August 7.

Dear Mr Foxcett -

One of the Secretaries of Parliament re sent me yesterday the program Committee to which my name was attached, find the brief - it there appeared to me to be a good deal of awkwardness in the words & repetition, weakly - the same - in the latter paragraphs ending may be drawn up in a way. I took it for found that Becker was one of the best, and drafted it & I took on my self to make such changes & improvements & returned it says - I'd sign it as altered, but not my own paper in the matter of style (which I confess to being out!) I'd not permit me to place my name first after the paragraphs in their actual state -

I am worried this morning to take back in Mrs. Moore's letter & to say that she says the circular was drawn up by L. & W. C. M. Lane. I'm quite sure, dear W. Powell think me the most impertinent of women; I'm sure of it seems appropriate. I feel really ashamed of myself - I think however that if you who write always with such admirable cleanness, really drafted this paper, - you never did so roughly in MS, I had not expected it - proof - do I not also think that the last whole sentence is somewhat redundant - I never waters how much more open?

If you will look over it again & send it to me as you finally decide, - I will gladly sign it -

I wrote last week at Mr.

Scatcherd's request to Sir

Sturges Northcote to say in to introduce our subject topic in his speech at the Conservative Meeting. He mentioned it before by Civility but I can see he has no hand in the matter - says "the subject requires careful handling" - but if he finds a "good opportunity" he will say in "few words to me to keep our friends"

By much favor me

There is chance now - as for my way never to come

I wrote to Mr. Drummond as I promised and she was not to send

Ever dear Mr Devereux

Very sincerely
