Dear Mrs. Fawcett,

I just came to thank you for your kind note to my wife. I should not have felt any right to be surprised, if you had expressed some sense of being deserted at a point. It is a relief to me to find that it is not so. When Mr. Gladstone said perit. blank, as he did while Sir J. North was speaking, that he should drop the title, I do not see how it was possible for a man of spirit like to justify an attitude of more attention. Perhaps Mr.

Glastone would not have been as good as his word. But if we were sufficiently afraid of his risk to make us obtain the same amount of objection done us to oppose the amendment.

Yours sincerely,

W. L. G.
