Interview with the Chief Rabbi (Dr. Adler) at Finsbury Square.

Dr. Adler had previously given an open letter of introduction, to be used for purposes of this inquiry, & had worked in the Jewish New York into single & double stars the persons & institutions that he especially desired to see. He is extremely willing to help in every way.

On the following interview general points were made dealing with on the lines of heading that I had previously sent him. 'Form E' was then given quickly through. Dr. Adler can, if necessary, be seen again.

Character of Jews in different parts of London:

On the general character of the Jewish population in different parts of London Dr. Adler gave the following enumeration:-

- 1) In Whitechapel & Commercial Rd (i.e. St. George's) the working-class: artisans, pedlars, hawkers, & small shopkeepers. Note. There is a movement-of the industrial class toward Botolph Claydon + Haddenham.

- (2) "Great East - + North - East" : - small shopkeepers + the better $\frac{1}{2}$ class of cabinet-makers.
- (3) Central London (E.C.) Since Waddesley is in + around Houndsditch. In garden fields a large number of Jewish traders.
- (4) North (i.e. Highway, Cannonbury, Dalston) Middle class:
employed; large shopkeepers; some professional men.
- (5) West-Central (i.e. Bloomsbury) Middle class: Merchant; manufacturers; + professional men.
- (6) West: (Hyde Park, Kensington Gardens, + Maida Vale) Rich merchants, bankers, stock exchange + professional men. The less wealthy in Maida Vale.
- (7) S.W. (Belgrave) a ^{very} few very rich merchants etc. (Grosvenor, Rothschild etc.) No synagogue here, or few.
- (8) N.W. (St. John's Wood) Middle class: merchant + professional men.
- (9) N.W. (Hampstead). As in St. John's Wood, save that the younger people are moving toward Hampstead.
- (10) West (Hammersmith) Artists, tailors, retail trades.

of "merchant fairly well-to-do".

(1) P.E. (Borough) artisans, much employed ship-keepers.

Asked as to the movement towards securing the diffusion of the Jews, Dr. Adler said that there was a very strong desire on the part of the leaders of the community to secure this. The only place in which there is congestion is in East-London, the only class congested is the foreigners. They keep together because of a natural frequency + because they want to be near the shops for which or in which they work.

Reasons for wishing diffusion are: the ^{existence of the} overcrowding + high rents ~~that result from congestion~~ + permanency of the residential ~~that result from congestion~~. In the country foreign Jews become anglicised much more rapidly than in London, + it is desired to make London approximate to country conditions as much as possible.

The organization that is most active in this connection is the Russo-Jewish Committee. It wants to be present on foot to place synagogues in West-Ham, Poplar, Prokham etc. as aids to migration.

[Dr. Adler's direction is, he believes that one reason why it is desired that the foreign Jews

Sabbath as well as on certain Fest- days. He adds this further line at Fishmong Square. It was my hope, however, that the Chief Rabbi would leave the West-end & the surrounding streets more cultivated section, but that he should be able to be the next the poorer part of the community, always into the spirit of his emphasis & what he wrote the phrase, "loyal subjects
 - loyal subjects & steadfast Jews". On these terms the matter, including power of suspension, see the "Laws of the United Synagogue", which he adds in hand us.

The United Synagogue include 14 (and the most important) in London. The Federation of Synagogues includes the East-London Synagogue. He adds in also send reports these which will give more information as regards financial position, and give more etc. etc.

All the Synagogues of London are under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Chief Rabbi, except the Spanish Portuguese Synagogue.
 This is known, but has a chief of its own - the Rev. Dr. Gost. In certain matters also, as the authorization of marriage, the "somewhat reformed" West-London Synagogue, is also free from the jurisdiction of the Chief Rabbi. But throughout, as he adds emphasized, the complete harmony prevails.

The United Synagogue, the Federation of [East-London] Synagogues.

Exceptions to the Chief Rabbi's rule:

The customary staff of a Synagogue.

The method of filling vacant positions.

Synagogue records work.

Religious instruction & fire-insurance.

Other things, aspects on prayer & congregation.

The customary staff of a Synagogue is a Reader (corresponding to a preacher) and a Preacher. Sometimes, especially in poor Synagogues, the two offices are combined in one.

When a preacher is wanted in a Synagogue the vacancy is advertised. The Chief Rabbi gives certificates of approval, & from candidates thus provided, the Board of Management of the Synagogue would select. The election would take place on a fixed day, the electoral body being the mass of the congregation. The form is therefore highly democratic, & is, in other respects, worthy to be maintained.

On the customary connection between Synagogues & social & charitable work, much information is given in the Jewish Year Book, & also, I believe, in the Report of the Federation of Synagogues.

Every Synagogue is under a paramount obligation to be a centre of education as regards the Hebrew Religion & Scripture History. For other things, such as the formation of Guilds, dancing clubs &c. &c., they may vary according to the character of the minister & of the congregation. Many collect money for the Jewish

As regards the special assistance arising from poor collections and information can be obtained from the Report of the United the Federation of Synagogues.

Now for the Synagogue - the Federation are those of foreigners to the Jews "the Synagogue is religious" & whose action is a mixture for it is a Jew very religious.

On mixed marriages, Dr. Adler said that they were not frequent although they are recent. When it happened in the case of well-to-do people they generally become "Nativarians". In the East when the husband is a Jew, he is generally anxious to teach the woman to make her orthodox Judaism. When the wife is a Jewess it was the same a long time to the Church of England.

With the exception mentioned above (p. 12) all authorizations of marriage [not of course in the case of mixed marriages] are given by the Chief Rabbi.

Religion before marriage are on the whole good. Before

As regards the general question of the influence exerted by religion upon life, Dr. Adler said that "one must say" that there is a great deal of apathy. In regard to the observance of the Jewish law, the public opinion in the British question as it presents itself in a Christian country. Letters have been sent to 1500 Catholics asking them to forbid the keeping of the Sabbath & on the whole the answers have been satisfactory. (See letter on p 21).

Asked as to the influence of religion on the observance of the marriage command Dr. Adler answered, without hesitation, that public opinion was more powerful than religion.

And, generally, on this question he said that a common difficulty in Eng. law-makers was the forgetfulness of the fact that Religion is not summed up in ritual observances. That they have to be constantly asking its ethical value & meaning. In the West however the prevalent danger is to consider Religion as simply Ethics, & thus to avoid an indifference to prescribed

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF RABBI,
22, FINSBURY SQUARE,

London, ... July 10 5656

Dear Sir,

The importance of the subject on which we beg leave to address you will, we feel assured, plead as our excuse for troubling you with this communication.

We have been approached by a large body of our Jewish workmen, who are engaged in the different departments of the Tailoring Trade, with the urgent request to aid them in devising means whereby they might be enabled to obtain for labour on the Sabbath.

They have represented to us that the system which at present obtains to a large extent does not merely involve infraction of the seventh-day rest, but also leads to work being done on Sundays, thus causing a lamentable violation both of Divine and human law.

We learn, after consultation with experts, that this evil might be checked by the following arrangements:-

- A. By your instructing your Managers and Foremen to give out the work, when at all possible, at the beginning of the week, and never later than on the afternoon of Thursdays.
- B. By your appointing Monday as the pay-day of wages to your Jewish employees.

We confidently hope that you will experience no insuperable difficulties in carrying out these simple measures, which are fraught with momentous issues for the religious, moral, and physical welfare of the large industrial section of our Community.

We shall be glad to hear that you will adopt the suggestions which we have ventured to make, and we remain, with best wishes,

Yours truly
H. F. W.

FOR THE GUIDANCE OF MINISTERS & OTHERS VISITING

RULES

RULES FOR THE GUIDANCE OF MINISTERS & OTHERS VISITING THE JEWISH POOR.

1.—The visitation is intended to promote the physical, moral, and spiritual welfare of the Jewish poorer classes in the Metropolis.

2.—Eleemosynary relief is not to be regarded as a purpose of the visitation. Cases of destitution should at once be referred to the Jewish Board of Guardians. Information of the relief dispensed by the Visitors is to be communicated to the Board.

3.—In visiting the homes of the poor the greatest stress should be laid upon the necessity of self-help, and upon the importance of children being trained to become skilled artisans. Attention should be drawn to the extreme value of the work undertaken by the Industrial Committee of the Board of Guardians. [Memoranda and Forms on this subject are sent herewith.]

4.—Where cases of sickness come under the notice of the Visitors, they should call at least once a week. Where sick-nursing is required, Mrs. Levy, of 68, Hoxton Street, N., the District Visitor of the Ladies' Conjoint Visiting Committee should at once be communicated with, so that the services of a sick nurse may be obtained. The Minister should, at his discretion, read a suitable chapter of the Bible, and offer up a brief prayer in Hebrew, or in the vernacular of the patient.

5.—The Minister should also pay a special visit during the period of שבועה, to give consolation and advice.

6.—When visiting the houses of the poor the Visitor should satisfy himself that the rules of cleanliness and decency* are obeyed. He should examine into the various sanitary matters specified in the subjoined list, and if any unhealthy condition exist give information to the Sanitary Inspector of the Jewish Board of Guardians.

7.—Strict inquiry should be made in respect to the regular and punctual attendance of the children at school, so as to preclude the disgrace of parents being summoned before a magistrate, and of their children being sent as "incorrigible truants" to an Industrial School. If the latter do not attend any of the Jewish schools, the parents should be advised to send them to the Religious Classes established in connection with the Gravel Lane, Castle Street, Settle Street, Chicksand Street, and Olga Road Board Schools, or other Board Schools where due provision may hereafter be made for the religious instruction of Jewish pupils. If they attend other Board Schools, the Visitors should inquire whether and where the children receive religious instruction. The attention of parents should be directed to the Sabbath School, meeting at the Jews' Free School, Bell Lane, every Sabbath, at half-past twelve. And foreigners should be informed of the Evening Classes for Adults, which meet at the Free School every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evening, from 8 till 10 o'clock.

* This has special reference to the arrangements made for the separation of the sexes in the sleeping accommodation provided for the inmates.

8.—Inquiries should be made whether, and where, parents and children attend public worship.

9.—Cases of over-crowding of workshops, or over-working of children, that may be encountered by the Visitors are, if friendly advice should fail, to be reported to the Sanitary Inspector of the Board of Guardians.

10.—Chedarim should be visited while instruction is being given, and endeavours should be made that the physical health of the children be not injured by lack of cleanliness and ventilation, or by over-pressure.

11.—There are also special matters which should come under the notice of the Visitors:—

I.—Every possible effort should be made to prevent disorderly houses from being kept by Jews. No exertion should be spared with the view of reclaiming girls who have strayed from the path of virtue. They should be informed of the existence of a Home for their reception at 5, Nicholas Street, St. Peter's Road, Mile End.

II.—Publicity should be given to the fact that a House has been taken at 82, Globe Road, Mile End, where friendless girls can obtain respectable lodgings at a low rent.

III.—Attention should be given to the cases of lads who sell lucifer matches, etc., in the streets, and their parents should be visited with the view of these lads being apprenticed.

IV.—Endeavours should be made to keep young men from betting and gambling, and to suppress Jewish gaming-houses, if any.

V.—Desecration of the Sabbath should be checked by earnest moral suasion, and by exertions on the part of the Visitors to find such employment for the young as will enable them to keep the Day of Rest.

VI.—The pernicious effects likely to result from attendance at "Mothers' Meetings" and similar gatherings provided by the Missionaries should be pointed out.

VII.—Cases of wife-desertion and parental neglect of children should receive careful attention.

VIII.—Cases in which, unhappily, Jews are discredibly concerned come, from time to time, before the Police Courts and other public tribunals. These should receive the immediate attention of the Visitor of the district in which the parties reside.

IX.—The Visitors should attend to matters in which their aid and co-operation are solicited by the Ladies' Conjoint Visiting Committee. It is anticipated that similar facilities will be granted by the Ladies' Committee.

12.—It is proposed in the first instance to deal with those districts which, for the most part, are inhabited by foreigners and by the poorest portion of the Jewish population. The following is a list of streets, &c., assigned to each Visitor:—

DISTRICT I.—Between Bishopsgate Street and Commercial Street.

COMMITTEE ON INFANT MORTALITY.

REPORT.

of the first confinement.

COMMITTEE ON INFANT MORTALITY.

of the first confinement.

It is remarkable in the foregoing evidence, that certain causes which notoriously conduce to infantile mortality among the general population, are conspicuous by their absence. It would appear that the Jewish poor are singularly free from those vices which are referred to by recent writers as causing infant mortality, such as wilful neglect of children in order to obtain policy money; drunkenness, resulting in overlaying; immorality resulting in illegitimacy; syphilitic diseases, &c. This, however, all tends to show that the actual causes of mortality must have a very much greater effect on the Jewish population than upon the general community.

In conclusion, the Committee regret that in the absence of any means of obtaining a reliable estimate of the Jewish population of London it is impossible to obtain more definite statistics. There exists no record of Jewish Births, and the Census takes no cognizance of Race or Religion.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Committee is of opinion that, whilst it can not be absolutely established that there is an excessive infantile mortality among the Jews, there can be no doubt that many deaths arise from causes which are preventible. It is also manifest that, as in the general so in the Jewish community, for every actual death which occurs a certain proportion of children survive in a condition of permanently impaired vitality.

They, therefore, beg to submit the following recommendations to the Committee of Ministers and others visiting among the poor.

1. The staff of nurses working among the Jewish poor should be increased, and every effort should be made to induce their being employed in cases of serious illness. It might be advisable for relief Committees to refuse assistance in cases where the invalid is being nursed at home, and the offer of a trained nurse has been rejected.

2. Visitors among the poor, and those charged with the administration of relief should explain the rules of health with respect to ventilation, cleanliness, etc., and pressure should be exercised in those cases in which such rules are palpably neglected. The use of the Public Baths and Washhouses should be especially advocated.

REPORT

Of the Committee on Infant Mortality.

This Committee was appointed by a Resolution of the "Committee of Ministers and others, Visiting among the Jewish Poor," dated April 2nd, 1894, and the first meeting was held at the Office of the Chief Rabbi, June 26th, 1894.

The Reference to the Committee was as follows:—

Whereas the burial statistics of the United Synagogue show that the deaths of Jewish children under 10 years of age are higher in proportion to the deaths of adults than is the case among the general community, the proportion in the case of Charity Funerals being excessive, it is required to ascertain:—

1. Whether these statistics are reliable.
2. Whether they do convey the result mentioned above.
3. Whether the facts are capable of explanation by reason of any abnormal age-composition of the general population.
4. If it be found that the deaths are excessive, what is the cause of the excess?
and
5. Can the high mortality be prevented?

With a view to obtain the desired information the Committee directed its attention to the following matters:—

(A)—CAUSES.

1. What are the causes of infant mortality?
2. What is the condition of parents among the classes affected?
3. What is the proportion of deaths from
 - (a) Hereditary disease,
 - (b) Accident and neglect,
 - (c) Infectious disorders,
 - (d) Insanitary conditions,
 - (e) Malnutrition,
 - (f) Starvation and cold?
4. Do mothers go out to work close upon their confinement?
5. What is the average size of a family among the various classes of Jews?

(B)—STATISTICS.

1. What are the statistics of death at various ages in the general population?
2. What is the age-constitution of Jews in England and in Eastern Europe?
3. In view of the recent immigration, which is believed to consist in a great measure of persons under the age of forty, are persons of advanced age found among the London Jews in the same proportion as among the general population?
4. Is the proportion of infants to adults among the Jews of England greater than that in the general population?
5. Is there any means of ascertaining the Jewish birth-rate?

(C)—BURIAL.

1. Are all Jewish funerals recorded as such?
2. Are any charity funerals of Jews conducted by bodies other than the United Synagogue?
3. What are the amalgamated statistics of funerals for all Jews?
4. Are junior members of Jewish families to any appreciable extent buried in non-Jewish ground, when the seniors would be buried in Jewish cemeteries?
5. Are junior members of poor families frequently buried free, whilst the seniors have second or even first-class funerals?
6. Do burials from public institutions consist of adults and children in the same proportion as ordinary funerals?

After obtaining all the information possible on the above subjects the Committee begs to report in answer to the above reference.

I. Whether these statistics are reliable?

It appears that it has hitherto been the habit of the sexton of the United Synagogue, in regard to the cause of any death to be registered in his books, to rely upon the verbal statement made by the person giving notice of the death, the doctor's certificate having previously been given to the local registrar. Although, therefore, the number of deaths and the ages appear to be correctly recorded, the assigned causes of death are frequently inaccurate, and on carefully investigating individual cases, it was found that a very large number were stated in the Synagogue Records to have died from diseases other than those certified by the medical attendant. It is, therefore, difficult for the Committee to give any opinion as to the actual causes of death, although it has endeavoured by tabulating the statistics, such as they are, to obtain some idea of the diseases most rife among the Jewish population.

By the courteous assistance of Mr. Lewis Emanuel, arrangements have now been made with Dr. Loane, Medical Officer of Health of Whitechapel, by means of which, from and after January, 1895, the statistics in the Burial Society's books will be corrected, and the records made to agree with the medical certificates. In this connection the Committee suggests to the Burial Committee of the United Synagogue, and to the Board of the Federation of Synagogues, the advisability of distinguishing in their registers of burials between those cases in which the recorded cause of death is derived from verbal information and those in which it has been obtained from a medical certificate.

2. Whether they do convey the result mentioned above?

Leaving out of the question the causes of death, it is an undoubted fact that the infant mortality is extraordinarily heavy. Appendix 1 gives the details of the deaths under one month, under one year, under five years, and under ten years, and the total deaths at all ages; from which it appears that the deaths under ten years of age have varied from 54½ per cent. of the total in 1891 to 60½ per cent. in 1893, and those under one year from 31½ per cent. in 1892 to 38 per cent. in 1890. The two worst years were 1890 and 1893. The mean rate in England for the year 1893 for deaths under one year is 25 per cent. of the total. The rate disclosed above is, therefore, about 50 per cent. in excess of the mean. The heaviest death rate appears to be among the pauper classes, the proportions of children's deaths to totals of each class being as follows:—

The Wealthy Class, 20 per cent. of total; Middle Class, 36½; Pauper Class, 81½.

3. Whether the facts are capable of explanation by reason of any abnormal age composition of the general population?

A large proportion of the Jewish population of the East End is of foreign parentage. Taking the returns of the census in Whitechapel, out of a population of 74,462 in 1891, there were 13,538 Russians or Russian Poles; (in 1881 the number was 5,293). It is the experience of those having to deal with foreign immigrants that the vast proportion of them arrive in this country in the prime of life, between the ages of 20 and 40, and that they bring with them or have born to them within the early years of their settlement young families. The elder members of the same family, those over the age of 50, are left behind. Hence, the foreign Jewish population of the East End of London consists of an abnormal proportion of young children and people in the prime of life.

Appendix II. shows the age-constitution of Whitechapel in 1891, which is graphically illustrated by the following diagram supplied by Mr. Walford.

Considering that less than 20 per cent. of the population were Poles or Russians, it is evident that the number of persons among them of the ages of 35 and under is vastly in excess of the normal proportion. As the death-rate between the ages of 10 and 50 is, as a rule, comparatively light, and as the heaviest proportion of deaths occurs under 5 or over 50, it is evident that, where there is an undue excess of individuals under 50, even a normal proportion of deaths among children will appear to be vastly in excess of the general rate. Further, the birth-rate in Whitechapel is 40.9 per thousand, whilst for general London it is 31. The ten years' average for Whitechapel is 35.1; it may, therefore, be fairly inferred that the increase in the birth-rate has been caused by an increase in the number of persons of child-bearing age; or, in other words, that the foreign immigrants are proportionately more prolific than natives.

4. If it be found that the deaths amongst children are excessive, what is the cause of the excess?

This branch of the enquiry has engaged the very close attention of the Committee, and the evidence of its Medical members has been most valuable. Although it is evident from the above statements that the proportionate death-rate as disclosed by the burial statistics cannot be regarded as so grave as appears on the surface, yet at the same time it was found on enquiry, and by analysing the detailed causes of death in individual cases, that a very large number of children annually die from causes which are doubtless preventable.

The Committee took much evidence as to the circumstances which exist among the poor Jews, and which appear to affect the mortality.

Dwelling rooms are frequently converted into workshops. Rooms in which children are placed to sleep at night, are frequently used in the day-time, and till late in the evening, for trades such as tailoring or bootmaking, which require heating stoves, gas light, &c. Coke is generally used for fires even for purely domestic purposes. Over-crowding takes place, the atmosphere becomes vitiated, and the children are deprived of healthful rest at the proper time.

In Appendix III. Dr. Michael gives details of causes of death among children whom he has attended. The houses are deficient in hygienic and sanitary requisites, and there is an absence of light and ventilation, and sanitary accommodation. There is considerable over-crowding. Very great ignorance exists as to the rules of diet for children, and there is often great prejudice against the ventilation of sick rooms. The list contains 317 cases of deaths of children under 5 years of age; the following being the causes:—

Convulsions, 8; Dentition, 3; Meningitis, 15; Debility at birth, 58; Zymotics, 40; Diseases of the Respiratory System, 63; Diseases of the Digestive System, 120. Total, 317. The diseases of the Respiratory System may be referred principally to bad ventilation, and other bad surroundings, while the diseases of the Digestive System, the bulk of which proved fatal in the case of children under one year, are mostly referable to crass ignorance as regards dietary rules. The causes of death from debility at birth were insufficient and improper food of the mother during pregnancy, inability to secure rest, and lack of fresh air. It appears that many mothers who are most careful of their children, neglect their own health during the periods of pregnancy, and of recovery from confinement. Many deaths are also caused by what may be described as the over anxiety of the parents who frequently call in two or three doctors to attend to the same case. The simultaneous adoption of different systems of treatment and the multiplication of remedies constitute a not infrequent cause of death.

The statement of Dr. Sequeira contained in Appendix IV. confirms what Dr. Michael has said, and lays special stress upon, the unwillingness to wash or change the linen of a sick child, the habit of overburdening it with excessive clothing and the frequent changes of doctors. He also finds that a large proportion of the illness among poor children is due to over, or improper, and not to under feeding.

Appendix V. gives the experience of Mrs. Lazarus, who acts as sick nurse, among the poor, with details of 38 cases nursed by her. She also complains of improper and indigestible food being given to young children, the use of damp clothing and the bad ventilation and general insanitary state of sick rooms.

In Appendix VI. details as to the hygienic arrangements of houses occupied by the Jewish poor are given by Mr. Quaintral, Sanitary Inspector to the Jewish Board of Guardians.

Appendix VII. gives the names and addresses of all children who have died during a period of six months in the year 1894, classified according to causes, age, and as to locality.

Appendix VIII. is a paper by Dr. Anghel Gaster, treating of the effect of Consumption on the Jewish population of London. He shows that the proportion of sufferers from all forms of this disease among the Jews of London is slightly less than half of that among the general population. That, notwithstanding the increase of the population by immigration and natural growth, this proportion remains the same. That the low mortality from this cause is disclosed equally at all age periods, and that it is hardly a factor worthy of consideration in the problem of infant mortality. Few children under 10 years of age are attacked, and where the disease does manifest itself it can nearly always be referred to improper food, such as unboiled milk, &c. Jewish women are very slightly affected, the proportion of their cases as compared with those affecting males is as one to two. Jewish immigrants do not appear to have brought Consumption with them, the main causes of diseases among adult males, whom it most affects, being infection by working in dirty and squalid houses, and by reason of neglect of moral laws and dietary observances. Dr. Gaster urges the cleaning and whitewashing of houses inhabited by our poor before entry, and the prevention of overcrowding. He considers light and air as the best agents for counteracting the risks of infection.

Appendix IX. by the Rev. J. F. Stern supplies statistics concerning the Jewish marriages of the poorer classes at reduced rates, from which it appears that the average age of marriage is about 24 for males, and 21½ for females. The poverty in many such cases is such that they have to apply for maternity letters and assistance on the occasion of the first confinement.

It is remarkable in the foregoing evidence, that certain causes which notoriously conduce to infantile mortality among the general population, are conspicuous by their absence. It would appear that the Jewish poor are singularly free from those vices which are referred to by recent writers as causing infant mortality, such as wilful neglect of children in order to obtain policy money; drunkenness, resulting in overlaying; immorality resulting in illegitimacy; syphilitic diseases, &c. This, however, all tends to show that the actual causes of mortality must have a very much greater effect on the Jewish population than upon the general community.

In conclusion, the Committee regret that in the absence of any means of obtaining a reliable estimate of the Jewish population of London it is impossible to obtain more definite statistics. There exists no record of Jewish Births, and the Census takes no cognizance of Race or Religion.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Committee is of opinion that, whilst it can not be absolutely established that there is an excessive infantile mortality among the Jews, there can be no doubt that many deaths arise from causes which are preventible. It is also manifest that, as in the general so in the Jewish community, for every actual death which occurs a certain proportion of children survive in a condition of permanently impaired vitality.

They, therefore, beg to submit the following recommendations to the Committee of Ministers and others visiting among the poor.

1. The staff of nurses working among the Jewish poor should be increased, and every effort should be made to induce their being employed in cases of serious illness. It might be advisable for relief Committees to refuse assistance in cases where the invalid is being nursed at home, and the offer of a trained nurse has been rejected.

2. Visitors among the poor, and those charged with the administration of relief should explain the rules of health with respect to ventilation, cleanliness, etc., and pressure should be exercised in those cases in which such rules are palpably neglected. The use of the Public Baths and Washhouses should be especially advocated.

3. Efforts should be made to prevent rooms used in the day-time, as workshops, from being used as sleeping rooms for young children, and, if possible, the assistance of the factory inspectors and sanitary officials should be invoked to carry out this policy.

4. Simple rules as to the conduct of a wife during pregnancy and the treatment of very young children should be drawn up in English and Yiddish and distributed through the clergy and lady visitors to married women. An attempt should be made from time to time to have addresses by women to women on such subjects, and children should be instructed in the simple rules of hygiene.

5. Every effort should be made to discourage early and improvident marriages.

Signed on behalf of the Committee,

ARTHUR E. FRANKLIN,

Hope of improvement - his in education.

As regards the influence of education, it is working gradually. The ranks of foreigners are becoming anglicised, & being hoped to become loyal & useful citizens.

Prostitution was formerly unknown among the Jews, but now alas! it is not so. The foreigners are the culprits. "English females, with very little doubt, are as a rule good."

Dr. Adler drew special attention to the importance of the Jewish friendly societies. Hypnotism on steam can be performed in Blank & from Dr. Adler's brother [F.N. (?) Adler, Secretary to the Sun Insurance Co.]

Minister & Secretary of the Boston Synagogue, Poet Road

Mr. Hyanson gave me a very warm welcome, & describing himself as a very busy man, pressed me to stay & see him at once although he had just come in to dinner, & I had only come to make an appointment. He was so urgent that it seemed best to do so. I had previously explained my call to Mr. Hyanson, & she having assured her husband that the meal would not run short, we all went down to the basement. I had just had a mutton-crook but by way of the salt of friendship I took some chicken-soup & a glass of wine. The manage was simple & a little untidy. Cold meat & stewed fruit completed her menu. Mr. H. ate & talked for the whole time ~~to~~ his wife correcting & supplementing his information from time to time. She was a moderately quiet & practical body of perhaps 32, & he a vigorous, keen, somewhat excitable Jew of perhaps 38, with religious & social enthusiasms & self-regarding instincts strangely blended. He possessed immense vitality, & his words tumbled over each other in their haste to find expression. He was an interesting & even attractive man, although one was conscious of the few. He had no humility.

of social work. He tries to visit as much as possible & in case of "joy or sorrow" is on the bench of his congregation. He regards his visiting as that of a brother. He did not believe in putting himself on any pedestal. In case of mourning his visit would be of a pastoral kind; in those of marriage the pastoral & the social work be combined.

There is practically no local need of arrangements for visiting the sick, nor for charitable relief, except a few for "bedsman". [equals in this case I think poor members].

Effects of Russian immigration

Asked as to whether any class was tending to drop away, he said that he thought the Jewish had the same kind of spirit to contend against a other groups. Young people, he said, were not so pietistic (I use this word advisedly, & do not mean not so religious) as their grandfathers, & attach less importance to ceremony. "What I find is that when the grandfather was very religious, the grandson goes in for social work. It seems almost a psychological development. At least this is my experience, & this may not have been wide enough to generalize upon. But I think it is not as a suggestion for his "Broth". The altruism of the post-war thought, ran to party. The Jew-fund. is now against the formalism of religion, & the present generation runs to social work. Asked as to the causes of this change he mentioned the writings of Darwin, Huxley etc.

But in spite of our influence, the number of worshippers is not diminishing, because of the foreign Jews. Russia & to-day is like the Spain of the 16th century. It is religious & intolerant of all but the Queen, & the Catholic Church. Asked as to Protestant proselytizing work, he said that a good deal was attempted in the East-End, but locally not much. They do attempt a little, Dr. W. Cornhill for

The Jewish enterprise which has

Jewish enterprise has opened up the Petroleum Industry in South have Sugar Factories which give employment to thousands.

Given facilities of education hundreds of Jews who would emigrate in a short period, these

& to the benefit of the great country in which they live. As things are,

Russia is losing some of its

OF THE

„North London Visitors among the Jewish Poor,”

for the year ending October 31st, 1896.

THE Committee of the above have very much pleasure in presenting their third Annual Report. The District in which they visit is a quadrangle of extensive area, bounded by Leman Street, Commercial Road, Cannon Street Road and Cable Street.

The cases of those in this District, as well as of those in the North and North-East, applying for assistance to the Relief, Loan, Emigration and Russo-Jewish Departments of the Jewish Board of Guardians, are distributed for investigation among the visitors belonging to this group

It is satisfactory to be able to note that the system has worked, during the past year, as in the previous years, smoothly and well.

We regret that Mr. A. A. Isaacs has given up his connection with the group. Our body has, however, been considerably strengthened by the addition of Mr. Joseph Salomon and Rev. C. Davis. The associated local Dorcas has met every fortnight and made 800 garments which have been distributed to necessitous cases. We regret to have to state that these have not sufficed to supply the needs which have come under the notice of the visitors. Gifts of Clothing will therefore be most welcome. Our sincere thanks are rendered to the Board of Management of the Dalston Synagogue for kindly placing their Committee-room at the disposal of the ladies for their bi-monthly sewing meetings, as well as to the North London Grocery Fund for placing at the disposal of the visitors every week a large number of Grocery Tickets.

A portion of the Fund has been expended in providing extra nourishment for the sick, in supplement of the Grants made by the Board of Guardians.

The following is a Statement of Income and Expenditure for the past twelvemonth:—

While thanking the Ladies and Gentlemen who have devoted, and are devoting, so much time, energy and zeal, to the praiseworthy work of visitation among the Poor, the hope is earnestly expressed that their efforts will be seconded by an increase of subscriptions and their number strengthened by an accession of fresh workers in this valuable field of philanthropy.

Interview with the Rev - Heilbrunn, Minister of the South
Hathway Synagogue in Berkshire Street (Hase St.) Nov. 30, 1917

Mr Heilbrunn is married & lives at - Queens Road, Dalton Lane, he is also an assistant - leader at - the Jews Free School, where I saw him. He is polite that in South Hathway as well as in Berk Lane he is the scholar rather than the minister. Only ~~very~~ adults of a very vulgarian type could go to him for religious teaching.

He has been at - South Hathway for 14 years, but until this autumn the work has been carried on in temporary & small premises. Now they have a Synagogue, but apart from the religious classes, everything seems to be on a very small scale. The Synagogue is now affiliated to the United Synagogue.

The people are middle - class & working - class, & most are connected with the bootmaking industry. The community is a growing one & they are not migrating.

The staff consist of the Minister & a Reader. There are Two paid teachers in school we called the Hackney Religious Classes, + 3 voluntary teachers. The classes meet on the Sabbath, Sunday + Wednesday. St. Hildroom is the head of them. There are 200 scholars.

The Synagogue holds 258 males + 214 women. In addition there are class-rooms underneath, + a large room is available.

The services are held on the eve of the Sabbath + on the Sabbath from 9 to 11.30; from 12.30 - 1 + at night - full. At the 9 to 11.30 service there are about 30 of each sex present, + smaller though this number is, those attending at the other times are "much fewer".

There is also a daily morning + evening service.

He estimates, + gives us only as his own unauthorised estimate, that there are about 400 families or 2000 Jewish persons in S. Hackney.

There are practically no social agencies. A Ladies Society which was formed to make vestments is going to convert itself into a Benevolent Society, + a Social + Literary Club is just

They will have a meeting committee for the Jewish Board of Guardians, in place of those with Mr. Hillmann spoke.

He visits on the Home for Incapables (Jewish Victoria Park Road, near the Jewish Home for Aged Men, 69 (2) West End.

Says that Jewish prostitution is certainly beginning. Has never noticed it until the last 3 or 4 years, but there is no doubt about it now. The women are both English & foreign born, but they will get drunk or into difficulties with the police. They play their trade strictly as a matter of business.

Asked to the cause he said that he thought it might be traced to the poverty of some of the Russian immigrants.

Mr. Hillmann is a man of nearly 50, of average height, solid build; & rather unpleasing face. There is nothing attractive & little that is interesting about him. He tends either to be actions as rude. He seemed a little rough in dealing with his boys & I don't know if he is an official superintendent of the Turkey club. But as a religious leader & spiritual guide!

Interview with the Rev. J. A. Goldstein Minister of the North London Synagogue, John Street.
 Residence - 38 Mitre Square. Dec. 13. 97

The North London Synagogue is the oldest in North London, & is badly placed for the convenience of the community. Few Jews live in the immediate neighbourhood of the building, & the people come mainly from Highgate, Canonbury, & Oldham. The Synagogue is therefore assisted by the Port Road Synagogue, & when this was established the North London congregation pertained, saying that the proposed site was too near.

There is, it is pretty clear, a certain amount of rivalry between the two places. The John Street Synagogue, however, after having gone through a period of decline has been looking up again during the last six months, & Mr Goldstein suggested with some hesitation, that one reason was that old members were finding their way back again. It seems that a considerable proportion of the congregation attend not because John St. is more convenient but because of old associations, & of the attachment to the place that has grown up.

The people are practically all middle-class. They appear from the movement to Hampstead etc. where fashion is now taking the lead. In earlier years North London was more habitually the first place for fashions to come to from East London, & have many on N.W. or W. afterwards, the North was called 'the filter', because of the imports left behind. This seems however to be a too severe simile as in Goldstein's case the North London Jew is generally respectable, as well as comparatively well-to-do. At the present time when fashions come ^{from the East} they very often skip the North & go straight to Hampstead or Warner ~~the~~ where they are found first. This is on a question of fashion, & whereas ~~Warner~~ Baywater used to be the fashion, the Jews now go to Hampstead, Kilburn, Cricklewood etc. But they always go to where ~~the~~ fashions lead, & the Jew is found as eye-to-eye in the neighborhood, e.g. of Piccadilly.

Besides Mr Goldstein there is a Reader. There are 3 voluntary teachers in the religious class, & a few additional voluntary helpers locally. But here, as at Port Road, most of the practical work done by tray.

The congregation is done outside either in connection with great institutions or in East London charitable work.

This is true especially of Mr. Goldstein himself, & as he said the district they look little time. He has a part of the Cong. (Bancroft St) allotted to him & the Synagogue for purposes of visitation. He works in connection with schools. He visits in Hospitals, Prisons, & Workhouses, certain places (& in considerable number) being attended, as is well to his office as minister of John Street.

There are no hiding seats in the Synagogue & spaces are attached. Seats for men (ground floor) 289; in gallery (for women) 231. The Synagogue is rather a handsome building; well built & well furnished; with a marble pulpit, the gift of a member.

The usual meetings for religious service are held, including the daily morning service, & often in the evening.

The most important service is held on the Sabbath morning from 10-30 to 12. The numbers vary immensely, from 110 to 600. Average (by) 200.

There are 119 male seat-holders & 116 female. The Building.

* No daily service, as most of the people live or for 1/4 of the year in the other Synagogue.

Service etc.

Total membership is 200 males + 160 females.

The service is somewhat freer than at most of the Synagogues, the title ~~is~~ being read ~~in~~ in English. A children (girls) service, with singing etc. + organ accompaniment is allowed in the body of the building. In the structure too a cross is introduced in the wall + decoration, ~~there~~ in factstein said, would at one time have been on the building were it East London.

He said that a good many people were getting to be less observant of religious duties, but this was contradicted by those who found their way to the Synagogue for the Sabbath, who were more strict. But these very people, the students, generally talked at the services. A more hushed silence is enforced. The habit of using the Synagogue as a place for intercourse is traced to times of persecution, when the religious assembly was ~~the~~ the only opportunity for common assembly + talk.

The Dutchess Synagogue is called the Sabbath wig, when at so demonstrated at the service, dropping it. But there are very demerits, there have no appointed ministers.

Other things.

The North London is one of the United Synagogue.

The local social agencies are, as already stated, unimportant: Boy Brigade, North London Library & Social Union etc. etc.

A few ladies form a visiting Committee for sick cases, & if necessary a nurse is employed.

The congregation gives liberally in charity, but the local need of help is ~~very~~ occasional.

Mr. Goldstein has always fostered free action, & really does not know as well as his people do. He fears that centralization might damp enthusiasm. He was anxious to impress us with the fact that not only he himself, but many of his people were active in all sorts of ways but partly spiritually.

He is friendly with most of the local clergy etc. There is no sign of hostility. The embarrassing thing is that he is made the confident source of their internal affairs! He does not know Mr. Haigh, whom he thought had the reputation for being rather hard - offish.

He can get on with the C.O.S. Praise local Poor Law Administration.

Police helpful.

Work no difficulty. Suspect sense of betting.

Prostitution well known in district. Families are respectable. Married life also happy + comfortable. He fed - too much loving + caring. So much endearment. [Mr. Goldstein is a bachelor!]

Jobs very thorough. Many of his wealthy local supporters began with nothing not many years ago. The Truck family an instance.

Health good:

Housing good.

Mr. Goldstein visits at Pentonville etc. Generally has 20 or 25 cases at Pentonville. Parole on 1st visit.

More frequent charges are for "frequenting" (that is, overt or suspicion of evil intent: viz. G. thinks a disproportionate + unfair proportion) Pick-pocketing; Maintenance; + occasionally assault. He's only had one case for drunkenness, that was long back. The man had married an Irish woman (non-Jew) + laid the blame on her.

There are fewer convictions for buying stolen goods than formerly.

Just once

NORTH LONDON SYNAGOGUE.

Mr. Goldstein has been at the North London Synagogue for 17 years. He is a man of 40 or 45. Capable, like Mr. Hyamson, anxious to impress, but a more quiet & more level-headed man than the Minister of Port Road. He is somewhat critical of him. Says he is always in a flutter; his eye is the weaker. The Synagogue is prospering because it is in the middle of the Community etc. etc.

Mr. G. talked very freely; took me over the Synagogue, & showed me everything.

NORTH LONDON SYNAGOGUE.

REPORT, 1896.

Report

It is with pleasure that the Board of Management issues to the Members an account of the past year's work, and is in a position to state that the condition of the Congregation is in advance of the previous year. The Board confidently looks to the further co-operation of the Members to place the Synagogue on a prosperous and permanent footing.

Finance

The Income is better by over £100. In 1895 it was £1,272 2s. 1d.; this year it is £1,374 3s. 8d. The deficit is now reduced to only £9 16s. 7d., and it is encouraging to note that the decrease of the deficit has been regular and continuous, thus auguring well for its total extinction in the near future. Rates and assessments handed over to the United Synagogue amounted to £352 14s. 10d.

A noteworthy item in the accounts is the high level reached by voluntary offerings, viz., £201 16s., for which the Board of Management feels grateful to the Members. Holyday Seats realized £48 9s. 6d., and Marriage Charges £32 3s.; Dividends on Legacy Fund, £1 19s. 8d.

The outlay on the year's working was almost stationary, primary and local expenses being £1,031 5s. 5d., as against £1,025 13s. in the preceding year.

Every care has been exercised to economize without impairing the efficiency of the Service.

There are still a good number of Seats vacant, Gentlemen 119, and Ladies 116. The Board appreciates the loyal action of several young men recently taking Seats and joining the Congregation, and Members could advance further the progress of the Synagogue if they induced their grown-up sons and daughters to attach themselves to the Congregation by becoming Seatholders. The Board respectfully invites the Members' earnest attention to this point.

Service

A Special Children's Service, with suitable address on Hanucha, was introduced, with edifying results.

The following Ladies and Gentleman in the Congregation, The Misses Fanny Goldhill, Nellie Bernstein, Betsy Harris, Lily Jacobs, B. Ellis, and Mr. L. Van Duren, volunteered to co-operate with the Choir, and thus helped to render the Service most impressive and effective.

Pulpit

Sermons have been delivered in the Synagogue by the Very Rev. The Chief Rabbi and Mr. A. Feldman, B.A. (of Jews College), besides the regular pulpit addresses by the Minister (Rev. Julius A. Gouldstein), who also preached in the Great, Bayswater, and East London Synagogues. Readings from the Scriptures, followed by an English Prayer, were, as usual, given on Sabbaths and Festivals.

In addition to his duties at the Synagogue, Mr. Gouldstein holds a Service and delivers an Address every Sabbath and Festival at Pentonville Prison.

The Board of Management, recognising the able services rendered by the Minister, the Rev. J. A. Gouldstein, recommended an increase of £50 per annum to his Salary, which was unanimously voted him by the Council of the United Synagogues.

Religious Instruction

Classes continue to be held in the Synagogue and Committee Room on Sunday mornings, from 11 till 1, for Instruction in Hebrew and Religion under the direction of the Rev. Julius A. Gouldstein, and, although he is glad to acknowledge the willing help rendered by some valued assistants, yet, with additional teachers, extra Classes could be formed.

Chevra Kadisha

The Reader (Rev. S. Munz) continues to act as Administrator of the Local Branch of the Chevra Kadisha, and will readily supply any information regarding the Society.

Choir

The Choir remains under the superintendence of the Rev. S. Munz, who watches over the training of the Choristers.

Gifts

On the occasion of the Barmitzvah of his eldest son, the Warden, Mr. Adolph Tuck, presented to the Congregation a Sepher Torah, with the full appurtenances of Embroidered Velvet Mantle, Silver Crown and Pointer. The Misses Josephs (Mountford Terrace) made a successful collection among the Ladies of the Congregation, and furnished much-admired Floral Decorations for Shevuos. The Succah requirements were also kindly given without encroaching upon the Synagogue Funds.

Charity

Mr. Henry Hart again ably presided over a Conjoint Committee from the North London and Dalston Synagogues in aid of the Funds of the Board of Guardians for the Relief of the Jewish Poor, and collected about £200. The North London Synagogue also handed over £25 15s. to the Hospital Saturday Fund, and £53 os. 6d. to the Indian Famine Fund. The Pupils of the Religion Classes have once more joined their seniors in the field of philanthropy, and have made worthy contributions to the Children's Country Holiday Fund. The North London Synagogue Branch of the Children's Orphan Aid Society—connected with the Norwood Orphan Asylum—has grown to satisfactory proportions, and again heads the list with this year's contributions of £73 16s., its Members now holding 15 Life Governorships. The Misses Lavey (Treasurers, 19, Arundel Square, N.), and Miss Hester Benedictus (Hon. Sec., 190, Albion Road, Stoke Newington, N.), will gladly give all particulars.

Among the many charitable objects that engage the attention of individual Members of this Congregation who take part with zeal and energy in all movements of the Community, the North London Grocery Relief Fund—under the personal management of Mrs. Herman Tuck—has become an established Institution, and is recognised as a power for good.

Interview with Mr. J. E. Blank
on the first and second. Jan 28

Called on Mr. Blank, the Secretary, to get advice as to the best way of obtaining particulars of the Federated Synagogues. He has seen a list of the best people to see with regard to each of the 25 constituent Synagogues, & gave some general information as to the Federation itself.

The Federation was formed in 1887 with the general object of improving the general position as regards methods of worship & places of worship, of the poorer Jewish congregations. Subsidiary objects were (1) to establish a Burial Society of the Federation. It is an ordinary Burial Club, the constituent Synagogues paying the subscription received from their own members (see Balance Sheet). The fee is 2/- per week, & members of Synagogues who have paid for 13 weeks, may be entitled to a funeral, & a witness of the dead, for himself, wife, unmarried children or step-children. (except sons above 21) also to receive 20/- for keeping the customary week of mourning for wife or child, & for payment entitled to a free burial in the Federation cemetery. [cf. para. from Law 3]. There are now 1400 [i.e. the Shiva] members.

(2) To secure representation of the Federated Synagogues on

Union Jewish Board - ~~The~~ Theoria [Kohler read], Guardians, Jewish Religious Education Board, etc.

3) To give the Jews a voice. Before 1897 they had no organization by which they could make themselves heard.
They are now attacked since all kinds of questions, both secular & religious, can be taken through before the House of the Federation.

At the time of its formation an attempt was made to obtain a complete register of every case of Jewish worship.
We were at present ~~at~~ of the little "room synagogues" that still have to be created. The policy of the Federation is to make every synagogue a considerable center & now is advocated that there be at least 50 members. They contribute to the amalgamation of small bodies of worshippers & such amalgamation has often been brought about, sometimes leading to the building or equipping of a "room synagogue".
Of such some of us now exist.

The motive for the formation of the small detached "room" synagogues springs from the tendency for foreigners from the same district or town to wish to worship together.

e.g. from Faversham & New Port synagogues.

[The objections to this are numerous, the most important being that they remain apart, exclusive, suspicious, & thus take longer to come under the general influence of the Anglo-Jewish Committee & of the great atmosphere of England].

Mr. Blank can give me further information that he can, & when offered to show me in confidence the private minutes both of the Federation, that I might understand the scope & method of its work. [Sir Samuel Montagu is its acting President & his work is to set its policy & support. Lord Rothschild is its Hon. President, but on most matters, ~~lets~~ from politics down to the banking or not banking of a Colonial Synagogue these two are opposed & are rival leaders of the community.].

We ought to see
Mr. Hornstein, the Sec. of the United Synagogue.
Mr. L. J. Cohen, Synagogue General, Hensley Lane, Paris Walks. [Mr. Cohen can give me information on the Board of Shechita, & is Sec. of the Patridge Corporation etc. etc.]

On the work of the Russo-Jewish Committee, I shall see Mr. Blank is also see. it will be necessary to communicate first with Mr. P. Joseph, the President. Mr. Joseph is on ground away, & it will be best to write in a month, when a new Report will be ready. The Committee works very quietly, avoiding all publicity, because of the danger of attracting attention from abroad.

The only local Synagogue there is a member of the United Synagogue is the Stepney one. The only non-Lon. local Synagogues that are admitted to the Federation are the New ington Synagogue & the Synagogue in Soho. The members of the latter are identical in status with those of East London, & will have never been from East London.

Seven members of the Executive Committee shall form a quorum. The Committee shall, after each general election of the Board, continue in office until their successors shall have been appointed.

But in the event of such amendment being negatived, the original motion shall then be put, and if a further amendment be proposed, a like order shall be observed until the motion and amendments be finally disposed of. No amendment shall be to the same purport as an amendment which has been already negatived.

13. NOTICE OF MOTION.—In case of the absence of a member who has given notice of a motion, the same may be moved, at his request, by any other member. The Board may also make additional Bye-Laws by the vote of a like majority.

16. ACTION IN CASES OF EMERGENCY.—The President, or in his absence the Vice-President, shall have power to take action in cases of emergency when it may be impossible to convene the Board or the Executive Committee; such action shall in all cases be reported with the least possible delay to the Executive Committee.

17. DONATIONS.—Donations shall be received either for general purposes or, with the consent of the Board, for any special object.

22. FUNCTIONS OF PRESIDENT.—The President shall take the Chair at all meetings.

He shall be entitled to a second or casting vote upon all occasions where the votes are equal in number.

He shall be empowered to convene meetings of the Board as often as occasion may require. He shall be empowered to convene special meetings of the Board, but it shall be obligatory for him to do so upon receiving a requisition demanding such a procedure, when signed by at least twenty members of the Board.

23. VICE-PRESIDENT.—In the absence of the President, the Vice-President shall take the Chair, and if the Vice-President should not be present, one of the Treasurers shall occupy the chair, and in the absence of any of the above-named Honorary Officers, the meeting shall appoint a Chairman.

24. TREASURERS.—All moneys received on account of the Federation shall forthwith be paid into the hands of the Treasurers who shall sign a receipt for the same.

All payments on account of the Federation (exceeding £1) shall be made by cheque, drawn and signed by the Secretary, and countersigned by one of the Treasurers.

The Treasurers shall invest in the names of the Trustees all such legacies, donations, or sums as the Board shall direct.

The Treasurers shall submit to each meeting of the Board, a financial statement, and they shall lay before the Annual Meeting of the Board a proper balance sheet duly audited with a statement of account and balance.

25. SECRETARY.—The duties of the Secretary shall be to issue notices of all meetings. With every notice there shall be issued an agendum, setting forth all the business to be considered, except in the case of the ordinary meetings of the Executive Committee.

28. ELECTION OF MINISTER.—Should the Board in order to carry out the objects of the Federation, at any period resolve to engage a Dayan or Minister, his duties shall be defined by the Board. Advertisements inviting applications for the post shall be inserted in the Jewish Press, and the Executive Committee shall make a selection from the candidates from whom the final election shall be made by the Board. All candidates shall be certified as to religious fitness and qualifications by the Ecclesiastical Authorities.

29. ACTION IN CASE OF UNFORESEEN CIRCUMSTANCES.—Should any circumstance arise which is not provided for in the foregoing Bye-Laws the Board shall deal with the same to the best of its judgment.

As the Federation has no right to interfere in any way with the internal management of the Federated Synagogues, it is earnestly hoped that the representatives at the Board will use their influence to ensure that the spirit of the foregoing Rules and Bye-Laws be maintained in their respective Synagogues.

Faint, illegible text is visible on the left page of the notebook. The text appears to be a typed document, possibly a letter or a report, but the characters are too light and blurry to be read accurately. Some words like "The" and "and" are faintly discernible.

Faint handwritten notes are visible on the far left edge of the notebook, written in a cursive or semi-cursive hand. The ink is very light and difficult to decipher, but some words like "Dear" and "I" are faintly visible.

Federation of Synagogues -

REPORT.

Considered at the Annual Meeting November 22, 1896

Since the issue of the last Report in December, 1894, marked progress has been made by the Federation of Synagogues from every point of view—indeed during no previous period in its history have such rapid and important strides been made in the general improvement of the Federated Synagogues. Notwithstanding amalgamations among several of the smaller Synagogues represented at the Board, the number sending delegates has steadily increased and is now at the highest point, as the number of members of this Board is the greatest, since the establishment of the Federation. That the advantages to be derived from representation at the Federation are becoming more and more appreciated is self-evident; the fresh applications which are from time to time made for admission into the Federation are another proof of appreciation. It must not for a moment be supposed that such applications are readily acceded to, on the contrary, in any instance where the Synagogue applying is deemed unsuitable, friendly pressure is brought to bear for the purpose of inducing the members to amalgamate with a Synagogue already represented at the Federation.

A notable example of the successful issue of such efforts is seen in the establishment of the Great Garden Street Synagogue. Two Chevras applied for admission into the Federation; neither application was acceded to, but both Chevras were urged to improve their position by uniting with an existing Federated Synagogue. This course was adopted with the result that the Great Garden Street Synagogue, one of the prettiest model Synagogues in the East End, was erected without a public appeal and opened comparatively free from debt.

During the foregoing two years several new Synagogues have been opened under the auspices of the Federation; the Kalisher Synagogue in Great Alic Street, the Eye of Jacob in Artillery Street, Bishopsgate, the Lodz Synagogue removed from rooms in Newcastle Street to a specially constructed place of worship in Goulston Street, and the Warsaw Synagogue, Gun Street admitted conditionally upon its being located in a suitable building. The Federation of Synagogues may with pardonable pride point to the long list of suitable Synagogues which have been erected or reconstructed either by its direct assistance or as a result of the high standard which it has consistently set before its members for a House of Worship. These include the New Road, Old Castle Street, Shaas, Old Montague Street, Spital Square, Dunk Street, Princes Street, Lodz, Davis' Mansions, Greenfield Street, Great Garden Street, Vine Court, Great Alic Street, and Gun St., a notable achievement in the comparatively brief period of nine years.

The West End Talmud Torah Synagogue for the fourth time renewed an application for admission to the Federation. Having failed to obtain facilities for burial rights locally, and the Board having been satisfied that their members were practically all of the artisan class, did not persevere in its former opposition, but admitted the Synagogue, which since has so largely increased its membership, as to render the existing accommodation totally inadequate and to encourage the members to seek a new locale.

The Burial Society in connection with the Federation has considerably augmented its membership; it is not only self-supporting but has now created a Reserve Fund to assure the Shiva allowance.

The Committee of the Burial Society profiting by the experience gained since its establishment is engaged upon the important work of the revision of the laws by which the Society is governed and at no distant date, the Board will be asked to sanction and confirm a new series of Laws and Regulations.

With a view of consolidating the position of the Society, Sir Samuel Montague, Bart, M.P., has kindly transferred three acres of land to the Federation Burial Society adjoining the existing Cemetery, and has contributed a considerable portion of the cost of an alteration carried out by the local authorities, which will considerably improve and indeed perfect the drainage of the Cemetery and the adjoining land.

The Chevr Kadisha of the Federation is likewise a marked success, the active members regularly attend their sacred and responsible duties within the scope of the Society, and have likewise offered to co-operate with the sister Chevr Kadisha.

The Board of the Federation of Synagogues again places on record its high sense of the personal loss sustained by the death of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid, Bart, M.P., who munificently contributed to several of the Building Funds, and of their heartfelt sympathy with the family of the lamented Dr. Grunwald, the Chief Rabbi of Bulgaria, who died whilst on a visit to London, to preach in some of the Federated Synagogues.

The Federation of Synagogues is adequately represented at the Jewish Education Board where the views of its delegates receive careful and sympathetic consideration.

The attention of the Federation having been called to the large number of Jewish children attending Christian instruction at Board Schools, a circular letter in English and Jewish was printed and very extensively circulated, principally in the outlying districts, especially reminding parents of the right afforded them under the Education Act of withdrawing their children from non-Jewish religious instruction in Board Schools. The Rev. Mr. Maccoby (who now preaches in English) in his discourses made reference to this subject from time to time.

The Federation of Synagogues has been in correspondence with the United Synagogue on the subject of the registration of death statistics and has readily acceded to the suggestions of the latter body. The Federation has also gladly assisted the Evening Classes Committee of the Russo-Jewish Committee in extending a knowledge of the existence of the Evening Classes which are of considerable value in enabling our foreign brethren to acquire a knowledge of English.

The Jewish Working Men's Club is arranging special facilities for non-English speaking members who would not only themselves benefit by joining the Institution, but would be a source of strength to the Club.

The history of the proposed Colossal Synagogue, which the United Synagogue proposed establishing in Commercial Road, has been a complete justification of the attitude of the Federation of Synagogues and of the strenuous opposition which the acting President consistently offered to the project. From the outset the community at large was not favourable to the establishment of a colossal Synagogue, as it would have increased the existing congestion and caused serious injury to the many newly-erected model Synagogues, and it must be a source of gratification to the members of the Federation that the Council of the United Synagogue has at length practically adopted a similar view and that the idea of a colossal Synagogue may now safely be considered to have been generally condemned.

Of the ultimate fate of the East End Scheme proper, it is difficult to venture a forecast. The details of the proposition have been discussed and rediscussed, modelled and remodelled, for five years without apparently being any nearer a satisfactory solution. The potentialities of the project for the improvement of the condition of Jewish life in the East End are enormous and cannot possibly be over-rated. It is therefore to be hoped such a scheme will eventually be accepted and be a real force in raising the level, physical and social, of Jewish life in East London.

In conclusion the Board beg to remind the members of the Federated Synagogues, that great as is the work which has already been achieved, more remains to be done. When the Federation of Synagogues was called into existence, the model Synagogue was then the exception but is now general. Until every Federated Synagogue is in every respect irreproachable the members should not rest satisfied. To the smaller and weaker Chevras the history of the Federation should serve as a lesson and an encouragement, prompting their members to put forward their utmost efforts to reconstruct their Synagogues.

The Federation of Synagogues will continue to carefully watch over the interests of its members, who on their part must unstintedly support those efforts. Given these conditions, and the future success and welfare of the Federation are assured.

Reprt of interview w ith the Rev. J.F. Stern, Minister of the Jewish Synagogue, Stepney Causeway. (E.A.) May 23.9

Mr. Stern is one of the veunger and more progreesive of the London Jewish ministers, and the report will show his attitude towards the party of reform. It will also show what reform means.

The Stepney Synagogue is the only one in the Tower Ham lats belonging to the United Synagogue. The people attendin it are slightly better off than those going to the Chevras, they can afford to pay a fair sum annually to the support of their place of worship, but they are mainly working-clas Mr. Stern estimates the propoertion of those who are foreign bern at 30 %.

At the beginning of the intèrview I heard a great deal about the character of the services, which are somewhat mo free thn the ordinary run of East End synagogues, and al- though it began to get rather dull and to lead me to think that the reforming mind was as much wedded to new detail as the reactionary mind is to old, ~~but~~ it helped to bring out the objects of the reforms introduced or desired, and the position of the Chief Rabbi and the leaders of the com- munity in face of the strict Judaism of the foreign elemant. At the death of the late Chief Rabbi there was a great clamur for reform, and things were settled by diplomacy an compromise. There is a constant danger if things go too far

of a secession from the authority of the Chief Rabbi of the foreign, and it appears that this would be regretted by all.
In him rests the greatest and most salutary power; he focuses Judaism, and is the lever by which most things internal turn. His own mind is not approachable on the vexed questio of procedure, "and perhaps this is as well", but it is clear that his position is a difficult one and that he has to exercise all his powers of caution and diplomacy to avoid a rupture. The actual questions at issue do not appear to have any intrinsic importance. Mixed choirs is one of them that has exercised the Jewish mind at Stepney a good deal, and this synagogue, having followed the examples of Hampstead and Hammersmith and introduced this practice of the mixed choir, a secession has followed, and a new "Orthodox Stepney Synagogue" has been opened at the other end of Stepney Green.

The most important questions seem however to be connected with the introduction of more English and less Hebrew in the services, and other classes of questions turn up as to the manner and literalness with which the Rabbinical Law has to be observed. For instance, there is the one forbidding the carrying of burdens on the Sabbath. This is interpreted by the strict foreign Jew with the utmost severity, and the fear of them would make it impossible for the Chief to visit East London on a dripping Sabbath to carry an umbrella. Now Mr. Stern would defy the foreign prejudice, and carry an umbrella if he needed one, but he would draw the line at a walking-stick, for he feels that the critic would be able to say and to say truly that he is a young man with no need of support, and thus no utilitarian reason could be found for breaking the law. Another instance, illustrating the strictness of the foreign mind, the triviality of the points on which difficulties may arise, and the position of the "Chief" arose out of a notice issued by Mr. Stern for a special Sabbath service of the children who had been sent away by the C.C.H.F. The Chief was to preach, and the children, books being short, were asked to bring with them both their cards of admission to the synagogue and a prayer-book. Promptly the foreigners were indignant and some of them went to the Chief to complain of the request. He resorted to diplomacy, told them that he had not seen the card itself, and it was arranged that the service in succeeding years should be held on a Sunday. But it perhaps significant that Dr. Adler made no direct communication to Mr. Stern on the matter. He probably girds inwardly at the excessive formalism of his co-religionists, who are however, too numerous, too ignorant, too prejudiced and too important to be reasonably or easily dealt with.

A kind of new patriotism grows apace among ~~xx~~ the Jews who find themselves in this country, and Mr. Stern mentioned having seen in the room of a foreigner quite recently the strange association of the portraits of the Queen, Mr. Gladstone, and a well-known Russian Rabbi on the walls. But the more liberal spirit takes long to permeate the synagogues and Mr. Stern mentioned as illustrating the greater tolerance of his own congregation that on the preceding Sabbath he had preached on Mr. Gladstone's death -- speaking as an Englishman to Englishmen. They had accepted it as a natural thing for him to have done. But the feeling in a Chevra would not have been the same. There they would have said: who is this William Ewart Gladstone? he is not one of us; why should he be preached upon and praised in our synagogue? why should we go to him for lessons in life?

In some ways Mr. Stern would go much farther than he dare, or than by his public position and ministerial obligations he feels himself at liberty to move. He breaks the literal observance of the Din (The Law) every day of his life but he too has to beware of offending the foreigner. Some of the points he mentioned were full of interest, and he like the Chief Rabbi himself has to put up with much that he would like to clear out of the road. Thus, if he could he would not wade through the whole of the first five books of the Bible every year in 52 long doses; he would use English more not only in reading but also in the prayers. For he doubts whether many of those who come have sufficient knowledge of Hebrew to follow intelligently the old Hebrew diction. And in matter of...

In matters of opinion too he has his difficulties, and although some he can "spiritualize away", there are others that remain as more obstinate stumbling-blocks. Among these he referred to the movement called Zionism, and to the prayers which he has to read for the restitution of sacrifices in the Holy places. He apparently has no desire to return to Jerusalem, and he thinks that the re-institution of the sacrifices of the Mosaic Law would be barbarous. But he is helpless in such a matter as this. (At the Reformed Synagog the prayers for the restitution are omitted).

Apart from such changes as would free him from the incubus of uttering discredited opinions, the main object of all the changes that he would like to introduce is to keep up the interest of the young English bred Jews in their religion and in their synagogues. He feels that it is impossible to hold them to the old procedure after they have been brought up in the freer atmosphere of England and of English schools. To insist upon too rigid an orthodoxy in these days would be to alienate ~~xxxx~~ the rising generation. Nearly all his proposals are he said made on aesthetic grounds, but he clearly used the word in a more than usually comprehensive sense. Asked what he feared if such steps as he advocated were not taken, he said it was indifferentism, not Christianity. Asked what he would do if he had a free hand, he said that no step which he advocated would have the least effect of weakening its hold upon the class who are perhaps his special care of their ancestral faith. He would on the other hand do everything to maintain the religious integrity of their people. He advocated nothing that was calculated to break down these barriers or to do away with the feeling of separateness. "Did he want to Anglicise the community as far as possible?" Emphatically, yes; they all did -- all the leaders, that is. "Did he want to merge the Jewish in the English community?" Not a bit of it; the Jews are and must remain the chosen people: this was ~~was~~ accepted, welcomed; it was a necessary part of their historic Faith. On this all Jews, reformed and orthodox, are at one. No difference on such a point can be traced in the opinions of a reforming Jew like the late Sir Julian Goldsmid, or a more conservative Jew like Mocatta. They are all Jews first, and there is a tendency at the present time for the whole community to stand solid, and for the different sections to draw together in spite of differences in ways of thinking and in ritual. In this movement for concentration the Chief Rabbi is the "lever".

I asked if the young were being held to the synagogues, and he said that they were in his own case. He endeavours in many ways to make the Synagogue a social centre -- has a "communal League", a society for both sexes with lectures etc. of which I had previously heard a good deal and known to be successful; social evenings etc.

He has a Reader to help; is well off for buildings (the synagogue holds 340 men and 200 women); and they have many social agencies as stated. There are 330 seat-holders.

A good deal of proselytizing goes on, undertaken by the L.C.M. and by some churches, but with, he thinks, little result.

Drink is not a great difficulty, and social character is on the whole good. The immoral element is extremely ~~small~~ small. But many of them, especially the foreigners, have a low conception of things from a sanitary point of view. "The Jewish nose is supposed to be particularly well-developed, but it appears to be blunted in a way". The crowding is often excessive. If you compare an English and a Jewish peer family, it would, he thought ^{be found} that the latter would be found in the worst condition sanitarily. But this had nothing to do with their religion, which, in fact, had many sanitary rules as to the washing of hands etc. that tended to ensure decent conditions. The great explanation of the lower standard of the Jew, was the evil associations of a continental upbringing, coupled with the exigencies of a difficult economic position.

The Stepney Synagogue is the only United Synagogue at which people can be married for 10/6, and therefore, since marriage in one of these places may secure certain advantages in the way of making people eligible for some Jewish charities, etc. most of the East End marriages are celebrated in Stepney Green. There are between 5 and 600 a year, and the average age is for males, 24, and for females, 21 $\frac{3}{4}$. In cases of mixed marriages, he generally finds that the non-Jew becomes a Jew, man or woman, and he has often had cases when a marriage has originally taken place in a registry office, of the man having afterwards gone through the necessary instruction and observed the Abrahamic Covenant—been circumcised. Except in such cases there is no attempt to win over a non-Jew. The past must leave the race apart: its position is fixed by its historic destiny. But although it is and must remain the chosen people, they do hope for a greater approximation of belief between Jew and Christian.

Mr. Stern is a man of about 35, rather dapper, keen in manner, pale-faced, with a dark complexion and foreign look. He was probably born in this country, however, and the only accent discernible is that of a race and not of a country. He is married, ~~and~~ although thought a little bit too much of an innovator by some, he is ~~thought highly of~~ ^{much respected}, and his energy and devotion are very great. On the whole he is a good specimen of the ~~English~~ Jew, full of his religion and filled with loyal English sympathies.

Note. Mr. Stern spoke of the great increase of the Jews in Stepney, many of the new blocks in his neighbourhood being largely tenanted by them. His schools are full. Many of the people in the district have moved from Whitechapel, where "their places have been taken by others". But as to where these others have come from he did not express an opinion.
