

International Migrants Day 2017

On United Nations International Migrants Day 2017, Oxford Research Group (ORG) highlights its extensive body of work on the causes and consequences of displacement and migration.

The world is experiencing an unprecedented era of migration, with tens of millions of people moving to new cities, countries and continents every year.

Many are pursuing opportunities to escape poverty and economic marginalisation. Millions more are fleeing violence and persecution.

Over the past decade, ORG has examined the drivers behind this complex phenomenon and its implications for global security. Our most recent briefings include:

Migration and the European Political Environment

Climate Change, Migration and Security

Jungle Justice: European Migration Policy Seen from the South

The Border Security Paradox

The Sustainable Security blog's microproject, Migration and Sustainable Security, also attends to this issue. It brings in a range of expert international perspectives. Recent articles include:

Engendering Climate Change-Induced Migration

Dance of the Giants: Asia's Indigenous Peoples Between India and China

The Eritrean Refugee Crisis and the role of the International Community

Climate Change - Migration - Conflict. What's the Connection?

Nomadism, Land Disputes and Security

The Responsibility to Protect and the Refugee Crisis

Europe's Borders, Refugees and the Islamic State

Climate Refugees: Human Insecurity in a Warming World

ORG is an independent think-tank. As a registered charity, it depends on donations from its supporters to transform conflicts, reduce violence and promote global cooperation.

Support Us

Preferences | Unsubscribe