Dear Lady Emmott

I received your letter of May 21st, on the Contributory Pensions Bill, but was not able to be in the House of Lords when it was read a second time on Tuesday. I see that the case put forward by the Society for Womens' Service was forcibly presented, and no doubt it will be brought up again when the House goes into Committee on the appeal. But I am afraid that I shall again be unable to attend the House on that day.

Yours very sincerely

Clive

The Lady Emmott.
