Dear Mr. Fawcett

As you & I returned from South Devon last night. We were in such highly laudable places. But I was afraid to leave letters unprovided, so I only got from letters of 24. & the book from Miss Curry last night.

I will read & provide to Miss Curry in a day or two.

Gene also only got letters from London last night. When he has been here a Irish fishery matters all week.

He gives a very flourishing account of the self meeting where he only arrived in time to hear four speeches. He says the meeting looked very good both in character & attendance & general interest.

He has however been pouring out into Anne's puzzled ear all his grievances about suffering coming between people's mind & Unionism !!! Sometime in four speeches made him full of masculine fears & this he had tho' I crossed him over & on again that you do regard the Union as of chief importance <sup>where he admired the blood</sup> The reports of the meeting were poor, even in the morning Post, but the character of it & the names present were all most important & excellent.

About the subject of your letter - I feel also that something will have to be done. Both Sedg. Hauser & Miss Curry speak to me about Miss B. being made more presentable. If I were in London I would assist on this & I speak very clearly this last time to Miss B. about her appearance.

We must have a clever smart person in Miss Morris's place who will keep Miss Bk told if she remains as I.e.
I also entirely agree with about Miss Bk, retaining up Miss things - all you say is perfectly true. Of course to a large extent "Miss things" enlarge the circle of friends among "the workers" & so helps our cause in indirect ways.
But she is a helpless person in "drawing lines" & cannot keep shape so to speak.
There is great value in her of course, & the absence of all petty mindedness

know a multitude of the things. I always feel in my intercourse with Mrs. Redmond of I. U. Con<sup>ty</sup> that she is essentially a narrow & small minded person. And the Irish question with its urgent seriousness for Ireland & for her friends there, would have brought her into political work.
To capture that spirit is indeed a bold idea!! Would that it were possible. And the destruction of Home Rule & Redston would render this possible. With such things be.
I will have all in mind

& by accident we must take we can do something.
I will indeed do what I can to make things better. I feel quite sure must be part that you have not an office or job.
with whom you can be interested at ease & interested.
Of course you are always there to feel & to be troubled.

About Anne Helen. She gives up troubling my mind for I have met so many things that make me feel it is for me to act.
Mrs. Lawrence came to me in London & it seems a Helen parents are their chief political liberal workers at Burying & evidently they are the people to help help Anne.

Miss Scrope I have also seen about the case & she has promised to make further enquiry at Burying.
She also knew of the girl's surrender & she felt very strongly that help should have been given earlier & the girl treated as an elementary school mistress.
It seems there is a great lack of their school masters Mr. Curry says a school ought to have a years training & be period with a few months training school. If

Miss Eeroys (whose father was a fair trade man)

will help me at Berkeley L. regarding something I will still stick to this case. She tells me if anything practical can be done there are plenty of people at Berkeley L. help.

I write in great haste - but I wanted to have told you a variety of things
"collected" on this curious matter.

Yours
W. M.

I could not get time to see Miss P. old. many thanks for information
