"Of course it is impossible when reading such a childrens book as "Pansies Flour-Bin" to avoid thinking of the great prototype of such works. The best praise that we can give to this capital little romance is to say that it is really worthy to be classed with "Alice", and in some respects is better adapted to juvenile comprehension. The adventures in "Skyland" and with that obnoxious, animated key are extremely droll, and the whole is told with that gravity of serious "make-believe" so dear to all real children."
