Temperance and the War.

The question of temperance reform has never been taken so seriously as at this moment. There are some who desire to narrow down the problem to the immediate need for sobriety in war work. This necessity may have given rise to the controversy, but assuredly the question cannot end there. To allow it to do so would be disastrously to miscalculate the magnitude of the present need. The war gives rise to many grave perplexities besides the supply of ammunition. The question of infant mortality is a war question of the first importance, and we know from the reports of the Medical Officer of Health to the Local Government Board that it is closely bound up with the question of drink. That the temperance problem is to be faced and the cost of reform defrayed by the nation as a whole, not by any one section of it, gives the surest ground for hoping that reform will be so thorough and broadly based as vitally to affect the racial problems which immediately confront us.

Votes and the Double Standard.

Much genuine bewilderment was expressed a short time ago, when we entered a protest against special temperance legislation for women. "How odd," said even our tried friends; "surely you don't want women to get drunk!" The justice of the double standard was assumed. To-day, the working-man is accused, exactly as the women were, of endangering high national interests, by excessive drinking. But observe. He is enfranchised; and there is practically no talk of special legislation to meet his case. If he abstains, his wife will certainly abstain, too; if the public-houses close, the clubs will follow suit. The King and Lord Kitchener, with all their households, are leading the way, and parts of our Overseas Dominions are already hastening to fall into line! The justice of the single standard is assumed. This is magnificent, and Suffragists will not fail to rejoice; neither will they fail to draw the moral.

Women and War Service.

We learn with the utmost satisfaction that the Women's Conference with the Board of Trade desired by the National Union, as mentioned in our last issue, is to be held on Monday, April 12th, at 3.30 p.m., at Whitehall Gardens. Mr. Runciman invites the N.U.W.S.S. to send "not more than two representatives" to attend the Conference. On Saturday last the total number of applications received from women for war work was estimated at about 33,000.

Equal Pay for Equal Work.

The business of filling up the gaps in the ranks of labour by extending the employment of women is steadily increasing. A notable instance is the putting of women to the machinery by which the tins of Army rations and jam are hermetically soldered down. So far, this work has been exclusively done by men, but owing to a shortage of male labour to deal with the immediate pressure of work, women are now employed. We are glad to note that the men insist that the full trade union wage shall be paid to any woman employed, and accordingly these new workers are earning nearly $\pounds 2$ a week.

Woman and the Motor Van.

We learn that the National Motor Cab Co. now employ nearly thirty women, who are already making a success of driving motor vans about the London streets. They are paid 4s. a day when in the garage, and 5s. a day when out with the van. The driving of taxi-cabs, however, is still forbidden, and no woman can obtain a license in London. That this prohibition is based rather on prejudice than reason, is proved by the useful work of the Parisian "Chauffeuse," who is taking the place of her man at the front, and driving the car which is often his private property. She is successfully at work also on the trams and underground railways of Paris.

Women and "Economic Conscription."

About three hundred representatives of the National Amalgamated Union of Shop-Assistants assembled at Manchester on Sunday for their annual Conference. In the Presidential address a strong protest was made against a threatened "influx of cheap labour, coupled with a most invidious form of economic conscription in the shape of a suggested replacement of ablebodied male labour in the shops by female labour, a replacement which the union was asked by authority to forward by every means in its power." It is evident that only the strict application of the principle of equal pay for equal work can meet this difficulty, and, in any case, the practice of dismissing men of military age in order to force them to enlist is a form of tyranny against which we cannot too indignantly protest.

Sweated Shop Assistants.

But when the President of the Union goes on to condemn women's labour in shops on the ground of its unhealthiness, we are not deeply impressed. The conditions of women shop assistants cannot be too carefully safeguarded, but this masculine concern for the health of women competitors is too familiar a piece of bluff to be taken very seriously. We much regret that the meeting, while passing an emergency resolution to insist

WOMEN FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.

APRIL 0, 1015.

The following letter has been sent to the Press :---

SIR,—In the fourth report of the Royal Commission on the Civil Service, issued in April, 1914, some important recommendations were made in favour of employing women more largely in various branches of the Service. The recommendations of the majority definitely stated that the Service. The recommendations of the majority definitely stated that the principle governing the employment of women should be to secure the advantage of the services of women wherever those services would best promote the public interest. It was also recommended that in addition to extending the work for female typists, women should be eligible for posts in museums and libraries, and for appointments in particular administrative positions in certain departments. With regard especially to the Inspectorates of the Departments of Education, Local Government, and Prisons, the Commission pointed out that the present properties of to the Inspectorates of the Departments of Education, Local Government, and Prisons, the Commission pointed out that the present proportion of female to male officials indicated an inadequate appreciation of the services which women are able to render. It was therefore recommended that an enquiry should be held by the Treasury to ascertain the clerical, inspectoral, and administrative positions which should be filled by women, and the salaries they should receive. The exclusion of women from many posts in the public services was the subject of serious and continued protest long before the outbreak of war. Since that date the Government Departments have been largely depleted of their male staff and there is consequently severe pressure on the men who are left. The Commissioners pointed out clearly that the depleted of their male staft and there is consequently severe pressure on the men who are left. The Commissioners pointed out clearly that the employment of female clerks had proved successful in the Post Office and that the Heads of other Departments had also spoken with approval of the work of women. In the General Post Office nearly 3,000 women clerks were employed—and only about 500 in the rest of the public service. On the ground of efficiency and of the best interests of the public, there seems not the slightest reason why the recommendations of the Commissioners for the extension of openings to women should not be put into immediate not the slightest reason why the recommendations of the Commissioners for the extension of openings to women should not be put into immediate effect. Moreover, when we remember the serious distress which has been experienced by professional women, whose means of livelihood have been suspended during the present crisis, it is obvious that their claims are particularly cogent at the moment. The recommendations of the Commissioners for the further extension of work to women in the Civil Service were made in April of last year : since then, months of suffering and distress have been experienced by the wage-earning women of the country. Women desire work and an open market for their services, but unfortunately many are forced by the circumstances arising from the war to demand relief, and even in this circumstances arising from the war to demand relief, and even in this direction, the steps taken to relieve the needs of the professional women in Great Britain have been palpably inadequate and unsatisfactory. In view of the present shortage of male labour and of the serious amount of unemployment amongst women, we urge that another and determined effort shall be made to ensure that the recommendations of the majority of the Commissioners in respect of enlarging the scope of work for women in the Civil Service shall be put into effect without further delay – Vours truly

ANOTHER WOMEN'S HOSPITAL UNIT FOR SERBIA.

On Saturday last part of the Field Hospital Unit of the Women's Imperial Service League, set out, together with the British Farmers' Fever Unit, for Serbia. The Unit of the W.I.S.L., organised by Mrs. St. Clair Stobart, consists of seven women surgeons and doctors, eighteen nurses, sixteen women orderlies, and six men orderlies. Nineteen of its members started from Euston on Saturday last to embark with the Fever Unit in the Admiralty Transport Saidieh at Liverpool, and the emainder will either travel via Marseilles or be taken direct by Sir Thomas Lipton. Though primarily a surgical Unit, it is prepared, if necessary, to deal with fever. It is taking out tents in order to be independent of houses that are insanitary and full of typhus germs. The doctors of the Unit are Miss Helen B. Hanson, Miss Isobel Tate, Mrs. King-May Atkinson, Miss E. Maud Marsden, Miss Beatrice Coxon, Miss Catherine Payne, and Miss Isabel King-May.

The Fever Unit, which is to occupy buildings set apart for its use by the Serbian Government, is under Dr. L. Fabian Hirst, at one time senior bacteriologist in Ceylon, and has three other doctors and a large staff of nurses and orderlies.

BELGIAN HONOURS FOR AN ENGLISHWOMAN.

Miss Beatrice Dormer Maunder, Directress of the Anglo-Belgian Hospital at Rouen, has been presented with the Cross of Chevalier of the Order of Leopold in recognition of valuable services rendered to the Belgian people, the presentation being made in the name of the Belgian Government by General Selliers de Moranville. At the outbreak of war Miss Maunder started a home at Ostend for the relief of distressed Belgians, and later on devoted herself to nursing wounded Belgian soldiers, establishing a hospital in the Kursaal. On the advance of the Germans, the hospital had to be abandoned, and Miss Maunder took refuge at Dunkirk. A little later, at the request of General de Selliers, she undertook the establishment of a hospital for Belgian soldiers at Rouen, which has done excellent work.

FOR LASTING PEACE.

APRIL 9, 1915.

The women of many nations are showing themselves greatly sympathy with the International Women's Congress, to be held at The Hague on April 28th, 29th, and 30th. At a meeting held at Caxton Hall on March 31st, Miss Maude Royden said hat Great Britain and Ireland were sending over one hundred vomen, while a considerable number would be present from Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Belgium.

Miss Royden explained that at the Congress discussion yould take place, not on the war, but on the peace settlement fter the war, with the object of finding means to prevent the ettling of disputes in the future by the terribly wasteful method f war. People had said that the idea of holding the Congress was impossible, and urged them to wait till the war vas over ; but it would be far more difficult to meet and discuss a friendly spirit when one or other side had been defeated. Vomen, throughout the awful suffering of the war, had still een conscious of their sisterhood, and through that of their olidarity. She believed that, underneath the fury of war, the people were friendly. There had been a great and instant esponse to the call of the Dutch women for this meeting at The lague, which was the traditional centre of efforts for contructive peace. It was rather an extraordinary fact, however, hat while these vast areas throughout Europe were being occuied by armies, there was no room in the Peace Palace at The lague large enough to take in the women who were going to his Congress in the interests of peace.

When hostilities broke out she had heard that this war was o end war, and that idea had comforted her; but on referring o history, she discovered that every war that had taken place ad been undertaken to end war, and no war had achieved this bject. It did not follow that simply because peace was esired it could be made permanent. When fighting was over, permanent peace was to be secured it would be through the forts of those who, unable to go to the trenches, were doing he intellectual fighting at home, and women must show their letermination to do their best by hard thinking and by their ctions, and so make effectual the efforts which the men are naking in the trenches.

Miss Royden concluded by stating that at the preliminary neeting at Amsterdam, it was the German women who pressed that Miss Chrystal Macmillan should take the chair at the Congress, and when the British present suggested that it would fairer to have a chairman belonging to a neutral country, he Germans declined to admit the objection, saying that they eferred to have Miss Macmillan. If the spirit of conciliation id friendliness were to be the keynote of a Congress held uring a war, it would be a unique experience for the heart and und, and each member would return with a fresh mission of oodwill and hope.

Mrs. Barton (President of the Women's Co-operative Guild) poke of the newly awakened sense of responsibility and realisaon of suffering which the labouring woman is for the first time eginning to express in relation to the war. Even the consciousess of the child, she said, was different on these points from hat it would have been fifty years ago. She described how the tle child of a working woman had uttered two words which her meant the dividing point of centuries and of hope for future. "Poor soldiers," it had murmured as two Tommies tered an omnibus. There was no consciousness of military ory in the child's remark, only pity, and the passengers were eply touched. But did not this child represent the mind of the cople who did not love war? That child was reflecting, knowingly, the spirit of the deep instinct of motherhood hich was a passion of the working women of to-day. That stinct was producing the capacity for co-operation, and that ain was leading to the conception of internationalism. The prking woman was asking : what was science doing to promote ppiness? What were the leaders doing whom they were ght to respect? It was true that the working woman realised at home science was fighting against disease, she realised hat the ravages of consumption means, but was science to be ed for preserving life, and afterwards for slaughtering the st in the land? She did not believe in the power of the olitical machine alone to secure a permanent peace. She had ore faith in the voice of the people, and women must be ready give the lead.

Another meeting, for the same purpose, will be held on hursday, April 15th, at 3 p.m., at Morley Hall, 26, George treet, Hanover Square, and will be addressed by Miss A. Maude Royden and Miss Picton-Turbevill. Admission will be free.

upon the full minimum wage for men, rejected an addendum fixing the same wage for women. It was argued that the rank and file of women had made no demand for such rates. This is an ancient argument against the rights of the sweated worker, and the women's lack of spirit is perhaps accounted for when we learn that over 1,000 women members of the Union receive less than 12s. a week.

Women Teachers' Demand.

We are glad to note the protest made by the National Federation of Women Teachers on Saturday against inequality of pay-ment between the sexes. Miss Dix informed the meeting that she came from a city where women worked by the side of men preparing munitions of war; but they did not pay those women the same as they paid the men. A resolution was passed urging the Government to insist upon equal payment for the women who fill the places of men.

The Nation as a Whole.

It is noteworthy that at least three public men (apart from the I.L.P. Conference) have recently been urging that now is the appointed time to reflect upon the terms of a future peace settlement. Lord Milner believes that this should be the work of statesmen; Dr. Lyttelton urges it upon thinking people; Mr. Arnold Bennett regards it as the bounden duty of democracy, and his words (in the Daily News of April 1st) are not without interest to Suffragists : " For myself I have no doubt that the sagacity of the nation as a whole would be greater than the sagacity of the Government, but even if it were not, the right of the nation to govern itself in the gravest hour of its career remains unchallengeable." Whatever their opinion as to the best moment for discussing the basis of peace, Suffragists will agree in wanting to know by what possible means " the nation as a whole " can apply its sagacity to public affairs until " the nation as a whole " is enfranchised.

War Prisoners in Germany.

The British Emergency Committee has published a second report. It is satisfactory to know that it has first-hand evidence of good work done by the German Committee for helping foreigners in distress, and that Pastor Siegmund-Schultz, the leading member of the Committee, has permission to pay frequent visits to the detention camp at Ruhleben, near Berlin, where about 4,500 British civilians are confined. He is free to converse with the prisoners as he chooses, and can make representations on their behalf, and report to their relatives. Whether as a result of this influence or for some other reason, great improvements in the Ruhleben camps are now reported to the Foreign Office. These reforms are in respect of food, money allowance, medical attention, and sanitary arrangements.

War and Free Speech.

One detrimental effect of war, though probably less marked in Great Britain than in any other belligerent country, is the grave danger to which the rights of free speech are exposed. In our last issue we noted this effect in Germany and France; and now an instance occurs at home of a deliberate attempt to suppress the opinions of the Independent Labour Party. Suffragists are not unaccustomed to find halls closed against them, and, irrespective of their views on the war, they will unite in rejoicing that the rights of free speech have, after all, been vindicated at Norwich.

Porters with Limitations.

Travellers on the Great Central Railway will for some time have noticed women at work cleaning carriages. From the ranks of these cleaners, porters have now been chosen, and are already regarded as a success. The Times reports that " one of the most astonished arrivals on Good Friday morning was a young officer with a heavy kit-bag and a quantity of other luggage, who found himself relieved of it by an Amazon with a badge on her arm, who put him, luggage and all, in a taxi-cab before he had time to realise where he was, and in just as busi-ness-like a way, pocketed his tip." "Women have their limitations," remarked a high official to The Times reporter, " but there is plenty of scope for them." This is gratifying. High officials, we need not mention, are without limitations.

NEWS FROM ABROAD.

OVERSEAS DOMINIONS.

Suffragists in this country will be pleased to know that they have the encouragement of women in all parts of the Empire in the work they are doing, and will be grateful for their generous help. The following is the text of the letter received last week by Mrs. Fawcett from the West Australian National Council of Women in response to the appeal sent recently to the women of the Overseas Dominions :-

"DEAR MRS. FAWCETT,-In response to the appeal from the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, asking for help against the distress amongst women and children in England in consequence of the war, the West Australian National Council of Women has much pleasure in sending you the enclosed (\pounds_{33}) . "As desired in the letter signed by yourself, Lady French, and Lady

Balfour, a public appeal was made through The West Australian, our leading daily paper. By the kindness of the Editor a Women's One Shilling Fund was opened, and the enclosed draft is the result. We are sorry that the sum is not ten times as large, but there are so many War Funds to subscribe to, and unfortunately there is a certain amount of distress here owing to a disastrous drought in the farming districts.

"We are delighted to be able to help you in even such a small way in your most laudable efforts, and hope you will accept the enclosed \pounds_{33} with the best wishes of the W. A. National Council of Women."—We are, yours very sincerely,

FRANCE.

The French Deputies of the Department of the Seine have presented a Bill proposing to make motherless children who lose their fathers during the war wards of the nation.

NORWAY.

An important change in the law relating to children born out of wedlock has lately been carried through the Lower and Upper Houses of Parliament. This reform ensures both to illegitimate and legitimate children an equal right of inheritance, and gives to the former a right to the family name of the father as well as to that of the mother. Herr Castberg, in introducing the motion in the Storthing (Lower House), said :--

"It is thirty years since this question first came before the House. Think of the amount of suffering and injustice which has fallen this year upon mothers and children to whom we have neglected our duty. In Norway, 6,000 children are every year born out of wedlock and the percentage of deaths among these children in the first year of life is more than double that of legitimate children."

The new law, he stated, would give to the mother a secure position and would protect the infant, and he did not believe it would weaken the marriage bond or injure family life.

WOMEN'S EDUCATION IN EGYPT.

It is not so long since a Mohammedan man, on being praised because he had had an operation performed on his wife's eyes which enabled her to see once more, replied :-

" It is a worthy action that she should be enabled to look upon her children. It counts with God. To see a blind dog who cannot look upon her puppies is a painful sight. How much more a human being ! For, after all, a woman is a human being.

To-day, the world-wide movement for the education and freedom of women has already made a strong impression on faraway conservative Egypt. Thirteen of the Government schools for the training of teachers have been especially set apart for women students, and now have an attendance of 2,030 girls, with forty-two trained women teachers. In one of these schools there were 138 applications for the thirteen student vacancies; 2.867 village schools had an attendance of 22.002 girls last year.

The old men of Egypt are, as usual, conservative, and in a country where religion teaches that women have no souls, the wonder is not that there is objection to the education of women, but that the barriers of prejudice should have been so successfully broken down. Already the younger men are eager for educated wives; some of them are even sending their young wives to school, or arranging to have them taught at home.

The life of an uneducated harem woman was described by one of them in these words : " I sit on this couch for a time, and when I get tired. I cross over and sit on that one.'

Apparently, it is dawning on the younger men of Mohammedan countries, that an educated wife and helpmate is more interesting and profitable than a woman whose most startling capacity is like that of "Sal," famous in Western song and story as a " blame good sitter."

Ad Vitam.

Some Thoughts on the Attainment of the Ideal in Married Life.

I.

A great change has lately come over the British nation in its attitude to child-life. Problems of parentage and problems of education are coming more and more to the front, and more and more the thoughts of us all are centred on the well-being of the rising generation, as the most important factor in the country's development. For the life of a nation, as of an individual, is a progress-an infinite progress, it may be-from human limitations to divine perfection, and every thought and action, each step in life, is conditioned by something that has gone before. The vitality, the intelligence, the temperament, the total well-being of every child as of every family is conditioned by the character and relationship of the parents, and it follows that if the family life of a nation is the foundation of its character and power, it is on the marriages made in the nation that the whole history of a people depends. All that concerns marriage is, therefore, of entous importance for men as citizens no less than as individuals, and however ambitious a subject this may be for discussion, it is one which each of us must consider, and on which we must form opinions for ourselves, for the sake of our children and of all who come within our sphere of influence. It is not hard to discover what is the ideal in married life.

Poets and philosophers have spoken throughout the centuries with no uncertain voice, and our own experience will tell us what it is that is able to satisfy human nature. In plain, yet perhaps not very explicit English, it is surely to love and be loved in And in two of the most wonderful, truth-telling lines return. ever written-so it seems to me-Tennyson has described for us the beginning and the continuing and the ending of the ideal relationship between the man and the woman who should pass their lives together. In a stanza of " Locksley Hall," he says : "Love took up the harp of life, and smote on all the chords with might, Smote the chord of Self, which, trembling, passed in music out of sight."

Could there be any more perfect expression in words of the idea of wondering self-realisation and joyous self-giving which are the whole essence of human happiness?

The ideal marriage is the love-marriage. That is a truism. But does everyone who uses the word "love" understand what it means? Have they felt it in themselves, and analysed it, and understood the nature and the cause and the effect of this mysterious attraction of two human beings which is sometimes so transitory and fleeting, and sometimes endures till death and beyond? Shall we mar its beauty for ourselves and for others if we try to go beyond the mere feeling and explain it? Does the musician who understands with his mind the rules of harmony and the thoughts which have gone to the building up of a beautiful symphony enjoy less or more than the man who is only conscious of pleasant sounds? To me it seems that the more willing we are to search out our own spirits and understand with our minds the wondrous things of God's law, the fuller and richer to us all does life become and the more, and not the less, of God's glary do we see in the world around.

Thinking then often, and with all my mind, about the meaning of love, it has seemed to me that its nature can be better understood if we describe it with the poets as unity of spirit, or as the force or condition that makes two spirits one. The love that has ever worked and is working now among human beings, making for unity and sympathy and brotherhood, is not other in its nature and effect than the great forces of the Universe that we know as gravity and cohesion. And just as two drops of water will draw quickly together and become one because of their essential likeness to each other, while oil and water will not mix, so two human spirits whose nature is the same will quickly unite. Infinite indeed, and to us unknown, are the happenings in the past which go to make up the personality, or what we might call the spirit of any man, and we cannot always therefore say what it is in one man which accounts for his attraction to another. But the more I think and observe the more certain I am that it is tastes, interests, thoughts, ideals in common, that make for love and friendship, and our differences that keep us apart. In the friendships of children, which vary from year to year and month to month, one sees that the cause of attraction is the interest of the moment-always the supreme thing in a child's life-and it is therefore no wonder that he quickly changes his friends with his interests. As we grow older it is always that part of us which is the deepest and most real which determines our friendships; and the love which lasts till death is the love which has united the innermost self, the soul, with the soul of another.

A man starts with a certain occupation in life. Something in its nature relates it to something that is already in the mind or spirit of the man. In other words, he likes it. As he learns more of it, or as we might say, relates himself more closely t it, his liking deepens to love, and if there is that in his occupatio which is capable of responding to his growth, and in which his growing spirit can express itself, the occupation becomes passion, a part of the man's very life. So, too, with booksonly that book will appeal to us, or as we say, interest us, of which the language or subject or style relates it to something which already forms part of our mental or spiritual equipment To a child the dull book is the book that has no connection with his activities or previous thoughts

Two people meet and are attracted to each other, it may be by something superficial, it may be by reason of some manifest mity in their ideas, it may be by the invisible spirit in each. They find out more common interests, the attraction becomes stronger, and if they are thrown together with so much already akin in their natures that common experiences will act upor them both in the same way and produce similar spiritual growth we may expect that the attraction founded on partial, and in creasing in closer, unity will ripen into the deepest of friendships and mutual love.

In thus considering the meaning of love I have passed from conjugal love to friendship, and again from friendship to the closest spiritual union or love, because I am certain of this, that the nature of the feeling in both cases is one and the same. may differ in degree but not in kind. Between the spiritual union that exists between friends of the same sex, be they man and man or woman and woman, and that spiritual friendship which is the basis of true happiness in married life, there is n difference. In the stanzas of "In Memoriam," in which Tennyso describes his friendship with Hallam, he describes a unity of spirit than which no spiritual love between man and wife could be closer or more complete, more satisfying to the spiritual nature of both. But man is not spirit alone. He is made up of body and spirit together, and that union therefore is most satisfying to his nature in which his whole being can find expression, and so it comes to pass that in married life the love between man and wife finds in the physical union a fuller expression, a means of the uttermost self-giving, and, in the birth that ensues, a purifying and ennobling outlet from selfish and self-centred thought and a further bond of common interest.

There is no question that the tradition of marriage and the laws and customs which we have inherited from our primitive forefathers and more recent ancestors have laid more stress o the physical and less on the spiritual union in marriage. The physical union which has been in the lowest animals an instinct for the purpose of reproduction has ceased to be in spiritual man the chief feature of his marriage bond. Man, as we know him to-day, has a body and physical organs, which, rightl directed, are of service in his dual kingdom ; but man, the huma being, made in the image of God, subordinates the physical t the spiritual and abandons even now in his material existenc anything that is injurious to his spiritual life. Hitherto the physical has dominated our thoughts and we have paid it the omage of fear and subservience. But intelligent love, which has always expressed itself in sacrifice for the sake of the highe good and for the well-being of others-in worship, that is, and service-is revealing to man his spiritual nature. By deeds of love he is learning the doctrine of the God of love, and he know now that there is nothing in his body to fear. As his spiritual consciousness deepens, his fears decrease. He learns the true meaning of faith, and he realises that his body will only express that which his mind commands, that the body is the servant of the spirit and will follow where the spirit leads. From child hood onward, married or single, enlightened men and women are captains of their fate, and our marriage laws and customs must be revised in accordance with our increasing knowledge of progressive human nature, obedient to divine intuition, and freed from the burdens of tradition. In another article I will deal with the question from the educationalist's point of view.

MADAM,—As organising secretary of the National Conference of Women, on April 14th, I should like to point out in reference to the letter from the Darlington Women's Suffrage Society (1) that the confer-ence was called, and an organising committee formed, in response to the invitation embodied in the following resolution : ch, should embark on peace propaganda, and maintains that an anti-ar propaganda at the present moment is particularly liable to be ar propaganda at the present moment is particularly have to be isunderstood, and to bring odium upon a cause "which already ruggles against the prejudices of the world." It is also, he onsiders, impossible to embark on any anti-war campaign without lyocating some definite political action on the part of the Govern-ient, and if propaganda aims at definite action Suffragists would "The Union of Democratic Control, convinced that democracy must be based on the equal citizenship of men and women, invites the co-operation of women."—(Resolution of the General Council of the Union of Democratic Control, February ofth, 1915.) But it is not a Conference of the U.D.C. agree as to the immediate practical steps to be taken to realise ese ideals "beyond, of course, the almost universal determination finish, and win, the present war." He concludes, therefore, that But it is not a Conference of the U.D.C. (2) The Committee carefully worded the circular which was sent to religious, educational, social, industrial, and political organisations so as to ensure a comprehensive body of opinion whilst leaving societies uncommitted—" We shall be glad to know whether your Society, Com-mittee, or Branch would like to send not more than two members to the Conference who are in sympathy with the general tenour of the policy outlined in the resolution." The word "members," not representatives or delegates, was used so that there should be no misunderstanding. In these circumstances it is difficult to understand what the Executive the dangers of disruption in any society which plunges itself into his conflict of opinions must be very great: the danger of misunder-anding is obvious "; while, on the other hand, the influence on eace would be but small since " the world is at war and women In "Problems of the Day," we are reminded that the nation wes to Florence Nightingale not only the reform of nursing, but Il sorts of administrative improvements "which we are now said

The Harper Adams Agricultural College, Newport, Salop, has already ranged for two courses of instruction for women, the first beginning April 7th and ending on April 21st, and the second starting on April and and ending on May 6th. The object of these courses is to give a short tining in those branches of farm work which women can readily underthe instruction including milking, dairy work, the care of stock and ry, potato planting, &c. The day's work consists of about eight beginning at 6 o'clock in the morning. Board and lodgings are Correspondence.

In these circumstances it is difficult to understand what the Executive of the National Union means by "forbidding societies," &c. Surely individual members of the N.U. are free to express their opinions? The Conference is not a Stop-the-war agitation but it is called to "discuss the basis of a permanent peace," a matter of vital importance to all Sufference.

all Suffragists. MURIEL MATTERS.

Hon. Organising Secretary of the Conference

[The Executive Committee has made it perfectly clear that they would not, even if they could, prevent individual members of the N.U. from attending the Conference as individuals.—ED., "C.C."]

MADAM,—The letter from the Darlington Society in your last issue, indicates, I most sorrowfully think, the beginning of a disintegrating process in the National Union. All is not well with a Union whose Societies have to ask their Executive to reconsider its interpretation of a resolution of a vitally important Council meeting. I would ask my fellow-members very carefully to consider the position, and once more to try to realise the antagonism between war and the Women Sufface try to realise the antagonism between war and the Woman Suffrage iffragists stand for the principle that force is not the basis of society. The world has again accepted the appeal to force, and force only. "You see now," the Anti-suffragist may say, "we were right, force is the basis of society: your pretensions are founded, as we always said they were, of society : your pretensions are founded, as we always said they were, on a false assumption." The N.U. at its Council meeting, by refusing to work for the building up of public opinion in favour of possible alternatives to war, acquiesced in the Anti-suffrage position, and must take the consequences to the Suffrage Movement, when the war is over, of the deterioration of that public opinion, which they have refused to try to educate. Upon the N.U., as the largest Suffrage Society, rests a great responsibility. Let us once more think the matter out. I do not believe the majority of the delegates at the Council meeting, still less of the members of Societies, realise in the least what is at stake.

WOMEN AND MUNITIONS OF WAR.

MADAM,-THE COMMON CAUSE of March 26th gives a very interesting MADAM,—ITHE COMMON CAUSE of March 26th gives a very interesting report of the peace meeting at Westminster on March 22nd, and calls attention to the Swiss women's appeal to the women of all nations to work for peace and goodwill. It also contains a notice of the "special response made by women to the demand for labour in the making of war munitions," while the leading article welcomes the Government's tardy recognition of its dependence on women's service in time of war. Does the appeal of the Government include a demand for more women to be employed in the making of war munitions, and does the National Union, which is working so nobly for peace, intend to assist women to respond to that particular appeal?

which is working so nobly for peace, intend to assist women to respond to that particular appeal? These notices, coming all together in one issue of our paper, mark clearly the contending principles upon which most of us base our lives. We deplore the war while we "load the rifle which kills another man." We work with both hands for objects diametrically opposed, and what the right hand accomplishes the left hand destroys. We join peace societies, and do our utmost to cultivate understanding of and sympathy with our enemies, with the object of paving the way for the only sure means of peace; while at the same time we do everything in our power to support the Government in a war which we accept as a war to the death. And this bitter absurdity is held to be inevitable. Most certainly it is, while we persist in acting on the two "conflicting principles" of "love and selfishness."

" love and selfshness." Women have now the grand opportunity of choosing between the higher and lower forms of patriotism, and of abandoning the principle of selfsh-ness for the principle of love. Many thousands of women are already engaged in the making of war munitions, but let Suffragists at least not add to their number. Let us at once endeavour to act logically in this matter and work wholly for peace or wholly for war. We shall, of course, be told that the time is not yet for us to refuse to take part in the war, that we must wait till the war is over. But feeling, as we do, that war is mutder, what possible obligation can compel us at any time to take this particular part in it? The time, indeed, is now or never; and shrappel cartridges must be left to the men who believe in war and to the women who give up their inborn sense of right to the control of those men. those men.

ISABEL ASHBY.

[While welcoming our correspondent's plea for sincerity, we must remind her (1) that the National Union expresses no opinion whatever on the present war; (2) that it makes no appeal for any particular form of labour. We refer to her letter in our leader.]

The N.U.W.S.S. is an association of over 52,000 men and romen who have banded themselves together, under the leadership of Mrs. Henry Fawcett, for the purpose of obtaining the Parliamentary vote for women on the same terms as it is or may be granted to men. At this great national crisis, however, they have for the time suspended their ordinary political activities, in order to put themselves and their Union at the service of those who are organising the relief of distress caused by the war.

Women and Munitions of War.

It is argued by a correspondent that some of us-the National Union and THE COMMON CAUSE in particular-are trying to have it both ways; that we welcome the proposal to organise women for war service, while at the same time we condemn war in general as a crime against humanity.

Now, beyond question, this sudden appeal to the womanhood of the nation to help in making engines of destruction is exercising the minds of many women at this moment. The situation is unprecedented. We are assured on the highest authority that in the present crisis the one supreme necessity is an adequate supply of ammunition. There is an actual shortage of labour, and women are implored to step into the breach. Deep in the hearts of most women is a horror of destruction above all, the destruction of human bodies; yet to large numbers the need of their country appears paramount. What are they to do? The first instinct of a great majority, now as ever, i to respond to the immediate cry for help. A woman will make cartridges with the same zeal, and for exactly the same reason, as she knits socks, in order to help her own particular man at the front. In nine cases out of ten, she has no bloodthirsty desire to hurt anyone else's husband or brother; her whole being is concentrated on helping her own, and just there her vision ends. Of such women there are multitudes, some inside some outside, the National Union. They correspond to the numberless men who are fighting whole-heartedly for their wive and children, and in so doing desolating the homes of their fellow men, without a shadow of compunction. To understand them is to pardon them.

But there are others among us, as our correspondent points out, who hasten to join peace societies, and straightway go off to forge weapons of war. Such tell us, and we readily believ them, that they forge those weapons in order "to shorten th war," while they join peace societies " to prevent war in the future." This attitude is also comprehensible. We ar repeatedly reminded that there are many pacifists in the trenches, most of us have personal knowledge of such ; and accordingly there will be pacifist women in munition factories. If honour i due to these men, equal honour is due to the women.

There remain the little remnant who believe that this war is wrong now. The love they bear their country is of another order, and it is very certain that no amount of organising will drive them to make munitions of war, so their case need not, for a moment detain us.

The fact is that those who are honestly convinced that th making of munitions in this crisis is a supremely necessary ac of patriotism, will make them, and are right in making them the rest most certainly will not, and would be criminal if they The issue of registration forms is no more a cause of bomb-making than the signal to start a boat-race is the cause of the race. Even if the N.U. were working for peace, which it emphatically is not, it might still pursue its registering work with a clear conscience, since it makes no suggestion to wome to undertake any particular form of labour, unless, indeed, it b such peaceful avocations as medicine or agriculture. As a Union it is no more concerned with recruiting than with stopping the war, and has very deliberately refused to take upon itself either of these functions.

But our correspondent goes deeper, and some may be found SUPPORT OUR ADVERTISERS and mention THE COMMON CAUSE when ordering goods.

remembers the epoch of "reform" which came at last in 1902, to agree with her assertion that "most of us base our lives " on contending principles." But is this quite fair? The fact rather when Austria and Russia sketched their programme of European eems to be that we are a large and comprehensive Union, and reconstruction in the Mürzsteg agreement. The reforms were among our members, some base their lives on one principle, and so timid as to be nearly useless, and the state of Macedonia, ravaged now by Greek and Serbian as well as Bulgarian bands, some on another. The woman who makes shrapnel and the was actually worse than before Europe intervened. On the eve woman who desists from making it, each has her own sincere oint of view, and each is equally incomprehensible to the of the Young Turk revolution (1908), Great Britain and Russia were concerting a bolder scheme, and there was a chance of ther; perhaps she will always remain so. There are, of course, hose-and they are probably numerous-whose principles realising something like the only adequate solution-autonomy yould lead them to make bombs, and who nevertheless shrink under a European governor. - Europe, however, decided, quite rom making them, as there are still, perhaps, a few men left properly, to give the Young Turks a chance, and the Bulgarians ounging at home whose militarist opinions should have taken of Macedonia rallied whole-heartedly to the Committee of Union hem to the front. Such people do base their lives on the conand Progress, and even marched as volunteers under its ending principles of patriotism, as they conceive it, and selfstandard. For about a year there was a vast improvement, but ndulgence. The fundamental question, however, remains: Can non-At this critical moment the Concert failed again. It ought to have intervened to enforce at last self-government for Macedonia. It hesitated ; it lectured the Balkan States ; it vowed that fficial answer; and the answer of individual members seems to if they went to war, they would be allowed to win no territory. e that many among them are of opinion that war can end war. But it failed to do what alone would have kept them quiet ; it hese may-many of them do-conceive of the Suffrage movewould not act itself. The seeds of disunion were already alive among only attainable, here and now, by a final appeal to physical them, however. Greeks and Bulgars raced each other to seize orce itself. Such will naturally devote themselves to working Salonica, and the Greeks won by a few hours. In all the territory which they occupied, the Greeks and Serbs gradually began to impose their nationality on the Bulgarian inhabitants. By the spring of 1913 it was probable that a second war would be fought between the Allies for the division of the spoil. Once more the abour Conference, even those, if any, who would insist on the Concert had its chance, and once more it failed. The reason is fairly clear. The Balkan League, or at least the Serbo-Bulgarian Il are contributing to the spirit of militarism. Those who dis-Alliance, was a combination directed not merely against Turkey, but also against Austria. To this question the National Union gives no nent as essentially an appeal from physical force to " public directly for "the war that will end war." The details are rong done in Europe in modern times which is not in some set out in the report of the international Carnegie Commission, of egree a contributory cause to this war. We all realise the part which I was a member. To-day we all prefer to remember how hat Alsace and Bosnia have played; historians remind us of gallantly the Serbs have fought against terrible odds, and the oland ; I am disposed for my part to lay stress on Morocco, and ghastly sufferings which they are enduring, even in the hour of ehind Morocco there is Egypt. They suppressed the Bulgarian Church, expelled egan in a struggle for the mastery of the Near East, and the its bishops and teachers, appropriated its churches and schools, and forced the village notables under pain of exile to declare vot of all Balkan questions is Macedonia. How far back shall we go? Stafford Central Counties Federation.

e annual general counter reteration. h 23rd at the Guild Hall, Co-operative lings, Stafford. Miss G. J. McCrea, who led said that though, owing to the war, they laid aside propaganda work, they would me more energetic after the war than they been before become more energetic after the war than they had been before.

Mis M. MacKenzie, Hon. Secretary, presented the annual report, and told of the organising work done by Mrs. Streeter last spring, the preparation for a dramatic entertainment, and also for a 'public meeting prior to the war. The Stafford Society had contributed 28 (irrespective of another private donation of a guinea), to the Scottish Women's Hospital Fund, the Central Counties Federation.
Mrs. F. G. Mott, Hon. Treasurer, gave a guinea), to the Scottish Women's Hospital Fund, the Central Counties Federation.
Mrs. F. G. Mott, Hon. Treasurer, gave a report of the financial position of the Society, the credit balance being ras. 7d.
Mrs. R. G. Patterson, Hon. Press Secretary, and attended most of the Federation Committee the Council meetings as delegate. At the last Council meeting, her fellow delegate had the Miss M. Sheepshanks, who at great inconvenience to herself (through indisposition) had most kindly kept her appointment.
Dr. Oliver Elgood Turner, Hon. Treasurer to the Council meetings in the service weet and the National Union during the war.

THE COMMON CAUSE.

She advised the Stafford Society to assist in establishing "Infant Care Societies," in the town, and spoke of the great mortality amongst children under one -year of age. She also thought that the formation of a Soldiers' Club at the new camp on Cannock Chase would be most useful most useful.

Bristol East Branch.

The annual meeting of the above Society was held in the St. Laurence Parish Hall on March 19th. Miss C. Tothill was re-elected President, 19th. Miss C. Tothill was re-elected President, Miss N. Hancock Treasurer, Miss M. Pride will again act as Hon. Sec. Reports were read by both Secretary and Treasurer, showing a good year's work. After the business meeting a public meeting was held. Mr. A. Fenner Brockway was the principal speaker, supported by Coun-cillor Ayles, Parliamentary Candidate for East Bristol, and Mrs. A. Townley. Miss Geraldine Cooke presided in place of Miss Tothil, who was suffering from influenza. Miss Tothill sent a suffering from influenza. Miss Tothil, who was suffering from influenza. Miss Tothill sent a letter, which was read to the meeting by Miss Cooke. Mr. Brockway gave an inspiring and helpful address, which was enjoyed and appre-cited by a large audience of lasting international peace." A collection was taken to defray expenses, the amount collected being $\pounds I$ 14s. 4d.

Pontypool and District. On the outbreak of the war the Pontypool Society decided to do something to help the poor nursing mothers of the district. A meeting of the Society was called, and a scheme of relief was drawn up. Members were appointed in each district to visit the women and find out deserving cases. A pint of milk a day is allowed to each mother for three months, and also packets of oats, bovril, kc., at the discretion of the visitors. Most of the women are wives of soldiers at the front, but the Society does not limit itself to such cases. The money to carry out this work is raised by weekly subscriptions from the members, and valuable help has also been given by people outside the Society from the members, and valuable help has also been given by people outside the Society. Altogether, we have helped forty women, and the mothers have not only appreciably improved in health, but are also extremely grateful for any assistance. The Society is proud of having among the babies one case of twins and one of triplets, all of whom are flourishing ! Every month the mothers and babies are entertained to tea, when the members of the Society—many of them in fear and trembling !— take charge of the babies, while their mothers enjoy a quiet talk. A gramaphone and music of all kinds are provided for their entertainment.

At first it was intended for their entertainment. At first it was intended only to carry on this work during the winter, but it has been such a success, and has supplied such a real need in the district, that it has been decided to continue as long as possible

Items of Interest.

Darlington Elects a Woman Councillor. Miss Clara Lucas, who was last week elected Councillor of the County Borough of Darlington is Chairman of the Darlington Society fo is Chairman of the Darlington Society for Women's Suffrage. She is also a member of a sub-committee appointed by the War Relief Com-mittee, having charge of a maternity centre, which is doing good work in the town for mothers and children. This, she hopes, will be taken over by the Council and largely developed by them. As a member of the old School Board, Miss Lucas did good work in connection with education, and she was on the new education anthority until 1010. authority until 1010.

Women Head Poll at Abingdon.

At the election for Abingdon Poor Law Guardians, held on March 20th two women were first and second on the list of successful candi-dates. This is very satisfactory, as neither of these women, or any others, had offered their services on any previous occasion.

Women in Agriculture.

At a meeting of the Agriculturists' and Horti-culturists' Advisory Committee of the Lyceum Club, the following resolution was passed unanimously :-

"That the Agriculturists' and Horti-culturists' Advisory Committee of the Lyceum Club is strongly of opinion that women's interests should have adequate representation on any body appointed by the Government to deal with land work."

International Conference of Socialists and Labour Women.

Labour Women. Twenty-eight delegates, representing Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, Poland, Holland, Switzerland, and Italy, attended an international conference of Socialists and Labour women held in Berne on March 26th-28th; the Socialist women of Belgium and Austria found it imposible to be present, owing to the difficulties of travelling. The British section of the Women's International Council of Socialists and Labour Organisation sent four delegates—Dr. Marion Phillips, Miss Mary Longman, Mrs. Salter, and Miss Margaret Bondfield—and the Council reports that the delegates met in friendly sympathy, and the cordial relations between the representatives of Great Britain and Germany were especially marked.

After the general business, the Conference passed a resolution of sympathy with the Inter-national Congress of Women, to be held at The Hague at the end of this month.

Irishwomen's Suffrage Federation.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Irishwomen's Suffrage Federation, held in Dublin, on March 29th, the following resolutions were pas

'That the Irishwomen's Suffrage Federation, realising the importance of the appeal to women for national war service, would remind the Government that Women's position has not yet been regularised by the State, as until they have been admitted to citizenship their concentrative for doing national service their opportunities for doing national service must inevitably suffer, while their industrial position cannot be safeguarded as it ought to be in the best interests of women and the nation nation. "That the Irishwomen's Suffrage Federa-tion heartily respond to the Government's call for help, and they are glad to have this opportunity of being of service to their country, and they desire that every Society in the Federation should work for this end."

They hope, with representatives of other Societies, to form an Advisory Committee, which will be able and willing to give advice as to wages and conditions of work.

The Nation's Call to Women.

A public meeting organised by the New Constitutional Society for Women's Suffrage will be held at the Knightsbridge Palace Hotel on Tuesday, April 13th, at 3 o'clock. Lord Robert Cecil will speak on "The Nation's Call to Women."
