Dear Mrs. Roberts,

There were several things I thought of afterwards that I should have liked to talk over with you, and I also forgot two practical points.

1. I did not write which address you had for my brother-in-law, Barton Allworthy. Probably it was that of the Lincolnshire parish which he has left. If you think of writing to ask him about his books, his present address is -
12 Station Road, Cambridge.

2. I also meant to say what a great pleasure it would be if sometime when you are in London you could pay a visit to my College. The quick trains take little more than $\frac{1}{2}$ hour from Waterloo, the slow ones about an hour. Perhaps you would come for a night some time, and meet and talk to some of the more thoughtful C. of E. students? *

Our talk yesterday was, to me, interesting and helpful. I am very grateful to you for having made it possible, & very glad to have met you.

Yours very sincerely

Margaret E. J. Taylor
