Dear Pippa

I am glad the quarterly concert was such milk & honey - its a comfort to have something peaceful in the suffrage world! I see from a belated C.C. that has just reached me that Jim Dimock has taken up arms against Mr. Harley - no milk & honey about that I fancy.
I write now to ask you to stay on here after Bank Holiday.

You need not answer.

1-20

I expect you on Aug. 1. by the train from Paddington, unless that post card arrives with a different date or train. I expect you to stay until Tuesday the 4th, but I should like you to stay on after that.

You will be amused to hear that my hair has come off again.
Vanessa came last weekend, & she &

Olivia cut it off one morning.
It is cut straight across the forehead square at the sides, & I look much like an overgrown china doll.

There are so many mirrors in this house that I see myself continually, but I do not know whether it is an improvement or not.

Olivia has rashly undertaken to speak at a Friends meeting in Reading, & the horror that this causes is very great - not to the Friends as yet, but to him, & incidentally to me. He is greatly discouraged because his last effort at Willesden did not reach the press - or rather with accuracy. I think he might have been encouraged if it had.

I must now turn my attention to the Pottowatomie massacres. I killed five men in my last chapter, shall lynch two in this - blood gurgles all on my fountain pen

Yours
Ray
