The Organization of Angolan Women (O. M. A.), the women's arm of the M. P. L. A., has developed into a strong, growing women's organization with a definite place in the Angolan struggle for liberation. O. M. A. militants know that without the liberation of women there can be no revolution, and equally that the liberation of women cannot come without the victory of the revolution they are helping to build.

"My direct involvement in combat made me more than ever convinced that women can in fact do many things. . . . I took part as an M. P. L. A. militant and as an O. M. A. militant who feels the domination of colonialism as well as men's domination over women. . . ."

If I could I surely would Stand like our militant sisters stood,
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.

God gave men the rainbow sign,
 She said no more fire but the women next time.
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.

Bosses gonna wonder where to run,
 Cos the land'll be the people's when the women are done.
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.

One of these nights about twelve o'clock,
 This old world's going to reel and rock.
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.

Sister, Sister don't be afraid,
 The women united will come to your aid.
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.

CHORUS:
 Oh Sisters don't you weep, don't you moan,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep, don't you mean,
 Women's Army is marching,
 Oh Sisters don't you weep.
