WHAT MR. FERRIE MEANT TO SAY ON RADIO

"My Mates Are Slaves Of the Machine"

"I found that I was crippled in my talk, and I took the only way out I could

B.B.C. to follow Sir Herbert Austin, who layout of the shop. broadcast last week in the same series, The National Character.

Mr. Ferrie was introduced by the announcer to give a short talk on Modern History and National Character.

Here are the main points in the speech that he intended to deliver. Those passages that the B.B.C. told him he must omit are in italics.

I'd like to say at once that you will find that Sir Herbert Austin and I don't gree—that wasn't to be expected. Anyit will be all the more interesting you who are listening Sir Herbert Austin contrasted workingass life now and 50 years ago, and that contrast made him draw a very cheerful picture of working-class life to-day-it was such a cheerful picture that I for one couldn't recognise it.

He said that modern factory conditions have improved the health of the worker in every branch of industry.

He said that the worker could now obtain credit (which seemed to mean to him that his bank balance was sound)

He said that many workers owned their own houses, bought furniture on the hire purchase system, had deposits in municipal banks, and-had developed a growing sense of thrift.

BEAUTIFUL PICTURE

I don't want to waste my time detroying this beautiful picture of workng-class life. Enough to say as regards nealth to-day and fifty years ago that 68 per cent. of recruits to His Majesty's Army were rejected last year on grounds of physical unfitness. So much for improved health!

Thrift! Let Sir Hebrert Austin tell this yarn to a chap I know who by thrift in better days bought a house. He was thrown out of work because of the introduction of new machinery.

I won't repeat what he said about thrift when the Means Test investigator called upon him!

Sir Herbert in his closing sentences said, if I remember rightly, "mechanisa-tion is now relieving the brain of the old ediums and giving it a new stimulus.' And then he said something about slaves of to-day being made of metal vhile the mind of man directs."

I'd like to take you on a trip through a modern plant, then you'd be able to see for yourselves whether the slaves are made of metal or not.

I work on a conveyor belt under the Mr. Ferrie lives at Islington, N., and Bedaux system. In our factory we manuis employed by a car body building firm a long line of travelling bodies swoop-He had been specially chosen by the ing and dipping in accordance with the

> On the belts is the machine which is being made. Now it's on the ground Now it rises on the conveyor over our heads to come down again to earth when next required. In this way ground space is saved.

But it means that we have to chase our ever-moving job, and as the speed of the conveyor increases so does the hardness of our work, and I'd like to remind you too that the speed of the belt very short notice.

In one factory where I worked there was an increase of speed from 3 feet per minute to 13 feet per minute. There was no increase in our pay.

A TYRANT

In my opinion, the conveyor belt has become a tyrant.

The machine enslaves us. It compels us to do its bidding. We have to accept its pace and follow its commands. The conveyor belt is our

If the management in the factory decide to increase speed by 10 per cent., a thousand hands work 10 per cent.

I wish you could see the thing at work. When the belt is on the move nothing in the world exists for us except the line of chassis relentlessly bearing down on us. We often work with sweat pouring The out of us.

Some men are underneath on their backs; others are on little parts propelling themselves along by their heels all day long; others scramble about in order to keep the line up to production standard.

I do know, from experience, that high speed affects the whole nervous system.

I believe that the cause of the trouble is not the machines but the private ownership of these machines, and in saving so I am only expressing a conviction that is rapidly growing among so-called training centres. my workmates.

There's another thing I'd like to say about work under the machine. In the find themselves outside the factory and old days an employee who possessed subject to the "tender mercies" of the some particular skill was often retained Means Test inquisition, and P.A.C.

immediate work for him to do.

There's none of that nowadays—or, at least, very little of it.

Regular work means that you can plan out how to use your wages to the best advantage. The average weekly earnings in the motor industry for 1933 was about 57s. 6d. per week. If you are certain of that sum you can lay your plans and spend it to the best advantage. But 57s. 6d. isn't very much.

What can a man with a family do on it? How much can he save for the black days of unemployment? I asked one of my friends to tell me how he spent his money. Perhaps you'd like to hear it.

The biggest item is, of course, rent -16s. a week. That's a scandal.

The next biggest item is fares. The next biggest item is food out,

Then there's insurance, 2s.; trade union membership, 1s. 6d.; clothes for Each worker has to finish his himself and his family, about 3s. a week;

Thousands Living in Basements

Is it any wonder, then, that the workers are becoming increasingly deterless set they can listen quite often to mined to prevent any further encroaching good musical programmes and other ment upon their living standards?

Many of my mates say, and justly, "We are not responsible for the economic chaos which exists. We do not own or control the means of production."

Am I and my mates blind to the fact that while workers go short of food, clothing, good houses, and other necessaries, food is burned, thrown into the sea, or used as fuel, and manure?

Do you not think that such cases as

Let's talk about our leisure. The can be regulated by the supervisor at by his employer even if there wasn't period between knocking off work and getting to work the next morning is is commonly called "leisure." What hypocrisy! Leisure implies facilities to enjoy oneself and relax.

Of course, someone might make the bright suggestion that as "every working-man's home is his castle," why not stay at home. Most of them do, not because they choose to, but because they have no other alternative. They can't afford to go anywhere else.

Take the homes of the workers in Islington, where I live. Overcrowding is appalling

There are 15,359 families living in one-roomed tenements and 552 of these families live five or more to a room. There are 26,805 families living in tworoomed tenements.

LIVING IN BASEMENTS

In London alone there at least 100,000 workers living in 30,000 basement dwellings, which are in such a condition that they stand as a disgusting monument to an economic system based on the profit

In Islington there are 1,460 basement dwellings which come strictly within the meaning of the termdwellings at or below street level-but there are at least 13,600 which are practically in the same category.

Those workers who still manage to retain a job have witnessed the repeated few bob to spend. What is open to them? They can drop round to the corner

Or they can go to the cinema and see films and amuse themselves by watching how the upper classes are supposed to solve problems which arise from their falling in love with each other's wives moment in a job, they may at any time and husbands, and in which, incidentally, workers are usually depicted as half-wits which denies us the opportunity to dehaving no other desire than to serve their so-called betters.

About religion! The deevlopment of our machine age has killed the hell-fire and brimstone idea. Just as our boss has become impersonal, so has religion. I have described my factory. In the factory we live in a very real world. Levers, buttons, belts, power.

Should anything go wrong with the machinery the worker or the foreman would not dream of looking for some supernatural cause. He would examine the machinery.

Can you wonder, then, that the modern worker looks at life generally in the same way? Miracles don't happen in the workshop, and matterof-fact explanations can be found for most evils.

ASKED TO SACRIFICE

What does all this boil down to?

We, as workers, are being continually asked to sacrifice in the interests of the "nation," but as one eminent Tory statesman of the last century pointed out: there are two nations, the rich and the poor.

My workmates see that "equal sacri-"the maintenance of British fice ' prestige" and the perpetual pointing to the corner which we are forever supposed to be turning means for us harder work for less wages, the prospect of unemployment, starvation and degrada-

CHILDHOOD HORROR REVEALED

GIRL'S APPEAL AFTER THEFT

GIRL who, as a child, saw her father riddled with bullets by masked men, appealed in the Court of Appeal against a sentence of six months' imprisonment for stealing a handbag.

The girl, Doris Hunt, had been sentenced at London Sessions. The court now bound her over in £20 to be of good behaviour for 12 months, and ordered her to undertake to obey and stay with her mother.

It was stated that in 1921 her father was serving in Ireland with the "Black and Tans," and, one evening, when he was dining at a hotel with his wife and daughter and some friends, six masked men burst into the room and riddled him with bullets.

A bullet grazed one of Miss Hunt's legs. She received a terrible shock, from which she never had recovered, and her intelligence now was that of a girl of eleven.

Mr. J. D. Cassels (for the girl) said her mental history and condition were not before the Court when she was sentenced. Had that been known a different course would probably have

Mr. Cassels added that Miss Hunt received some £1,500 as compensation for the loss of her father.

Dr. W. R. C. Watson, formerly a medical officer of prisons, said her mental age did not exceed 12, and in some particulars fell to nine.

Thus the proportion of male clerks under S5 years of age is lapt cent. in Transport.

The wide differences exhibited by the different groups of employment in respect both of the proportions of women and of juveniles deprive any "over-all" comparison of average salaries by industrial groups of much of its significance. The only valid basis for such a comparison is between the rates earned by clerks of the same sex and age-groups. The number of clerks included in the sample however is insufficient to justify a minute subdivision both by industry and age as well as by sex. Consequently in the above table only two age-groups (i.e. S5 and over and under S5) have been given separately.

It will be seen that for adult men over 25 the Insurance and Banking group shows the highest average salaries (105s a week) closely followed by Fublic Services (100s), Transport (90s) and Industry and Commerce (85s). In the everage weekly rates in the Fublic Services is 70s, followed by the Banking and Insurance group (65s), Transport (60s) and Industry and Insurance group (65s), Transport (60s) and Industry and Services is 70s, followed by the Banking and Commerce (55s). It is interesting to note that for all the groups except Insurance and Banking the average rates for men groups except Insurance and Banking to note that for all the groups except Insurance and Banking to note that for all the within the same age limit.

(II) General Conclusions.

The average money income of a male adult clerk in London as disclosed by the above analysis is appreciably higher than number of skilled manual occupations show an average in the neighbourhood of [80s] for adult workmen, whereas the average for the for the male clerks aged 25 and upwards is 90s.

The combined result of the depression of trade in diminishing the power of industry to absorb and employ clerical labour, and of the progress of mechanisation in decreasing the total number of clerical workers required and at the same time increasing the proportion borne by the lower paid jobs to higher posts has been to make the lot of the elderly or middle aged clerk who once loses his situation a pitiable one, unless he has earning children or relatives by whom he can be supported. This is especially the case with clerks above the limit of salary for unemployment insurance. Some of them try for other jobs, whom is also an earning to salary for a specially sale of goods on commission, but the results are often disheartening.

The effect of stopping recruitment of boys from secondary schools has been to some extent mitigated by staying an additional year at school.

It remains to be seen how far the revival of trade which began. It is however safe to say that nothing is likely tendencies which have been manifested since the acute depression began.
