s. a week. He made life bearable at the office by teaching operatic selections to his fellow-clerks when their seniors were absent.

In time he became cashier of the firm, detesting the job but doing it so well that when he could no longer stand it his employers tried to appease him with an increase of salary.

His mother had gone to London some time before this, and he decided to join her, arriving in the Spring of '76. He lived with her for the next 22 years, and at her expense for the first nine of them.

Five Novels Failed

E had no intention of looking for work, though once he was driven into employment by a cousin, who got him into a job with the Edison Telephone Company, which he got out of as soon as possible as possible.

His first years in London were spent in writing five novels, all of which were refused by every leading publisher.

Thus he learned how to write, but he earned no money, and he walked the streets in a condition of disagreeable seediness; in boots that should have been in the dustbin, in a pair of trousers, with holes in the seat, hidden by a tailed coat which changed from black to green as the cuffs got shorter with successive trimmings by the scissors, and in a tall hat so limp with age that the brim doubled up when he lifted it.

During that period he became a vegetarian, haunted the British Museum reading-room, and conquered his shyness and timidity by joining a debating club and speaking whenever he got the chance.

After hearing Henry George on the subject of Land Nationalisation, and reading Karl Marx's "Capital" in a French translation, he took to economics like a duck to water, joined the newly-formed Fabian Society, influenced a fellow-debater named Sidney Webb to join it, too, and thereafter preached Socialism at street corners, in market squares, town halls, parks and wherever and whenever he could.

Angered Covent Garden

E was able to do this because, in 1885, he began to earn a living with his pen, criticising books and pictures for several papers. Being of an unambitious and retiring disposition, he was pushed into all his early jobs by William Archer, who ran across him at the British Museum.

was pushed into all his early jobs by William Archer, who ran across him at the British Museum.

His reputation was made as a critic of music, first for The Star and then for The World, and it was made by the simple method of telling the exact truth as he saw it with the utmost levity, which made people read him even when they could not endure what he said. He attacked all the venerable institutions and all the venerated big-wigs, as a result of which the management of Covent Garden Opera House struck him off the free list and the musical professors told everyone that he was concealing an ignorance of his subject with a display of clowning.

Having made the musical world sit up for seven years, he became dramatic critic of The Saturday Review and proceeded to make the theatrical world sit up for three more, attacking Shakespeare in a manner that people thought blasphemous and dealing with Henry Irving's performances in a way that made Irving write to him, "For God's sake let alone."

The relief of the professionals and to the sorrow of nearly everyone else, Shaw's health broke down in '98, when he abandoned criticism, married, and thenceforth confined himself to public work and play writing.

work and play writing.

Already he had written several plays, one of which shocked the censor into refusing a licence, another drove an audience mad with rage, a third convulsed several audiences with laughter, and a fourth so bemused the actors, that it had to be withdrawn.

He learnt from these experiences that he had to create both actors and audiences for his class of drama, and in the first decade of the present century he did so at the Court Theatre.

His plays quickly became the so at the Court Theatre.

His plays quickly became the talk of the town, Shaw himself became the god of the young intellectuals; and when Edward VII. laughed so much at "John Bull's Other Island" that he broke the seat on which he sat the West End managers were converted to the view that a Shaw play was a commercial proposition, though the critics accustomed to murder, or, at least, adults with their evening's emertainment, would never allow that it was even ing's emertainment, would never allow that it was even "a play." Meanwhile, G.B.S., instead of taking things easily and enjoying his celebrity, was spending his afternoons as a vestryman at the St. Pancras Town Hall, his mind occupied by such matters as shop slavery, drainage, dust, lighting, disease, housing conditions and public lavatories.

In addition, he was running ing, disease, housing conditions and public lavatories.

In addition, he was running the Fabian Society, with Beatrice and Sidney Webb, constantly addressing large audiences in all parts of the country, engaging in controversy over religion, vivisection, hygiene and countless other subjects, and serving on musical, dramatic, literary, archæological and heaven knows what committees. His energy was terrific, his range of interests unlimited.

But 1914 his fame was international, but during the war which broke out that year he became unpopular because his remarks on the conflict and its causes were too detached to please the war-maniacs.

Some of his friends insulted him, others cut him dead, one demanded that he should be tarred and feathered, the Press called him a pro-German, and everyone except those who were doing the actual fighting would have felt greatly relieved if he had been shot.

When it was all over, and his views had been justified, his friends mutely invited him to shake hands. "Of course I did so," he informed me. "To me war fever is like any other epidemic, and what the patients say or do in their delirium is no more to be counted against them than if they were all in bed with brain fever."

'Take Your Choice' Marriage

IS career as a playwright reached its peak with the production of "St. Joan" in 1924, after which, instead of following up his greatest box-office success with a new play, as any other dramatist would have done, he spent three years writing "The Intelligent Woman's action."

Guide to Socialism," wherein he proclaimed his belief in equal incomes for all.

His most unexpected demonstration was that equality of income is a universal phenomenor and he ridiculed the notion of making incomes vary between people according to character and ability, challenging the individualists to apply it to the police force, to the Army, town any organised trade or body of public servants.

Equality is the rule, he said; in fact, it is human nature in every rank and every class, for the "Trade Union rate" satisfies every-

The test of any distributive system, he de-clared, is whether it makes the whole population inter-marriageable, giving an un-limited scope for sexual selection.

"You know, every one of you," he had frequently pontificated from the platform, "that ficated from the platform, your choice when you married, your choice was limited to two or three persons, none of whom you particularly liked. You should have had your pick of all the unmarried adults in the country." This shot always got home, and he fred it off again in the Guide.

People often ask why a man whose works have honoured England in the eyes of the world should never have been honoured by England. I can honoured by England. I can give the answer.

When the Labour Party, which had been nurtured by the Fabians, took office, and Shaw had succeeded in obtaining knighthoods for several worthy folk, Ramsay MacDonald asked him, "What about yourself?"

"Not on your life," he replied.

It was then suggested that he might be used.

It was then suggested that he might be useful to the Party in the House of Lords, can't afford to be a duke," was the retort, "and you couldn't decently offer me less."

"Well, what about the Order of Merit?"

"I have already conferred it on myself," said velt are the very core of the revolution for which the United Nations have taken their stand. We who live in the United States may think there is nothing very revolutionary about freedom of religion, freedom of expression and freedom from the fear of secret police. But when we begin to think about the significance of freedom from want for the average man, then we know that the revolution of the past 150 years has not been completed, either here in the United States or in any other nation in the world.

It is my belief that every freedom, every right, every privilege has its price, its corresponding duty without which it cannot be enjoyed. The four duties of the people's revolution, as I see them today, are Ine duty to produce to the limit.

 The duty to transport as rapidly as possible to the field of battle.

3. The duty to fight with all that is in us.4. The duty to build a peace—just, charitable and enduring.

The fourth duty is that which inspires the other

Some have spoken of the "American Century." I say that the century on which we are entering-the century which will come of this war-can be and must be the century of the common man. No nation will have the God-given right to exploit other nations. Older nations will have the privilege to help younger nations get started on the path to industrialization, but there must be neither military nor economic imperialism. The methods of the nineteenth century will not work in the people's century which is now about to begin. India, China and Latin America have a tremendous stake in the people's century. As their masses learn to read and write, and as they become productive mechanics, their standard of living will double and treble. Modern science, when devoted wholeheartedly to the general welfare, has in it potentialities of which we do not yet dream.

his union so long as it provides them with a malleable and plentiful supply of labor.

Someone is badly needed to take charge of the East Coast waterfront, and former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy has been suggested for this job, about the worst choice possible, in view of his isolationist, anti-British, anti-Russian record. Land has not publicly endorsed Kennedy, but Washington thinks he would be pleased to see the job go to a man whose thinking so much resembles his own. Obviously, the job should be given to someone else than Land himself. Even if he were highly qualified, he has too many irons in the fire and they are too big.

Another matter on which the NMU has differed with Land is the distribution of available seamen. Ships in dry dock frequently have full crews aboard. It is the union's position that such practices of ship operation should be outlawed. The union's suggestion is that only skeleton, stand-by crews competent to guard the ship and provide for essential duties while waiting for cargo or while under repair, be allowed. Land has dismissed their proposition with the remark that it is "unpractical." The Grace Line and the United States Lines followed the practice in peacetime. Joseph

His rank in history will depend on the fate of democracy, for he has been one of its most ardent champions. If democracy shows should fail and disappear at this critical point in its history, he will be forgotten as a minor prophet of an unimportant illusion in the development of the human race, If democracy emerges triumphant from the tempering furnace, he will be hailed as a major porphet whose words have lighted his fellow men to hope and progress."

smile and faughter, unsuffice, and shine from the heart. He had a lyrical quality of mind and soul that sang within him and found its natural spontaneous outlet in youthful poetry and in the music he played so happily. He wrote the words "and lead my thoughts to love and chivalry "—and, indeed, he had fullest measure of both. His exceptional charm was based on fine inner qualities and high ideals, and when war broke out he returned from Jamaica and gave the Admiralty no peace until he was accepted for the Fleet Air Arm. His natural flair for mechanism and eye and sense of timing in games served him well in training to fly fighter aircraft, apart from the cool fearlessness so often, as in his case, coupled with modesty. His captain writes:—"He was in a very fine lighter squadron, with a high reputation in the Fleet Air Arm, and Michael had a high reputation in that squadron. He had done very well in the previous convoy action, and he was doing well in the recent action when he was lost."

Michael was loved by all who knew him, and his loss to his young wife and family has been unspeakable—but they have shown just that quality of courage for which he stood, and it would be their wish that those who read this tribute should have in mind not only Michael but others, gallant and gay, too, whose loss is mourned, whom God has matched with His hour— with hand made sure, clear eye, and sharpened power, to turn, as swimmers into cleanness leaping.

SIR S. CRIPPS AND "PRODDING

THE REWARD OF VICTORY

Stafford Cripps, Lord Privy Seal, speaking in a war factory yesterday, said that the United Nations were now a great force and, although the strength of our enemies was still enormous, the time was coming when we should be able to take the offensive.

That offensive had already resulted in a glorious victory for our arms in the new Libyan campaign, where we were destroying the German and Italian land and air forces which might otherwise be joining in the attack upon the Soviet armies. In that victory every worker on the home front had his or her which might otherwise be joining in the attack upon the Soviet armies. In that victory every worker on the home front had his or her share. But this was not the only diversion that we could or should make to help our Russian allies and to take our share in the defeat of the Axis Powers. As our strength and that of our American allies in men and materials grew, other offensives would be started in other areas, for we were determined to do our utmost to hasten the victory.

The British Government were as alive to the need for pressing forward with offensive action

The British Government were as alive to the need for pressing forward with offensive action as any one of those present. They required no prodding, but they did not intend to throw away the prospect of victory by ill-considered and premature action. The workers would help the launching of offensives much more by speeding up production of the essential weapons than by talking about a second front, which the Government were only too anxious to launch as soon as the preparations could be completed.

In the heat of battle the sacrifices of the peoples of the United Nations could not be compensated by any material reward. No pay, no wages, no conditions of work or of fighting could ever repay the debt we owed to every man and woman who was helping and hard half all the chart in the country of the count fighting could ever repay the ueut we every man and woman who was helping and had helped in the salvation of our civilization. It was to what followed the war that we must look for those things that would make the suffering and anguish worth while in retrospect. That was why we must do our utmost to assure the peoples of the world of a better and happier state after the war. The more sure and certain we could make that reward and happier state after the war. The more sure and certain we could make that reward for their effort, the more heroically and determinedly would they fight to win.

One thing at least we would assure them and that was that they themselves should have the liberty and right to determine their own conditions. We pledged ourselves that there would be no dictatorship over them unless they allowed it to arise by the state of the conditions.
