Dear Mr Northcroft,

Please forgive me for not-replying before: — I have been in London doing urgent work and letters had to be neglected. I return there tomorrow, but shall be back here on Thursday or Friday when I shall be delighted to look through the MSS of which you speak.

I suppose it is difficult when writing an autobiography not to give certain wrong impressions. Just to quote one I remember:— my mother returning to her mother's home. She went back there before I was born,

while my father was still alive. I know

this is a trifling incident, but it is a pity for such things to be incorrect.

I am sorry to give you so much trouble.

Yours sincerely,
Lama Knight
