The restrained "and dignified bearing of the crowds that throng the river-"side Park of Culture and Rest strikes one at once. About Five-Year Plan.

".... The youngest generation of the population "seem still to put some faith in it; by the rest (excluding "those speaking from interest) it is regarded at least "sceptically, more often as a bad joke. I have listeneddto "a certain number of foreign experts; they are either re-"served or derisive. Two visited me yesterday; the first "complained that he had been engaged for three weeks to do a "three days' job - and had not yet started after a week; "the second that his services had been sought at a largey "salary as (adviser', and that after six weeks The man in the street knows "only that after nearly two years of the plan the few manu-"factured articles he could obtain at its outset are now "missing.....

I was here in 1917 at the outbreak of the revolution, "and find a certain similarity between the period immediately "preceding it and conditions ruling at the moment. "each came the people have been forced to bear an intolerable "burden in order to achieve an object for which they have "neither understanding nor sympathy - in 1917 the war, at present the implementation of Communist dogma. "are great differences, and I do not want to exaggerate the The revolution of 1917 started with small food "parallel. "riots; when the discontent of the population reached that "point they found at once professional politicians to lead "them, first Liberal, then Socialist, and finally Bolshevik; "it is difficult to see what leaders they could find at the "present day.

"The common people are now surprisingly open in their "speech; in any queue or other gathering the most vigorous "invective against the present regime may be heard. This "phenomenon is quite recent; it was also characteristic "of the last months of the Empire......

From another unnamed official in Moscow -

"....Queuesaare larger and more frequent. In some "cases, five or six times more is asked for an article "in the free market as compared with co-operatives, but to "'openty' demand 1,000 per cent, more would be dangerous "to the vender. In co-operative stores a table of prices "is displayed, showing what prices the various categories "of cardholders have to pay and the quantities they may Those who do not possess cards have to pay "top prices for what is left over..... "The shortage of supplies is not confined to Moscow "and Leningrad, but is even more acute in other parts of "the country. In some areas it is leading to an exodus " of workers from important areas, e.g., Don coalfields, "Dnieperstrey hydro-electric works. Whenever there is a "falling-off in putput in an industry or enterprise, one of "the stock reasons given is insufficient supply of food "and manufactured goods, especially the latter..... "The younger generation are all enthusiastic and firm "believers, as they don't know any other conditions, and "are convinced that they are 'leading the world' in "everything. Any older person holding any kind of "position will never criticise the plan adversely. If "he does, it is probably with the object of getting you to "talk. The 'outcasts' may complain, but they don't count. "Whether this present Five-Year Plan goes through as per "estimates or not will not make much difference. "country will be in just as big a muddle as they are now "for many five years to come until the population them-"selves are capable and fit to think things out and decide "what the best methods are to cope with difficulties and the "huge losses they are making now "Foreign experts who have had experience in Russia "before know what to expect and are not surprised. "that have not been here before are in some cases enthusias-"tic for the first three months and disgusted after six "months. After six months they are in most cases prepared "to sign on again, but on considerably better terms for +bemselves.....

Appreciation of Ramsay Macdonald, (106 A by Lord d'Abernon. Vol. III. "....The first Labour Foreign Secretary was in appearance p.29 more distinguished than most of his predecessors in office; in intelligence and personality, he had none of the defi-ciencies anticipated. A long, fore-and-aft, finely modelled head, deep-set eyes, well-cut features; a tired, reflective air, suggestive of an exhausted aristocratic strain; no aggressiveness, no stridency, but in their place disillusionment, calm and resignation. In discussion, marked subtlety and some slyness; profound knowledge of the arts of debate; an aversion to the obvious and a rare preoccupation about the secondary effects of any given action - the mind attaching more weight to remoter than to immediate consequences. "Somewhat unsimple and indirect - always calculating several moves ahead - a system which enables him to escape the danger of receiving an immediate checkmate, but which has also led to missed opportunities for a decisive stroke. "With so long an experience of Trade Union Conferences abroad, he was more conversant with foreign men and foreign methods than most English Ministers..... "Ramsay's skill in negotiation proceeded largely from his power of appreciating the internal difficulties of the other side. Accustomed through life to be supported by colleagues and companions, who were not averse to replacing him, and many of whom considered their claims as at least equal to his own, he recognised the necessity, in the spokesmen of either side, for extreme caution and for a vigilant eye on the benches behind. He therefore abstained from asking the impossible, and presented his demands in the form least likely to cause his opponent trouble at home. "In another sphere Ramsay belied anticipation. p.30. His knowledge of art, his interest in aesthetics, his capacity for discoursing intelligently on past masterpieces and modern developments - was far above the level of the average statesman. The National Art Collections had no better friend - no more intelligent supporter. "The artistic and cultural bias, which Ramsay Mac-Donald took pleasure in proclaiming, completed the disillusionment of those who had expected Labour to provide Ministers with rough and horny hands. The first Labour Premier might be credited with a more delicate sensibility and a finer touch than certain of his Whig and Tory predecessors. And in administration there were neither the anticipated defects of tact nor the anticipated elements of rough-hewn strength. He succeeded Curzon, and was popular both with the Foreign Office Staff and with Foreign Representatives at the Court of St. James's .. ".... As the first British Premier to visit the States p.32 in an official capacity Ramsay MacDonald not only dis-charged the duty of his high office with exceptional ability but won favour by his dignity and nebulous idealism..... "....The new Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, makes an impression exactly opposite to that of a proletarian p.54 ruler. Nothing of force and vigour of the people - nothing muscular - but artistry and a certain languidness suggesting over-fatigue "....Stresemann is genuinely impressed by Ramsay MacDonald, p.98. especially by his power of silence and the absence of formality with which he has directed the proceedings of the London Conference..... "....Curzon was very anxious to hear what I thought of Ramsay MacDonald, and was, I thought, slightly disappointed p.102. when I said he was extraordinarily intelligent, rather sly, and had a marked rapidity of judgment in foreign affairs" "....The Prime Minister was dignified and impressive. He is, perhaps, somewhat in love with himself, and too much inclined towards self-pity, but the performance, especially as he was suffering from toothache - was remarkable..." p.104. remarkable....

..... I have read with much interest your account of what you believe, perhaps it wants supplementing by a paper 'What I don't Believe'. You separate science from emotional faith, probably because you are not a scientist. The really great scientist is always a poet - a man of creative imagination - and therefore essentially emotional. He knows that he can never get to the bottom of things, and is only describing them as he feels them. No scientific theory is really true to the phenomena it attempts to describe, it is only an imaginative way of expressing the little one grasps of Nature. It is really something which sati fies the emotion as well as the reason, and as such it is religious in its pursuit of the unobtainable and in the practice which follows on what is exaggeratedly termed "knowledge". Hence I cannot agree to your distinction between science and religion; if you mean by prayer a personal examination which leadsyou to clearer notions of your relation to life around you, well and good. But if it leads you to link yourself to "an all prevailing spiritual force', you have plunged yourself into a sea of theological dogma, too storm driven for me to desire to swim after you!....

Government by Fabians.

MANY Labour members are talking about the dominance in the Government of that very academic body, the Fabian Society.

I find that many people believed that this organisation, through which many intellectuals entered the Socialist movement, had ceased to exist.

But it goes on with a membership, small labut influential—some 5000.

Yet practically every recent appointment, either to high or low office, in the Labour administration has been made from the membership of the society, the latest examples of which are the new Air Minister re Lord Amulree, and the new Solicitor-general, Sir Stafford Cripps.

Civil Servants.

I am told that at least 90 per cent. of the members of the Government are on the rolls of the society, and that, contrary to regulations, so are a good many highly placed Civil Servants.

The Civil Servants would probably defend themselves by saying the society is more intellectual than political.

This ascendancy is, of course, due to the all-powerful influence of Lord Passfield and his wife, Mrs. Sidney Webb, with whom the Fabian Society has been the passion of their lives.
