Free Trade – YES!

Research shows the average British household could be £933 per year better off if Britain left the European Union.

Imagine how the UK leaving the European Union would help you and your family...

Cost of living reduced!

Cost of Living

Being part of the European Union means that the food bill for the average family is £400 more per year; North Sea cod stocks have fallen by over a third due to the European Union's disastrous Common Fisheries Policy; Regulations passed by the European Union have reduced your choice over what you can buy and have increased the costs of your shopping by nearly £550 per year.

Energy

Big businesses have lobbied the European Union for their own benefit, pushing up your energy bills. These energy costs cannot be repealed unless we leave the European Union, with a potential saving from cutting current EU energy directives being £86.5bn to £93.2bn.

Energy prices reduced!

Political Union – NO!

More care and attention to the NHS!

NHS

The NHS deserves the very best! Inside the European Union, regulations reduce the ability for trained professionals to work. Inside the European Union, we send £350 million per week to Brussels, money that could be spent on our most precious public service. Outside the European Union, we can improve quality of care, reduce health tourism and ensure the NHS is not privatised under TTIP.

Police

Policing services are under threat and the security of our local communities is being compromised. The cuts in police numbers and further planned cuts to police budgets could leave the public unprotected against serious crimes. Outside the European Union, the Government could use the money we pay every year to the European Union for membership for investment in policing.

More investment in policing!
