

Dear Sir

140

AL/2121

I have too much reliance on your goodness to make any apology for the liberty I take in introducing to you the son of Dr Adair's Crawford, who after spending the winter at Edinburgh, is now setting out for Warwick-shire on a visit to his mother. The short time he stays at Manchester will be rendered interesting by a personal hint the pleasure of your acquaintance: I therefore hope he may have the good fortune to find you at home: and trust he may be able to transmit me a favourable account of your health and that of all your family.

The haste in which I am obliged to write will not permit me to add more than that I am joined by my sister in every kind wish and affectionate remembrance to Mrs Henry and the rest of our good friends - adieu dear Sir and believe me with unfeigned esteem - your faithful of obed^t serv^t
