Dear Madam

Though I am quite in sympathy with the wish of women to enter the Ministry of the various Churches which still exclude them, I don't like to intrude my opinion as an outsider on a matter which is largely one of Church-government.

I no longer count myself a churchman; and I think it is only those who are, who have any locus standi in a controversy of this character. The only Christian body with which I feel that I have any affinity (the Quakers) recognizes the equality of women in the ministry.

Yours faithfully
Lawrence Housman
